especially admired the arrangement of the show window, an artist's creation. In the window the corsage bouquets with their background of ostrich feathers and their dainty baskets with ostrich feathers won praise. The side doors in the delivery car met instant approval. The advantage in getting a special piece in and out and in finding certain packages without disturbing all, should occasion require, is obvious. The metal lettered panel screwed on the side of the delivery car was considered distinctive and economical—distinctive because it is unusual to have the name so strikingly displayed; economical because the panel can be unscrewed and taken off when the car requires painting.

Novelties.

The idea of today is that novelties are adapted to the dull, rather than to the busy season. They should be displayed in the window at a time when business will not come unaided. Sydney H. Bayersdorfer notices that his vamp dolls are far more popular now than they were before Easter.

Seeds.

There is a curious condition in the local seed market today. Possibly it is not merely local in its scope. The demand for flower seeds of all kinds has increased encouragingly, while the demand for vegetable seeds has fallen off. Just why the demand for vegetable seeds has fallen off, nobody seems to know. Perhaps Edward Reid hits the nail fairly on the head when he suggests that now that truck raising has ceased to be a duty people have dropped it.

BOSTON.

The Market.

It is only to be expected that flowers would sell lower in the middle of April than a month earlier and that they would drag more at this time. Conditions are much as they were a year ago at this time and no worse than in former years. In fact, when general business conditions are considered, flower sellers have abundant cause to be thankful, but with rare exceptions those interviewed are full of pessimism and class business as the worst ever. Yet, April business has proved encouraging, all dismal croakers to the contrary.

Roses are doing well and there is no great surplus. For American Beauty the demand is light. Fancy Hadley, which is really far superior to American Beauty in size, fragrance and other qualities, sells well. This is the red rose par excellence, and it is a great pity that it does not bloom a little more thing, a little weaker. Sweet peas of good quality sell well. There is less of a glut of these flowers than there was before Easter. Daffodils are holding up well. Outdoor daffodils are now in season. Only a limited number of tulips are seen. Freesia has disappeared.

Callas are abundant and much lower in price; the same holds true of lilies. Antirrhinums continue slow sellers. This is strange, as they are most satisfactory keepers, have pleasing colors and are most decorative. Calendulas are low and bachelor's buttons continue on the down grade. Pansies are in heavy supply, with prices low. Good yellow marguerites sell well and bring as much as fancy carnations.

Gardenias are abundant and cheaper. Cattleyas are now mainly Mossia. A limited number of other orchids are seen, mainly cypripediums.

Boston Florists' Association.

A monthly meeting of this association was held at the City Club April 12. President B. F. Letson presided over a moderate attendance.

The principal business of the evening was a splendid address by R. H. Newcomb, of the transportation department of the Boston & Maine railroad. The sufferings of the railroads under government control, labor and its continued demand for shorter hours, with greater inefficiency and more pay, and the many other tribulations of the country's steam carriers made florists feel that they were not the most afflicted class after all, and they had abundant reason to be grateful that they had no labor boards to fight. Mr. Newcomb's address proved timely and illuminating, and he received a hearty vote of thanks at its close.

tural hall April 26, one week later than usual. B. F. Letson, of Carbone's, will lecture on "Flower Arrangement" and will give numerous practical demonstrations. Members are asked to contribute freely of seasonable flowers, in order that an abundance of suitable material may be available.

There was an excellent attendance at the Arnold Arboretum April 16, when Prof. J. G. Jack conducted the first of his Saturday classes. There are many interesting and attractive shrubs already in bloom there. Japanese cherries, plums, forsythias, spiræas, loniceras and rhododendrons are among those seen and commented on.

Serious damage was done to the American elms in Cambridge and other sections by the severe frost of April 11. A great proportion of the buds were blackened and have since fallen off. We are having a most erratic season and a sharp drop in temperature April 17 undoubtedly caused additional damage.

A unique exhibition of greenhouse-forced New England orchids will be held at Horticultural hall April 23 and 24, from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. each day. Over twenty-five varieties will be displayed somewhat as they grow in their native surroundings. They are being shown by A. C. Burrage to give the general public a better idea of the beauty of our native orchids and arouse a greater interest in the preservation and perpetuation of these and other wild flowers.

Visitors last week included John C. Latham, representing John Scheepers & Co., New York.

JOSEPH ZISKA & SONS, 169-175 North Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

deners' and Florists' Club, has been confined to his home for a few days with blood poisoning in his right leg.

Thomas Roland is sending in some fine Cattleya Mossiae and Schroederæ. At Revere, he is getting a fine cut of roses, among which are some superb Hadley, Ward, Columbia and Premier.

A. E. E. Koch, of Nobscot, one of our local marguerite kings, has large shipments of fine flowers, including Mrs. Sander as well as the yellow variety. W. N. C.

A PASSER'S PICK-UPS.

It is not unusual to find the entire force busy at the store of Hembreiker & Cole, Springfield, Ill., but April 12 the cause for the rush was unusual. In addition to a number of out-of-town orders for funeral work, the decoration for the assembly at the governor's mansion required a great deal of work. This work was in charge of Miss Meredith, who was assisted by the staff of decorators. The main part of the decorations consisted of ferns, palms and numerous large baskets of Premier roses. The affair was one of the most elaborate of the season and gave the decorators an opportunity to display their skill, which they did to their credit.

In the seed department of the Jansen Seed & Floral Co., Springfield, Ill., the force is kept busy filling reorders for seeds. The frost on Easter caught a good many of the customers who had planted earlier. Canaries are also a feature in this store.

"Hello!" is the greeting one hears when entering the store of Daut Bros., in Decatur, Ill. Upon investigation one finds "Mac" is greeting him. Mac is a beautiful macaw with almost human intelligence, an important part of the store's force and the pet of many patrons. Mrs. Philip Daut, and the Misses McGinty, Logan and Hill, were in St. Louis over the week-end. The new Handy-Dandy grocery opened last week and gave carnations as souvenirs. Several thousand were furnished by Daut Bros.

Mr. Simmen, of Petersen's, divides his time between Decatur and La Salle, Ill. He was in La Salle last week.

M. Z. Kellogg, of Decatur, Ill., has been busy with the usual run of business.

A visit to the greenhouses of A. Washburn & Sons, Bloomington, Ill., was a pleasant and educational trip. Both of their places, Bloomington and Normal, are in fine shape. George der for funeral work to go out of town kept the force hustling all day April 15.

A new fish pond of tile with a regular fountain is in the window of Coles' Flower Shop, Kokomo, Ind. It is the object of much admiration. Mr. Coffey, who is the guiding hand here now, built this himself and arranged it so as to enable him to cover it over and have the use of the window. Goldfish sell well in this store.

At the Rose Farm of W. W. Coles, Kokomo, Ind., one is rewarded for the trip by finding the stock in such elegant condition. Particularly are the Russell roses a delight. They are just coming into crop and should make a fine crop for Mothers' day. Ophelia also is doing well. A bed of the white carnation, Matchless, is a joy to W. W. Coles, as it looks like a money-maker for Mothers' day and Memorial day.

Harry Newby, of J. A. Newby Co., Logansport, Ind., surprised his many friends by slipping away and getting married a few months ago. He is just letting the news out now. Best wishes, Harry. Seldom does one find a place so well equipped in stock as is the J. A. Newby Co. Here is found a great variety of well grown stock and seldom is there anything missing to fill all orders with home-grown flowers. As one steps from the office into the greenhouses, he beholds a fine lot of geraniums in pots from 2½-inch to 5-inch. There are begonias, primroses and the usual run of bedding plants. A large bed of schizanthus and a block of tall cinerarias are used for cut flowers. Pansies in wonderful shades and huge sizes, carnations, roses, daisies, snapdragons and sweet peas are all here and fine. The business is old and established and practically all retail, and comes from many miles around.

Pershing's Flower Shop, 409 Market street, opened in Logansport, Ind., December 3. Mr. Pershing is gratified with the results attained in the few months. Mr. Pershing was in the seed

The Market.

Florists situated near cemeteries are busy now with their early grave decorations. Pansy plants compose a large part of these decorations. On Memorial day these will give way to potted geraniums, decorative plants, etc. Baskets of flowering pansy plants are coming into the market in considerable quantities at present and the volume is increasing daily. There continue to be increased sales in seeds of all kinds, as well as hardy rose bushes, potted roses and shrubs of all kinds.

Various Notes.

Harry I. Stein, of the Public Service Terminal Flower Shop, reports business excellent. He is constantly increasing his floor space on the main concourse.

The Lackawanna railroad has been given a verdict in the Supreme court for the second time in the $5,000 damage suit brought against it by W. A. Manda, South Orange. The case has been in court three times in the last two years. The first time the jury disagreed. The basis of the suit was that shrubbery and trees had been destroyed by fire caused by sparks from an engine of the railroad, April 1, 1917. The defense was that every statutory precaution to prevent fires from engine sparks had been observed. The second trial was obtained automatically from the disagreement of the jury in the first case. The third trial was granted on appeal from alleged errors in Judge Mountain's charge to the jury.

The Market.

Most of the florists found business dull the early part of last week, but Thursday, April 14, business began to improve and by Saturday stock was scarce. The dark, rainy weather from Monday to Thursday helped shorten the cut flower market. The rose crop has been lighter each day since Easter and it will be some time before the market will see much stock of good quality in roses. Many of the retailers

In carnations, Matchless has been exceedingly good all winter, but Ward is scarce. Some blooms of Rosalia are coming in and are in popular demand. In roses, Ophelia is in big crop now.

Nearly all of the growers are going more heavily on Premier and Ophelia for next year and are trying out Pilgrim, Crusader and Dunlop. There is an extra heavy cut of calla and Easter lilies on the market. Extra fine formosum lilies are to be had. Callas Mignonette is getting short. Extra fine snapdragons are to be had. A few growers are still growing some fine jonquils. In the novelties one may get lupines, hunnemannias, marguerites and stocks. Some fine hydrangeas and pelargoniums are to be had. Valley is scarce.

shops in Omaha will close on Sundays, starting the first Sunday in July. The publicity committee is preparing the notices to advise the public of the Sunday closing. The committee introduced a publicity campaign to be carried on in the local papers and met with hearty support. The election of officers will be held May 12. Some discussion was made on the prices to be charged on spring plants and it was finally agreed that the prices will remain the same as in 1920.

AMERICAN ORCHID SOCIETY.

The American Orchid Society was brought into being April 7, 1921, at Boston, as related fully in last week's issue of The Review. There are a few points in its constitution and by-laws which will probably be of interest to many.

The American Orchid Society is "for the purpose of aiding in every possible way the importation and improvement by cultivation and hybridization of exotic orchids; the preservation and perpetuation of native orchids; the dissemination by exhibitions, lectures and publications of useful knowledge concerning orchids, and the extension of knowledge, production, use and love of these beautiful flowers."

"The society shall consist of all those persons, whether male or female, whether citizens of the United States or foreign countries, who have shown special interest in orchids by work, studies, writings or otherwise, who shall have been elected to membership by a majority vote of the trustees, who shall have paid their annual dues and who shall have signed these articles of association. There shall be two classes of members, life members and regular members.

"The annual dues for regular members shall be $5 per year, payable on the first of January. Life members shall pay a single fee of $100 and shall be exempt from the payment of all dues thereafter. No entrance fee will be required to join the society."

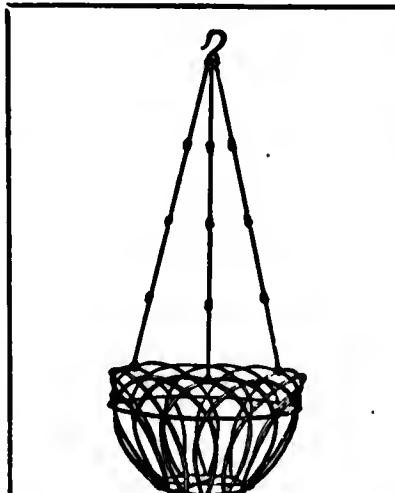

The executive committee is given the right to publish such reports, bulletins, memorials, pamphlets, books and other publications as it believes are for the best interests of the society and its work. The trustees are given the right to appropriate money for such certificates, medals and other prizes as they deem fitting.

The annual meetings are to be held at such times during the month of March or April and at such a place in the United States as may be specified to the members by the majority of the trustees at least sixty days in advance of the meeting. Special meetings may be held at any time and at any place on thirty days' notice. A quorum at a meeting will consist of ten members.

The Market.

Last week's market was a slight improvement over the previous two weeks, and towards the end of the week roses and carnations cleaned up well. Of course, there was still an oversupply of bulbous stock, which was only fair in quality. Tulips, daffodils, narcissi, etc., were still arriving in good quantity. There seemed to be an exceptionally large crop of white carnations. Whether or not they are coming too early for Mothers' day on account of the weather is a question. The trouble is not apparent, but everyone hopes that they will not play out before May 8. A small quantity of delphinium made its first appearance last week. It was rather small, but of fair quality. Most of the stock coming in was of such good quality that the grower who had poor stock either found no sale for his stock or else it had to be disposed of at a lower price. Fancy ferns were scarce on this market and the quality was not the best.

Whitewater, Wis.—W. G. Uglow plans to start a store and greenhouse here sometime in the near future.

Geneseo, Ill.—Howard Hill, who operated the greenhouses here several years ago, has returned. He has purchased the flower shop of Oscar Anderson and will take possession May 1.

La Crosse, Wis.—At the opening of the nurses' home and training school of the Grandview hospital, elaborate decorations were donated by the La Crosse Floral Co., Theodore Kienahs and the John A. Salzer Seed Co. The decorations consisted of large, well filled bowls of roses, baskets of miscellaneous flowers and ferns and potted palms.

FRAT-M'S

Frat-M's are a great help to florists who make funeral work. They are exact reproductions of the official emblems embossed in gold and the different colors as required by each Fraternal and Labor organization.

The florist is saved time and worry in the nuisance of lettering, as well as the keeping of such a stock of wire frames, and different colored flowers. Just use such flowers as you have and then attach a FRAT-M with paste to the chiffon, or by the hanger that comes for each, as a card, and that is all there is to it, excepting the comment and commendatory talk for the florist.

Just pick out a dozen of the most used from the list following, enclosing $2.00 per dozen, and if they don't make you ten times their cost, return those unused and get your money.

Square and Compass, Chapter, Commandery, 32nd Degree, Shrine, Eastern Star, Royal Neighbors, M. W. A., Maccabees, Odd Fellows, Red Men, Knights of Columbus, K. of P., Moose, Jr. O. U. A. M., B. of R. T., B. of R. Clerks, B. of L. E., Br. of Blacksmiths and Helpers, Eagles.

Just give Frat-M's a trial; you don't have to keep them. We are willing to send them to you and return the money if they don't pay you ten times their cost. Address

The Market.

The wholesale market was somewhat relieved last week from what looked in the previous week like the approach of a big glut. While there was plenty of stock in almost everything, the market was not so congested as in the preceding week. The retailers put in a busy week, judging from the large quantities of stock consumed by them daily. While roses were plentiful, the extra prime stock had the call. The price held up well in this grade, while the lower grades were jobbed off in thousand lots. Premier, Ophelia, Columbia and White Killarney met with the best demand. Fancy stock of Milady was scarce.

Carnations, though less plentiful than they had been, were sufficient for the demand. Choice Laddies rose in price, but in all other varieties from 2 to 3 cents bought splendid stock. Easter lilies and callas were in good demand and none went to waste, as in former years. A number of large weddings created a demand for valley and orchids. Delphiniums were of fine quality and the light shades sold well, sharing in the demand for snapdragons, tulips, calendulas and daisies. Sweet peas, though still abundant, decreased

A New Year's Thought

Let us learn to feel the joy in things that are simple and universal—in the beauty of the dawn, of sunset and of flowers. Let us cultivate a feeling of tenderness for all living creatures, from the dumb and patient animals to our brother man. Would you learn these deeper values in life? Study the flowers,

Reminding You Of Some Mothers' Day Reminders

Everything beautiful that can be said of Mothers—has been written.

No word of mine can plumb the depth of feeling of love and gratitude to her.

Only flowers can say it, the beautiful way it should be said.

Here are three suggestions for your F. T. D. customers, who incline on Mothers' Day to spend just $5.

$5 Basket of Flowers.
A charming remembrance, running over with joyousness.

$5 Box of Flowers is a hobby of mine.
Therefore, always choice, always dependable.

Walter Amling, of Pana, Ill., was elected to membership. The trustees announced that $1.10 had been collected in fines for failure to wear a flower during the meeting.

F. R. Kilner, managing editor of The Review, who was in St. Louis for the day, was called on by President Rowe for a few remarks and responded with a few minutes of interesting talk.

Then followed the feature of the meeting, which had drawn the large attendance. The chair called upon G. H. Pring to show the members what the recent New York flower show looked like and he proceeded to do so by means of a large screen. His explanation of the pictures was exceedingly interesting and was highly complimented. He was assisted by L. P. Jensen, who operated the machine.

Dr. Vitt, head of the Safety First Council, was present and fully explained the objects of the council, stating that $1,600 was the amount asked of the florists to help defray the expense of the work.

J. F. Ammann, chairman of the national publicity committee, was called upon for a talk on the work of this committee and showed on the screen all of the advertising featured by this committee. He complimented the local committee on its work.

Next on the program was the advertising work by Penn the Florist, of Boston. About fifty slides were shown on the screen and were of great interest to the retailers present, who were amazed at the large amount of advertising done by Mr. Penn. All agreed that it pays to advertise when the advertising is done in the right way.

At the close of this, the most interesting meeting the club ever held, the members were invited to a delicious lunch, provided by John Moritz. A rising vote of thanks was extended to the park department and especially to Mr. Moritz, for the afternoon's entertainment.

Various Notes.

At a special meeting, called by Chairman Bourdet and held April 13 in publicity headquarters, arrangements were completed for the "Say It with Flowers" week at the Missouri theater, beginning April 23. The committee, consisting of Messrs. Gorly, Windler, Pilcher and Freere, will have charge of all arrangements. The sum of $400 was appropriated for the use of the committee in decorating the lobby of the theater; special arrangements of cut flowers will be featured daily. All retailers are asked to assist in this work. The St. Louis park department their honeymoon trip after the busy season is over.

Entries for the spring flower show to be held by the St. Louis Garden Club at the Missouri Botanical Garden, May 21 to 23, are showing well to date. The local florists, retailers, wholesalers and growers alike, are showing great interest, with the result that the show will probably be a greater success than last year. The public will be admitted free of charge.

The Kalisch Bros. Floral Co., at Clayton, is consigning to this market a large cut of outdoor Darwin tulips and expects a large crop of ether outdoor flowers in their season. The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. is handling the entire output.

C. A. Kuehn's consignments of roses from M. F. Widmer, Highland, Ill., and the Woodland Gardens, Edwardsville, Ill., were of fine quality last week. Arthur Meyer, manager of this department, says the demand has been excellent.

Levine, of the M. H. Levine Co., New York; M. Heilemann, representing the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia; Julius Dillhoff, representing Wertheimer Bros., New York, and Mrs. Philip Daut, of Daut Bros., Decatur, Ill.

At H. G. Berning's, known as the local rose market, was shown splendid stock from the establishments of W. A. Amling Co. and A. Nielsen, Pana, Ill.; E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., and Otto Bruenig, Clayton, Mo. Local and shipping trade here is reported large.

The following out-of-town members of the Florists' Club attended last week's meeting: W. E. Ogle, G. Grosart and M. Schoenberger, Belleville, Ill.; George Madsen, Alton, Ill.; Charles Johann, Collinsville, Ill.; J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill.; Edwin Denker, St. Charles, Mo., and Claude Wisley, Murphysboro, Ill.

There were exciting times during the bowling April 13, when the Carnations defeated the Roses in all three games; the Roses now lead by only one game. The same evening the Gladioli beat the Sweet Peas in three games. This week's games end the season. The big night has been arranged for at the Western Rowing Club, April 30, when all in the trade are invited to attend. This wind-up affair is expected to be a great success and a large attendance is looked for. J. J. B.

J. F. Ammann stopped in St. Louis April 14 to attend the club meeting on his way home from Ohio, where he had been working on the organization of local growers' associations at Dayton, Springfield and Cincinnati.

Visiting St. Louis April 11, Joseph Hill took home with him the order for rose plants to stock the greenhouses operated by the St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co., at Crescent. The 50,000 plants required to fill the houses comprise Premier, Columbia, Butterfly and this time than I have ever before seen it, let me say for the growers, the ones who suffered most, that they looked upon it as an emergency that no one could prevent and took their medicine without grumbling. Everyone had the situation sized up accurately, for, while there was perhaps more business done than normally at this season of the year, there was entirely too much stock to meet the demand. This was not altogether caused by bad management, for a great deal of this excess stock should have been in for Easter, when it might all have been used at good prices, and the unseasonable weather immediately following the holiday was in a large measure responsible. But there is no use crying over spilled milk; it was a bad situation while it lasted, one in which everyone concerned was obliged to meet it as best he could, and, taken as a whole, it was well handled.

Last week supply and demand were more evenly balanced and all lines of stock were cleaning up fairly well. Roses never were in better quality, some of the specials were of the blue-ribbon type. Carnations were fine—good varieties and plenty of them. Sweet peas had fallen off slightly; yet there were plenty for all requirements; neither the shades nor the stems were ever better. Lilies were still in large supply and of splendid quality, and were going good. Callas had dropped back to normal and plenty of funeral work created a strong demand. There was plenty of miscellaneous stock of all sorts. Green goods, except smilax, were in good supply. Smilax was not to be had at all. This is one of the hardest greens to get along without, especially at a time when such great quantities are being used for palls.

The Big Night.

April 12, E. Gurney Hill, of Richmond, Ind., gave his wonderful illustrated lecture on "Roses I Have Met at Home and Abroad." The hall, which held 800 people, was filled with an audience made up of the cream of Baltimore's society and many of the florists of Maryland. Mr. Hill was with us for three days, visiting the growers about the city. When the committee appointed to look after him during his stay asked him where he would like to go, he made but one request, which was to meet his old friend, John Cook. During his lecture, Mr. Hill paid a glowing tribute to his fellow rosarian, saying that he never passed through Baltimore without stopping to pay his respects to one to whom the florists' industry owed much. Mr. Cook is 87 years of age and Mr. Hill is 74, yet both of them are still in vigorous health.

Mr. Hill had an audience of rose lovers who could appreciate every word he said. First, Mr. Halliday saw to it that every member of the American Rose Society in Maryland had an invitation and most of them were there. Then there were the society ladies, who know every rose by name. The illustrations were as fine a set of pictures about roses as were ever thrown upon a screen.

It was rose night at the Southern; every table in the dining room was decorated with roses of the Hill production, in honor of the occasion; every employee, down to the bell-hops and elevator boys, wore roses, with the club's compliments. Up in the ball-room a fine exhibition of commercial varieties of roses was staged. William F. Ekas, who had charge of this feature of the evening, deserves credit for the splendid way in which he handled it. He had all of the exhibits that were of the Hill production grouped together. Roses were sent for this exhibition from Philadelphia, Washington and Madison, N. J. After the lecture, every lady in the hall was given several of the roses. The judging of the rose exhibits was done by four of the lady patronesses.

Those exhibiting were as follows:

The Market.

The last two weeks have been rather disastrous for outdoor plants, as there have been two severe frosts. Strange to say, peonies have shown little damage, although all of the tree fruits have been killed. Ice froze fully half an inch thick. Gladioli that were up six or eight inches high in the open ground were cut practically to the ground. Undoubtedly, they will grow out again and bloom as well as if the frost had not come. We saw one planting of dahlias that were up six or eight inches high. Of course, they were cut to the ground, but are already beginning to show signs of sprouting out again.

Rains have been heavy, but there has been sufficient sunshine to keep the supply of cut flowers heavy. In fact, for the first time for more than a year, there is a surplus of roses and carnations.

tions here. The quality remains good.
The fact that outside flowers have been cut down should help a little.

Such outside flowers as iris have suffered more damage from this frost than from any frost we have ever seen before. The late varieties seem to have escaped, however. One strange effect of the frost was that it brought early and medium-late varieties into bloom at the same time. It is still unsettled as to when the local iris show will be held, as weather conditions will mean so much. Surely, it will not be as early as was first contemplated.

Bedding plants are growing rather large, as the demand has not come as yet. Ordinarily, most of the porch boxes are held for Easter, but this year nothing was sold for this purpose and the cold weather still holds this trade up. As there is no Memorial day business in this section, it will make little difference to the trade if plants do look overgrown.

Various Notes.

The Joy Floral Co. is conducting its annual sale of rose plants. For five or six years the company has had an annual sale, disposing of bench plants at retail. Each year the sale is proving more popular and the public has found that these plants will give good value if properly cared for. There used to be some question as to whether or not these plants would give results, but, in this locality at least, the question is settled in the affirmative.

Haury & Sons have made a number of improvements in their retail store. Their location is now in one of the best parts of the retail district of the city.

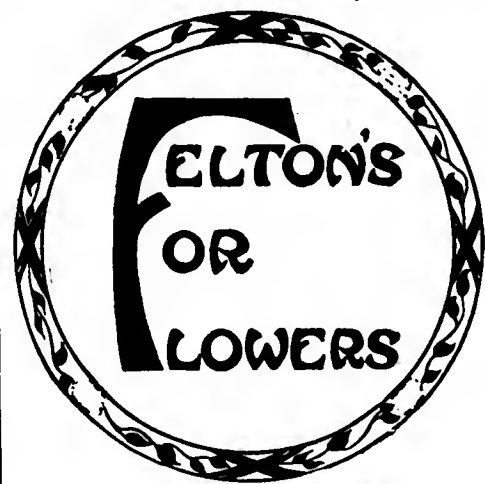

Geny Bros. report that they have had an unusually heavy sale of dahlias this year. The demand continues brisk, which goes to show the value of local flower shows as business-getters. Last fall there was a good local dahlia show in Nashville.

Recent heavy frosts have seriously damaged the iris and may result in no iris show here this year. Bedding of cannas is going forward rapidly now at the city parks and the florists are doing a good business in canna plants just now. F. B.

PITTSBURGH.The Market.

Another exceptional week has just passed in the florists' business. Week before last the market was glutted with roses, carnations, sweet peas and many other kinds of flowers. However, during last week, each day found the wholesale houses practically cleaned up.

the wholesaler was compelled to proportion his production. Roses were also scarce. The quality was exceptionally fine. Yellow daisies were also good and were being received with long stems. Orchids were again seen on the market, not having made much of an appearance since Easter. Sweet peas were also arriving in fair quantities, but the demand practically took the supply. The quality was fairly good. Violets were also on the market in limited quantities and moved fairly well. As the bulbous stock was about cleaned up, there was a tendency toward increased demand for carnations, roses, yellow daisies, etc. Lily of the valley was also coming in daily and moving rapidly. Easter and calla lilies were also on the market and were bringing fair prices. The quality was exceptionally good. During last week the florists were busy taking care of some of the largest weddings of the season and, judging by reports, there will be some good weddings all through the month of April. The majority of the florists were still talking about the wonderful Easter business they had and, from all reports, business had not fallen off much. The majority of retailers report that they were busy during last week.

Various Notes.

Last week the price of window glass had a marked reduction. In January, 1911, a box of 16x24 double-strength glass could be purchased for $2.17 per box, less two per cent. The price varies at the present time and quotations are from $4.95 to $5.20.

Business has held up remarkably well since the first of the month. Weddings have been numerous, there have been many funerals and general sales in the retail stores have been satisfactory. Last week, stock began to be short. Roses were still plentiful. Growers were not bringing as many carnations to market as they did the week previous. Sweet peas were in crop. Lilies had about reached their limit and the other bulbous stock was gone. Prices maintained the level of the previous week with the exception of roses.

Say It with Flowers. Member F. T. D.

Orders are coming for Mothers' day. Stock will not be so plentiful. The outlook is that carnations cannot remain in crop that long, as growers have been cutting heavily for nearly a month. The Florists' Club has ordered 5,000 folders advising the public to order from the nearest florist for Mothers' day. These will be delivered with messages by the Western Union Telegraph Co. a few days before May 8. Posters and stickers have also been ordered by the club for distribution to the local florists.

Probably the earliest carnation planting of the season has been done by A. N. Nielsen. The plants were put in the ground April 15 and were covered by a light snow that fell several hours the next day. About 75,000 plants will be put out on this range this season.

Among the week's visitors were: Mr. and Mrs. Edward Craft, Blue Rapids, Kan., and Miss Marie Dougherty, of the Sunnyside Floral Co., Leavenworth, Kan.

The William L. Rock Flower Co. had either a wedding decoration or bouquets every day last week and some days both were ordered.

The formal consolidation of the National Bank of Commerce and the Commerce Trust Co. took place April 11. A. Newell supplied about $500 worth of flowers for the occasion. Later the Club Meeting.

There was a big turnout of retailers and growers at the "growers' night" of the Toronto Retail Florists' Club, April 11. The feature of the meeting was an address by J. E. Cooper, of the Dale Estate, Brampton, after which many of the growers made short speeches.

Mr. Cooper was given a good reception. His address covered difficulties of the grower and gave the retailer much light on the growing costs of producing flowers. He pointed out that one of the great difficulties was the weather. Last week there was a hot spell. This weather reduced the rose cut about fifty per cent.

In referring to the cost of flowers Mr. Cooper compared the leading lines. Two of the most important ones are coal and labor. Mr. Cooper has just completed his twenty-first year at Dale's. He started there twenty-one years ago at $2 per week. Mr. Cooper's paper appears on another page of this issue.

Mr. Cooper was warmly thanked for his excellent address. He was followed by several other growers, who congratulated Mr. Cooper on the information he had given. He was given a vote of thanks by the club and it was pointed out that retailers should be supplied with more of this information, to permit them to talk intelligently to customers who complained of the high cost of flowers. Supper was served at the conclusion of the meeting.

Miller Bros. intend selling the ground on which their present range is located. As it is the center of a residential section, it will be split up into building lots. It is their intention to commence work on a new range immediately. It will cover twenty acres. The new company is capitalized at $1,000,000. Stock grown in the new range will be ready for Christmas. E. Miller will visit France and Switzerland to get supplies. Fred Miller has been in Boston and other places getting ideas for the new range. J. J. H.

Richmond, Va.—Fred W. Walter, who has for years been supplying some of the people of Richmond with plants, is planning to erect a greenhouse. He has found that he is unable to accommodate the trade that he has worked up, so he is adding the greenhouse to his hotbeds and coldframes.

Mono Service Co.
NEWARK, NEW JERSEY.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Spokane, Wash.—T. G. Westlake reports an unexpectedly strong demand for gladiolus bulbs. As he puts it, he was "flooded with orders" as the result of a Classified ad in The Review. In addition to his plant, cut flower and bulb business, Mr. Westlake conducts the Westlake public market, on Post street.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

Retailers say there was a decided falling off in business last week. Funeral work as well as other trade was below the average. Stock moved fairly well in spite of this and prices were well maintained. In roses, the buyer had a little the better of it. Field carnations were cheap, but indoor stock was good and prices kept up. Spanish iris and Iris tingitana were the best offerings in bulbous stock. Freesias were about over and tulips were getting past their best. There was an abundance of Easter lilies and callas enough to take care of what shipping business there was. The local demand for callas was limited. The supply of small flowers was about evenly balanced with the demand. Shasta daisies were coming more freely. Orchids and valley were scarce, although the price of the latter was cut by some wholesalers. Greens of all kinds were plentiful and good.

New Amling Range.

Things are beginning to take shape at the new range being erected by Amling Bros. at Santa Ana. The location is ideal, being on a good, well traveled road and on a railroad switch, on which the building material is being handled. There are ten and one-half acres in the site. The soil is a moderately heavy silt loam, overlying gravel. The plant now being built consists of five houses each 40x400 feet, running north and south. Raised benches are to be used throughout. The lumber is already on the ground and hundreds of concrete bench posts are being made on the spot. What was a bare beet field only a few days ago is now a busy spot with scores of men employed and Ernst Amling on the job daily, superintending the preparations for planting, which will begin immediately after the benches are constructed. Many carloads of pipe, cement and other materials are already on the ground. The construction is being done by the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., of Chicago. At the south end of the plant, a concrete oil tank is being constructed. The capacity is about 36,000 gallons, or two carloads. The service building will be in the center. It will be of concrete construction and a new Frost tubular boiler of 125 horsepower is here ready for installation. City water at a high pressure will be available and already an immense heap of compost is being prepared. It is about two-thirds soil and one-third cow manure.

Roses only will be grown, about 45,000 plants being prepared for this season. Premier, Russell, Crusader, Milady and White Killarney will be the principal kinds grown at first, and will be added to or changed later as their fitness for the climate is tested out. This will be a notable addition to the fine ranges already in operation in this section and the Amling Bros. will be welcomed by retailers and wholesalers alike, as their eastern record has preceded them here.

Various Notes.

Fine stock continues to be shown at Lichtenberg's and business keeps up well. C. C. Thomas, manager here, who it will be recalled was with Bertermann Bros. Co., of Indianapolis, for something over twenty years, has now become a booster for southern California and has no inclination to go back east.

The nursery of Tassano Bros., at Artesia, is in fine shape now, the biggest thing of all being the wonderful houses of adiantum, from which immense cuts are taken daily. The houses are filled to repletion and the fronds now being taken are large and of the finest quality. Angelo Tassano attends to the sales end of the business, Dominic to the growing end. A fine cut of statice is also being taken now.

Fine Iris tingitana is being shipped by the E. C. Amling Co. The flowers are cut much tighter than is usual here and for that reason ship better. The flowers have unusually good stems. A leader in baskets here is a small hand-painted tin with handle, which is most attractive and a good seller. Adam Kaspar, head shipper, is talking of taking a vacation trip to Chicago and the middle west shortly.

Some of the finest statice seen in this market is being shipped by the California Floral Co., the sprays being large and well flowered and the color range much larger than usual. Paul Miller says he hopes to have a good supply of this right up to and including Memorial day.

Asparagus Longifolius. We have completely tested this and find that commercially it is going to be a winner. Shoots very sturdy, from 2 to 3 feet in height. Wonderful for fresco decoration and charming in bouquets. 100 seeds, $1.00.

ASTERS

ASTERS--(American Beauty). This is one Aster that can be grown both in early spring and in late fall. It is, therefore, the peer of Asters for the florist. Offered in old rose, September pink, purple, lavender and mixed. Trade packet, 50c.

ASTERS--(Fraser's California Crego). Very fluffy and borne on unusually strong stem. You have always had visions of such an aster. We are offering it in rose, pink, white, blue, lavender and mixed. Trade packet, 50c.

Florist, was busy decorating chairs, cradles and other furniture for a nursery, and while on the face of it this does not sound attractive, under his skillful hands a most artistic result was attained. In the windows here Statice Suworowii and orchids were used with telling effect last week.

The Shasta daisies coming from the Gorini nursery, at Huntington Park, are of especially good quality.

Another big shipment of baskets has arrived at the store of W. Armacost & Co., to take care of Mothers' day requirements. The rose cut is particularly good just now. Incidentally, the exhibit of roses sent to the Pasadena show last week by this firm was one of the finest ever seen in this section. Mr. Armacost personally superintended the arranging of the exhibit and the Columbia, Crusader, Russell and other popular varieties were truly magnificent stock.

Particularly good funeral work has been turned out by the Broadway Florists lately and much of it, this being one of the busiest stores in town.

The H. N. Gage Co. is in with a fine cut of tulips. A peculiarity about the tulips as grown here is that many of the Darwins after being grown here a while have a flaked color approximating the parrot types. Allium roseum is also fine and as handled by Mr. Gage is a fine shipper.

A. Tassano & Son report big shipping orders for statice and greens, the stock arriving in fine shape now from the Burbank nursery.

S. Murata has sufficiently recovered from his recent illness to be around the city and take drives to the beaches, but he has not so far returned to business.

Some fine decorations are reported by the Alexandria Florist, Manager George Eischen and staff being kept busy all the time. He says he has not much time for his Montebello citrus ranch.

Fine Erica persoluta alba is being sent to the market by Roy F. Wilcox & Co. from the Montebello nursery.

Fred H. Howard, Roy F. Wilcox and C. E. Gutting were in San Francisco last week on business connected with

The Market.

During the last few days the market has been invaded by a flood of roses. They are of excellent quality, but the abundance has brought the price down to the stage where, for the moment, there is barely a margin of profit to the growers. Tulips are also good and quite plentiful, and as there is plenty of other stock the market is exceptionally well supplied. Some of the other stock consists of sweet peas, marigolds, lilaes, ranunculi, the last violets of spring, freesias and many other spring flowers. Business for the last few days has been quiet.

Various Notes.

F. C. Jaeger & Son have purchased the retail business of the MacRorie-McLaren Co. The deal was concluded April 12. It is understood that for some time past the MacRorie-McLaren Co. has wished to close out its retail business in order to devote its efforts to the nurseries and landscape gardening. F. C. Jaeger, Jr., said: "Our store at 150 Powell street will be closed June 1 and we took control of the new store April 18." During the remainder of April and May F. C. Jaeger & Son will run both stores.

The Retail Florists' Association of San Francisco is preparing to decorate the various Western Union offices for Mothers' day. Telegraph delivery maps and emblems will be used, in conjunction with banks of flowers.

The purchase of a market by the Retail Florists' Association of San Francisco is at a standstill for the moment. No one wants two new markets. A number of the growers have pledged financial support to the plan of the retailers to purchase a desirable site for a market. Other growers, however,

One of the growers with J. A. Axell surprised everyone by sending in some fine Halley gladioli, outdoor grown, something hitherto unknown here at this season. They were snapped up by Podesta & Baldocchi, who are always on the alert for novelties. Mr. Axell is getting quantities of Spanish and Dutch iris, in blue, yellow and bronze.

The United Flower & Supply Co. has just signed a contract for five years with a grower who specializes in a fine variety of helichrysum and who has undertaken to supply about 30,000 bunches a season. The United Flower & Supply Co. is building a special drying house to prepare the strawflowers for the market. They are in vivid red, golden yellow, pink and white.

Podesta & Baldocchi had a novel table decoration recently, consisting of huge baskets filled with hydrangeas and of balls covered with twining roses. The effect was unusually attractive.

The California Floral Co. finds that apartment house dwellers have a fad, just now, for tulips and sweet peas combined for corsage and table use.

The Market.

More active business was the rule last week. Stock deliveries were without notable change, the only novelty being trailing arbutus. This is not generally grown in the Pacific northwest, and for that reason it attracted considerable attention here. Each week of late has seen an increase in social decorations. The initial sailing of the liner Wenatchee, now the largest boat on the Pacific, flying the American flag and carrying a distinguished passenger list, brought a fair amount of new business. The transient sales as a result of window displays are increasing. The fine weather has been in a great measure responsible for this, since it has brought out more women shoppers.

The cut of local roses is steadily improving and little further improvement could be asked on Columbia. Russell is not so good, but Butterfly and Ward are coming to market in fine condition. Continued sunshine is giving increased color. Hadley roses are still being shipped in from California, and there were several special shipments of Cecile Brunner, since the local supply is still short of the demand on these two varieties. Growers report that they will be in a position soon to start deliveries of Ulrich Brunner and that they are increasing their planting materially this season. This was one of the most popular red varieties of roses

The local cut of carnations is much better in color and in strength of stem, but outside shipments are still necessary to care for the demand. The violet season is passing and most florists have been substituting sweet peas whenever possible for this flower. The cut of sweet peas is heavy and of excellent quality, leaving little regret over the lighter cutting of violets.

A real lack of potted plants has developed during the last week, with cinerarias, primroses and a limited supply of tulips about the only items available just at present. One shop featured forced pansies set in small pots carrying one plant only, but these may be expected to sell for a limited time only. This leaves tulips about the only distinctly spring flower still offered in pots. Dorothy Perkins and Tausendschoen roses in tubs are still to be had, but buyers this season have generally shown a preference for items which can be sold at less than these plants.

Various Notes.

Bellingham florists have invited the local trade to be their guests May 2 and 3, while that city's tulip festival is going on. Bellingham is the home of the big government bulb farm, and the success which this festival met with in the 1920 season has led to its establishment as an annual custom. It is probable that a good-sized delegation will attend the tulip festival.

Out-of-town florists calling on the trade last week included H. Rahn, of the Spokane Greenhouse Co., formerly of Rahn & Herbert.

THE death of Augustus H. Goodwin, vice-president of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, is reported in this week's obituary column.

THE Chicago fire department was called out in a hurry April 15. The alarm came over the telephone and was given thus: "There are 1,500 lives imperiled by fire." When the apparatus arrived at the store of the W. W. Barnard Co., it was found that there were 1,500 incubator chicks in the region where more smoke than fire was seen. The damage was slight, about $30, and a few of the chicks were suffocated.

WARNING FOLLOWS PEA LOSS.

Growers buying seed peas for this year's planting are being advised by the Department of Agriculture to go directly to seed growers wherever possible or to buy their seed of dealers of known responsibility. The rag-doll germinator test, which promises to become universal in the testing of seed corn for diseases and reproductive ability, can also be used to test the germinating qualities of peas and beans, but beyond that the purity of the variety is of first importance.

Canners in Maryland and Delaware learned this to their cost last year, say department officials, as about 1,700 acres, thirty per cent of the total pea crop for canneries, was planted with seed that proved to be spurious. The department has recently conducted an investigation of the substitution. The Alaska variety is generally used for canneries in these states. The Alaska grows a vine about thirty inches high, with pods beginning to form at the sixth or eighth joint, giving early development and a uniform time for maturity. The latter qualification is important, as farmers nowadays mow the peas instead of picking them, and all that are not in a stage for use at the time of mowing are a total loss. These pea vines are then run through a viner, which delivers the peas ready for factory processes.

The Alaska also is a white-flowered pea, and any except white-flowered peas darken when processed for canning, thereby deteriorating the packed product. The spurious variety sold as Alaska grew to a length of five or six feet and did not begin to bloom until it had made considerable growth. It then set pods through a long period, finally having the whole range from blossoms to dry pods, but at no time having a satisfactory yield of peas at the right stage for canning. In addition, many of the pea vines bore colored flowers, and when processed the peas from these turned dark and stained the liquor to almost an inky hue, giving the buyer or consumer the impression that the product was unclean or spoiled.

The department found that the objectionable peas came from certain growers in Idaho and Washington, some of whom were honest, but some of the dealers appear to have taken advantage of a threatened shortage in seed peas to perpetrate substitution. There is another variety which is locally known there as Alaska but which does not have the qualifications desired by the eastern canners. A number of lawsuits have grown out of the situation, but there seems little likelihood of injured parties recovering more than the price paid for the seed, although the damage they sustained was far greater. The dealers' integrity seems to be the only practical protection against repetitions of the same situation, says the department.

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

"Judging from what we read in The Review," observed Alex Ferguson, of Dupuy & Ferguson, Montreal, Can., "the season is rather backward, although it opened earlier than usual. We find a general desire on the part of the busy planters to wait for better general conditions."

Charles F. Saul, Syracuse, N. Y., finds counter trade fully up to usual at this date. A large order for field seeds elicited the remark that "there were many farmers who worked methodically

THE GENERAL BULB COMPANY

Established 1883

VOGELENZANG, Holland

New York Office,
110 Water St.

To our Friends and Customers:

Two of our representatives intend to sail for Holland within a very short time, and we wish to thank our customers for the continued confidence placed in us by again entrusting us with their orders for delivery next fall. We are proud to say that we have now in our possession a larger amount of orders than ever in the history of this concern; which goes to show that our efforts during the 38 years we have been in business have been successful.

The General Bulb Company has grown bulbs since 1883, and ranks amongst the oldest and most reliable concerns in existence, and is one of the largest exporters of bulbs into the United States.

During the last few years, and especially during the War, when shipping was difficult and when a large number of concerns did not execute their orders, the General Bulb Company made prompt deliveries, and the quality of goods shipped at that time was fully up to the well-known General Bulb Company standard. With practically all the surrounding nations at war, and when it was doubtful that deliveries could be made to the foreign markets, the General Bulb Company gave the same care and attention to the production of their goods as in normal times. While other concerns were apt to give less care to the growing, such as reducing expense of fertilizing, the General Bulb Company always had the interest of the trade at heart and produced the best goods on the market.

It is surely gratifying to us to see that our efforts have resulted in creating permanent relationship between ourselves and our numerous customers.

Of late years it has been the practice of a number of Holland concerns to first load their customers with bulbs on orders solicited in the spring, and in the fall carry a large surplus which is sold at half the cost of the original orders. Large buyers throughout the country know what this means and what hardship it creates to the legitimate business. We take this opportunity to state that the General Bulb Company last season did not ship any surplus either directly or indirectly.

Our customers at all times can depend upon fair and square treatment, satisfactory service, prompt shipments and the highest grade goods at a price which is both fair to the producer and consumer.

Yours very truly,

GENERAL BULB COMPANY.

P. S.—Those who have not placed their orders with us, are respectfully requested to correspond and mail us list of their requirements. It will pay!

and bought regularly regardless of spasmodic conditions and these form the backbone of the business."

Manager Day, of the Ebeling Seed Store, Syracuse, N. Y., recalls many seasons similar to this in his long experience and predicts a satisfactory wind-up.

M. Cushman & Co., Rochester, N. Y., were forced to vacate their store, as a banking concern has purchased the building in which they were located. Their new address will be Mill street until they are fortunate enough to secure a more favorable place.

The Maurer-Haap Co., Rochester, N. Y., reports its seed trade far ahead of that for any previous season and attributes the increase to publicity. As the company is located in a basement with only small window display advantage, the increased patronage shows the possibilities of the business when handled intelligently. W. M.

LILIES AT ARLINGTON.

Florists may become independent of imported lily bulbs for forcing for the Easter trade, in the opinion of specialists of the bureau of plant industry of the Department of Agriculture.

When it first became known that experiments in growing Easter lilies from seed were being carried on by the Department of Agriculture, few florists were prepared to believe that the undertaking possessed any commercial value beyond the possibilities of producing new hybrids. The results of these experiments, which have now been carried on for four years, indicate, the department specialists believe, that this country can develop an important industry.

On the Arlington experimental farm, which is just across the Potomac river from Washington, department specialists produce the lily seeds in greenhouses by artificial pollination. These seeds are planted about January 1, pricked out into small pots, and in May the young plants are set in the open ground. They develop rapidly, and by July or August some of the plants reach sufficient size to bear blooms. In October or November the plants are lifted, potted and removed to the greenhouse. Without undue forcing the plants will come into full bloom the following February to April—fifteen months after the seed had been planted. Those plants which bloom in July or August and from which the bloom stalk has been cut may send out two or three stalks and can be forced to bloom again by Easter.

Practically no losses have been experienced in growing bulbs from seed, states the Department of Agriculture, and a remarkably large number of bulbs can be secured in a short time. On the Arlington farm this work was begun about four years ago with five plants, and there is now a stock of between 15,000 and 20,000 bulbs in the field, which were protected by a heavy mulch during the winter, and approximately 1,500 plants in the greenhouses.

It is interesting to note that the experimenters state that bulbs grown from seed produce a larger number of blooms than those imported from Japan and Bermuda. One commercial grower, who imports 1,000,000 bulbs from Japan annually, reports to the department that he produces an average of two and one-half blooms for each bulb. In the Arlington greenhouses bulbs grown from seed have produced as many as twelve or more blooms, while seven to ten flowers on a stalk are common, it is said.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

B. Hammond Tracy, Inc., Wenham, Mass.—A clearly printed, finely illustrated catalogue of "Cedar Acres" gladioli and dahlias, with cultural directions; a tasteful 40-page booklet, in pocket form. A few of the varieties are shown in colors. Gladioli take the lead, in the book as in the company's business, but good assortments of dahlias also are listed. Varieties of gladioli considered especially suitable for forcing are marked with an asterisk.

Harry L. Squires, Good Ground, N. Y.—Illustrated catalogue of fruit-bearing plants, vegetable plants and roots, roses, shrubs and flowering plants; sixteen pages and cover. As is indicated by the colored picture on the cover, strawberry plants are a specialty. The prices do not appear in the descriptive list in the first part of the catalogue, but are quoted in a condensed list in the last half-dozen pages.

Elm City Nursery Co., New Haven, Conn.—A distinctive, attractive catalogue, of a more elaborate character than any that has been issued by this company for several years. The pages, though about the same in number as in last year's book, are considerably larger and are notably well printed. The landscape department has increased space and prominence in the catalogue and makes a most persuasive appeal, by means of both argument and illustration. The new cover design is both tasteful and striking.

Robert Blossfeld, Potsdam, Germany.—"The Original Zehlendorf Strain of Cyclamen," a well illustrated 16-page catalogue. Mr. Blossfeld states that he is sole exporting agent for this strain, grown by J. Diabka and "now offered for the first time to growers in America."

Murphysboro, Ill.—Claude Wisley has had a most successful season following the building of a store in the heart of town to house his flower and seed business. A double store building of brick cost $30,000, one-half being occupied and the other half rented. The greenhouses, comprising 35,000 feet of glass, furnish a large share of the stock sold at the store.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

SHRUBS are selling better than ever this season and reports indicate that privet, barberry and hydrangeas are practically cleaned up at most of the nursery centers.

THE second bulletin of the American Iris Society, a 44-page pamphlet, is entitled, "Garden Irises Past and Present," and contains a collection of articles that should be of much interest to devotees of the flower. Some additional matter of value is added by the secretary, R. S. Sturtevant.

JOHN S. KERR, president of the John S. Kerr Nursery Co., Sherman, Tex., says that the season just closing was a satisfactory one for the nursery business of the southwest. On account of the depressed financial conditions and the demoralization of farm products during last fall and winter, the nurserymen had misgivings about the past season's business, but they have come out as well as could be expected. They have cleaned up their stocks and have realized the best prices that they have ever had. He states that the plantings for the new year are ample and that the general impression is that there will be good stock on hand for the fall of 1921 and that the prices will be good.

WOULD BOXWOOD BE HARDY?

Is there any variety of boxwood that is hardy in our locality, about 100 miles south of Chicago? E. A. R.—III.

Boxwood is not hardy in the locality named, no matter what the variety. Boxbarberry or Cotoneaster acutifolia would be the best substitute. J. A. Y.

NOVELTIES FOR NORTH.

In the latest bulletin of the department of horticulture of South Dakota State College Dr. N. E. Hansen lists some northern novelties, including some new fruits and ornamentals. Among them are some hybrid plums, one of them two inches in diameter, a non-blighting, red-jellied crab apple and a new hybrid of Siberian crab and Duchess apple. Others among the new offerings are described as follows:

Siberian buckthorn, hardier than the common buckthorn, foliage a brighter green and appears earlier; an attractive ornamental shrub for the lawn, either for hedges or as single specimens.

A new bush honeysuckle brought from Siberia, of tall growth, with yellow or red berries. Good for hedges, screens or as single specimens.

A new Siberian willow, good for a nursery tie willow or for basketry. "You may tie bowknots in these pliable shoots," says Dr. Hansen, "but it appears practically impossible to break them."

Russian silver-leaved willow. These trees have made a strong growth, are perfectly hardy and are noteworthy for the silvery foliage, a rich silver satin on both sides.

Wild gooseberries, pure native seedlings of the seventh generation; vigorous, exceedingly productive; thorny; fruit large, black, smooth, makes an excellent red sauce.

There is also a short-season muskmelon of the Turkestan group, besides an early watermelon, both of these found in cultivation in Siberia. The results in breeding hardy roses are evident from the Tetonkaha, a new hybrid variety.

ERADICATING THE BARBERRY.

The job of eradicating the common barberry has proved to be a much more extensive one than was anticipated by the United States Department of Agriculture at the outset of the campaign in April, 1918. This campaign was begun as a control measure against the enormous losses of grain from black-stem rust.

In the grain-growing districts of the upper Mississippi valley, where the campaign has been carried on, it was supposed that barberry bushes existed chiefly as ornamental plants in the towns and cities. This was disproved during the first year of the campaign by the finding of 176,430 bushes on 1,166 rural properties. About 75,000 of these were scattered widely over 127 properties, showing that all country bushes are not confined to the farmsteads, but had been spread to woodland, pastures, stream banks and fence rows by the distribution of seeds by birds.

With these facts in mind, the campaign was more vigorously pushed in 1919. As soon as the survey of most cities and villages was completed, a farm-to-farm survey of certain definite areas was begun. The results in 1919 were as follows: 338,000 bushes were found on 14,100 city properties, while 1,760,000 bushes were found on 4,600 farms. Of these last, 1,680,000 bushes were escaped from cultivation on 1,300 properties.

During the calendar year 1920 efforts were concentrated upon the farm-to-farm survey.

In the entire campaign of three field seasons a total of 5,444,000 bushes have been found and 4,230,000 removed. Included with these, in so far as estimates were furnished, are hundreds of thousands of bushes removed from commercial nurseries during the early part of the campaign. The larger numbers were about 600,000 for Minnesota, 500,000 for Iowa, 200,000 for Wisconsin, and 75,000 for Ohio. Of the 1,214,000 remaining bushes about 1,000,000 are seedling bushes less than eighteen inches in height in a single area in southern Wisconsin. The others are scattered over 6,636 properties. State laws requiring the removal of these bushes are now effective in all thirteen states, a law having been enacted recently in Wyoming. The work for the field season of 1921 is to continue the farm-to-farm survey in as many counties as possible adjacent to those already completed.

EVERGREENS AND QUARANTINES.

Necessity Mother of Invention.

In the past entirely too much dependence has been placed on European and other exotic evergreens for our American plantings and on foreign nurseries to grow and supply this material, while our native American evergreens have been sadly neglected—even some of the most common and easily grown sorts, as well as rarer varieties not so readily available. As an example, the Scotch pine, or even the Austrian, which is a beautiful and desirable tree, is yet not so desirable as our own red pine, Pinus resinosa. The Norway spruce, while in many places useful, dies up from the bottom and almost always becomes a scraggly tree before attaining anything like its full growth and, as an evergreen for American landscapes, can it be compared to our own Douglas and white spruces? Veitch's fir is one of the finest of our conifer importations and should be freely grown and disseminated, yet even at its best it is hardly to be classed with the magnificent Abies concolor of our high western mountains.

Quarantine 37 may be the blizzard needed to bring the ninety and nine safely into the fold of American plant industry. If so, may we not cry out in gladness with the evangelist: "Rejoice—I have found my sheep!" Necessity is the mother of invention, and certainly Quarantine 37 is the original horticultural mother, so far as America drastic and to an extent unscientific, is causing direct and partly avoidable damage to American horticulture and that it must sooner or later be modified; but I also believe that, indirectly, its blessings, even if somewhat disguised, are great and will be lasting, in that it will force us Americans to get busy and stand on our own horticultural legs.

Too long we have been venders, rather than producers, for it is always easier, takes less initiative, and usually brings quicker, if not larger returns to trade in the other fellow's product, than to establish factories and organization of our own to turn out and traffic in our own products.

Another cause for our backwardness in propagation has been the tendency to depend too much on immigrant propagators and their methods, not fully realizing that our soil conditions and climate are different from those of England or the continent, and while this has brought us much that is good, both in men and knowledge, the net result has been largely failure. We must learn to do the trick right here in our own native wilds and take European sophistication more at its real value.

Many things we now know how to propagate successfully, but the first and most urgent need is for a vast lot of intelligent experimentation and this alone will bring the knowledge that is needed before we can adequately fill the gaps caused by the stoppage of importations.

America's Opportunity.

The burden of my song, then, is not to exclude foreign species and varieties, but to accept them with more reservation, carefully testing their adaptability to our soils and climate, and to maintain a better sense of proportion as between the foreign plants, however good, and our own American evergreens, which should form the basis and bulk of American plantings and, of course, be propagated and grown as the main crops in our American nurseries; and secondly, after intelligently choosing our subjects we must learn to produce from start to finish and then to market.

But I would now go a step farther and urge that the remotest corners of the earth be searched for new and desirable evergreens that we can test and, if found to meet our rather rigid requirements, use them in our American horticulture, for many of the newer things will surely add acceptable variety and color and other horticultural and landscape value to our already acquired list.

My object in this paper, however, is not to give long lists of foreign plants that we should use, but rather would I stress the proposition that it is now up to the American nurseryman and propagator, after fitting himself to do so, to begin the job of noting and selecting natural variations of our best and hardiest American evergreens for propagation as distinct horticultural varieties; and with even more vigor to seize the opportunity for hybridizing and producing entirely new races or strains of some of our best groups. To do so successfully requires a real knowledge of the hybridization art and of the plant groups that might be most usefully and readily made the subjects of this process.

HYBRID TEAS OUTDOORS.

For several years I have tried to grow hybrid tea roses outdoors, but have met with little success in keeping them alive over winter. I have covered them both lightly and heavily, using leaves. Last winter I built a box around the bed in the field and covered the plants with six to eight inches of light, dry leaves. Over this box I placed frames covered with roofing paper. On removing the frames recently, I found that most of the plants were dead or nearly so. Next time I shall plant them in a coldframe and cover only with the frame mentioned above, with no leaves, unless you advise me to follow some other method.

HENRY A. DREER, 714-716 Chestnut Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Please advise what varieties, size of stock, kind of stock and method of planting you would recommend for outdoor growing. H. A. K.—Ill.

I have never found leaves to be a satisfactory protection for roses. The trouble with them is that they are not sufficiently close and field mice, during warm spells, will harbor in them and do serious harm in barking the plants. The best of all protections for roses is soil pulled up to them. Where the plants are in rows in the field, the soil can be banked up against them, after the plants are tied up. Where they are in beds and planted rather closely, a better plan is to lay the plants down as much as possible without breaking them and then cover with soil hauled from outside. This method of protection has never failed in places where a winter minimum of 20 degrees below zero is occasionally recorded. Coverings of hay, straw, grass, pine needles and leaves have all proved more or less unsatisfactory.

If covering with soil will involve too much labor, I should advise digging up the plants and burying outside on a well drained piece of land. You could lay a mulch of some kind over the spot after the ground becomes frozen hard. In the case of ramblers likely to be killed back, the plants should be cut loose, laid down and a little soil scattered over them. Later, some straw or leaves could be added. There will rarely be any winter-killing if this is done. If you decide to heel them in coldframes, I should advise you to allow the soil about them to freeze solid, then scatter leaves over them and place board shutters over them, rather than sashes. The latter, if used, must be adjusted so as to afford ventilation during the warm spells of winter.

Own-root hybrid teas are of absolutely no value outdoors in your latitude, no matter how well they may do in the sunny south. Use field-grown stock if possible and grafted plants in every

GREENHOUSE ROSES

We make a business of grafting Roses. Perhaps you have known this for years, and yet we want to impress upon your mind the fact that we do this on a large scale and that our product is not a by-product, nor the leavings from a commercial planting. Roses for the private grower are taken care of here as they should be. They are put away for you.

We grafted seven hundred and fifty thousand this year and will do more next year.

By the way, Montgomery's Priscilla is coming out next season. Next week we will give you some real news. We are going to tell you the right way to disseminate a new rose.

case. In planting be sure to bury the graft at least three inches below the surface. Care is needed to remove any Manetti or briar suckers which may come up each season and which, if left unchecked, would eventually crowd out the roses themselves. I should prefer 2-year-old field-grown stock. If this is not obtainable, try 4-inch pots of indoor grafted plants if you can get them.

As to varieties, I should recommend the following for your state as being hardy and good bloomers, and a canvass of your state has shown that most of those I have named do particularly well: Caroline Testout, Los Angeles, Lady Hillingdon, General MacArthur, Antoine Rivoire, or Mrs. Taft; Mme. Abel Chatenay, Mme. Edouard Herriot, the Daily Mail rose; Mrs. Aaron Ward, Mme. Ravary, Lady Pirrie, Joseph Hill, Lady Alice Stanley, Richmond, Mme. Melanie Soupert, Mrs. David McKee, Mrs. George Shawyer, Ophelia, Radiance and Duchess of Wellington.

I have had good success for several years with hybrid teas which had been forced under glass several seasons, thrown out, cut back quite hard, planted rather deeply, well watered and mulched the first season. The second and succeeding seasons, these gave grand crops of flowers of the best quality. C. W.

S. R. Welch, general foreman of the Storrs & Harrison Co., says that the call for greenhouse stock, especially cannas, is far ahead of that for last year.

Perennials in the locality have been in great demand. Growers throughout the country look to Painesville to supply their wants.

The Market.

There has been good, steady business throughout this locality since Easter. Usually there is a general dull period in Rochester for at least a few days after Easter, but this year has been an exception to the rule. Stock is plentiful, arrives in splendid condition and is high-grade throughout. The weather has been just cool enough, this past week, to hold back a goodly quantity of stock that would have flooded the market, had the warm weather of a week ago continued. This has given the greenhouse men a chance to cut a large quantity of jonquils and to make a fairly good price on them. Outdoor stock is practically ready to be cut, and in some cases has found its way to the market. A big supply of roses reaches us daily and, owing to the condition of the market, has been used up every day. Prices are becoming normal again. Carnations are not so plentiful as they were, but the heavy supply of other flowers conceals this decline in supply. There is a ready supply of valley, the finer quality reaching $6 per hundred. Sweet peas are fairly plentiful and in demand. There is a good supply of calla lilies. Easter lilies are not plentiful at this writing. Calendula Orange King is in demand, although the supply is limited. Tulips are not plentiful. Mignonette is good in quality, but the demand is light. Orchids and gardenias have not been much in demand. White and yellow daisies are extremely plentiful. Good snapdragon is seen and quickly sold. Stocks are arriving slowly. Violets continue to be plentiful, the cooler weather having hardened them up. Asparagus, woodwardia and fancy ferns are in good supply.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Ehle spent the week-end at Auburn, N. Y., and Mr. and Mrs. W. DeKlyne at Wolcott, N. Y.

The new poppy which is being introduced in the city by Hart & Vick, Inc., as the Flanders poppy is becoming popular and the demand for it is large. This store is enjoying a huge business this season. This has necessitated the enlargement of its sales force.

Charles W. Curtis, of Irondequoit, N. Y., says his bedding stock is making excellent growth. He is planning a much larger acreage of gladioli and asters than formerly. Funeral work is good.

Schlegel's Sons report a good business recently. They are growing some extra fine bedding stock, some of which is being disposed of now.

Charles P. Guelph, of the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., called on his business friends last week.

The offices of George B. Hart and Hart & Vick, Inc., were entered Saturday evening, April 9, by burglars and the safes tampered with. In both cases the combinations were ruined, but admittance to the safes was not obtained. A small amount of money was found in a desk, but apart from the breaking of the combinations, the loss was trivial. H. J. H.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

As to the local market conditions at the present time, the less said the better. Unseasonably warm weather has sent outdoor flowers and shrubs ahead from a fortnight to a month, while greenhouse stock is in good supply. As a result there has been a decided slump in prices and cut flowers can now be bought at the cheapest rates seen here in many months. Bulbous stock continues plentiful, daffodils leading in demand. Sweet peas, marguerites and snapdragons follow closely in popularity.

Various Notes.

Lawrence Hay, of East Providence, has an unusually long list of estates to get into shape this spring.

Fred Davis, of Pawtucket, has leased the greenhouses of John Johnston, Hope street, Providence, and is growing spring bedding stock.

Frederick Dietz has returned from a business trip to New York.

AGERATUM, Fraserii

We feel confident in offering Ageratum "Fraserii" to our customers that we are offering what will be one of the most valuable acquisitions to the bedding plant line in recent years, that is a blue, a decided blue, that would be continually in bloom. In our trial grounds last summer "Fraserii" attracted more attention than any other bedding plant. It only grew about eight to ten inches high and was covered the entire season with what can easily be classed as immense trusses of flowers, as many of them were over 2½ inches across, while the individual flower would be ¾ of an inch in diameter. The plant spread about 12 to 15 inches across. It can easily be used with Alternantheras as a border plant.

Being an early bloomer and dwarf, compact grower, it makes an excellent pot plant. 2-inch, $1.00 per doz.; $6.00 per 100. 3-inch, $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

ENLARGING THE HOUSES.

We have six connected greenhouses, 20x100 feet, except the southern one, which is twenty-six feet wide. We have a large tubular boiler, sixteen feet long and six feet in diameter, with a grate $5\frac{1}{2} \times 6$ feet. The boiler is at the center of the houses on the north end. The north wall is a double board wall. We plan to lengthen the houses, making them 200 feet long. A 6-inch main runs through the center of the houses, to supply the coils in each house. From the main the pipes run each way to the side walls and run along the side walls to the end walls and there the pipes turn and come back to meet the center main again. This makes each pipe seventy feet in length. We shall need more piping along the south wall to heat the houses to 50 degrees in zero weather. All of the walls are six feet, three feet of double board and three feet of glass, except the north wall, which is six feet of double board. The extension will be built the same. How many mains and of what size will be required? And what is the best arrangement? How many more feet of $1\frac{1}{2}$ or 2-inch pipe will it take to heat it all, 126x200 feet, to 50 degrees in zero weather? We have 4,400 feet of $1\frac{1}{2}$ -inch pipe, besides the mains, in our present house. We wish to take out the ends of the houses and have the extensions part of the present houses.

J. P.—III.

To heat the houses after they have been lengthened, an additional 6-inch main flow pipe will be required, and the main returns ought to be of the same size as the flows. The new main may be run alongside that now in use. It should have a slight fall, and be carried so that it will be at least seven feet high at the end farthest from the boiler. The sketch shows that the boiler is located at the middle of the north side of the present houses, and that the mains are carried across the houses fifty feet from the west end. The extension being on the east end, it will be 150 feet from the mains to the east end of the houses.

To heat the portion of the houses west of the mains, we should take off from the main flow pipe, near the center of each house, a 3-inch main feed pipe. As soon as this pipe enters each house, we should break it up into three 2-inch flows. One of these should be carried on each plate and the third about two feet under the ridge. In each of the 20-foot houses, run eight $1\frac{1}{2}$ -inch returns, placing three on each wall and the others in the middle of the house. In the 26-foot house, use thirteen returns, with six on the south wall.

For the longer coils, use three $2\frac{1}{2}$ -inch flow pipes in each house, connecting them to the main flow with a 4-inch pipe.

While we should prefer to use 2-inch

"The Boiler of Unequaled Fuel Economy"

KROESCHELL BOILERS have no bulky, soot-accumulating surfaces—you avoid the disagreeable work and trouble indispensable to cleaning boilers with complicated and tortuous back and forth fire passages.

The superiority of our boilers has resulted in the removal and abolishment of hundreds of cast iron sectional boilers—in every instance KROESCHELL BOILERS give more heat with the same piping with less fuel.

Rose Range of Riverbank Greenhouses, Geneva, Ill. Charles McCauley, Supt.

Heated by No. 15 Kroeschell Boiler, Kroeschell 2-inch Return Piping System and Kroeschell Generator. Greenhouses each 28 feet by 200 feet. Garland Construction.

The mains are arranged to take care of a future addition of 40,000 sq. ft. of glass; 2-inch returns are used throughout the entire range and each 2-inch return line is controlled by 1-inch gate valve (strictly a Kroeschell feature), insuring perfect control. It is a gravity job; the circulation is perfect, reaching the extreme ends of range in fifteen minutes. The Kroeschell Generator (the high speed gear for hot water heating) is also used for this system.

"Your No. 15 Kroeschell Boiler heats our entire range. We maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in our greenhouses, and this temperature is easily maintained, even in the very coldest weather. Your boiler has given entire satisfaction. It is the best and quickest heater I have ever used or seen. I have found the boiler very economical in the use of fuel and labor, as it is not necessary to use the best coal, and any labor will do for a fireman. The Kroeschell Piping System with Generator works like a charm. When I want to sulphur, I can heat the water up to 230 to 240 degrees and I get the same results as from steam. Seeing is believing—all growers are invited to call. Any further information concerning boiler and piping system will be gladly given. We had a large number of florists at our place recently, and they all thought we had the finest equipped plant in the business."

That's the reward of careful selection in the installation of furnace linings.

You are well aware of the saving that means to you. The labor alone necessitated for furnace repairs is a big item, not counting the money spent for overtime, which is indeed worthy of consideration at present, especially when high prices still prevail.

or "Devil's Putty," the source of these extra profits, is more than a labor-saver, for primarily it saves fuel in unbelievable quantities. It makes the whole furnace setting absolutely air and gas-tight. For that reason it is impossible for any excess air to get into the combustion chamber and carry heat units up the stack.

Because there are NO joints in a PLIBRICO furnace lining it will outlast two or three settings made of ordinary fire brick. Joints crumble in time, and serve as lodging places for clinkers. By eliminating them there are no crevices to disintegrate and no mortar to fall out, and by producing a smooth, jointless surface lining, clinkers can find no rough spots to cling to.

A ten to twenty-five per cent saving in fuel is a big inducement, but where PLIBRICO shapes the furnace lining, it is a reality.

For patching old fire-brick walls nothing could be more satisfactory. It makes them like new.

PLIBRICO is applicable to any type of boiler.

Let our service department help you reduce fuel and labor costs. Any advice is gladly given, and it's free. You will be under no obligation whatever. Write for the valuable book D9 on Furnace Building—sent free.

PLIBRICO Jointless Fire Brick can be molded to fit any place in the furnace or setting.

PLIBRICO is carried in stock for immediate delivery in all principal cities. PLIBRICO is delivered only in steel packages of distinctive appearance as shown at the right. Comes in plastic condition, and is applied with a mallet and smoothed with a trowel. Any intelligent workman can use it.

flows for runs over seventy-five feet long, the south sections, 26x125 feet, may be heated by means of thirteen 1½-inch returns. This will practically use all the pipe of that size, and, if new pipe is to be purchased for the other houses, we would use 2-inch. Six 2-inch returns will be required in each of the five 20-foot houses, in addition to the three 2½-inch flow pipes, except in the north house, in which it will be safer to use seven returns, placing the extra pipe on the north wall. In all of the other houses use three coils of two 2-inch returns. This will take about 4,600 feet of 2-inch pipes for the coils in five houses, 20x150 feet.

In case the pipe on hand for the mains is of other sizes than we have specified, they may be substituted, provided that due allowance is made for their capacity. Of course the 6-inch mains may be gradually reduced in size as the supply mains are taken off.

A nice opening day's business was reported. The shop will be enlarged at once.

Fred Gust, local representative of the McCallum Co., Pittsburgh, Pa., and Art Smith, of the Smith Floral Co., Tacoma, were recent visitors, driving up in Mr. Smith's new car.

The sailing of Major General Leonard Wood on the Wenatchee was productive of considerable business for the florists, and McCoy's supplied one of the most noteworthy items, consisting of a large basket of Hadley roses, tied with blue ribbon. This was sent by the University of Pennsylvania and the school's colors were reproduced in this manner.

The City Flower Shop has completed redecorating the show windows and has placed an attractive new window sign. There has been a good increase in the number of weddings handled here lately.

Factory representatives who called on the Seattle trade last week included A. C. Aldridge, with the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia; Martin Reukauf, with Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, and

H. Weil, of the C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, Wis. Satisfactory business conditions are reported along their routes.

C. H. Benson is sending in some fine specimens of silver phoenix, and it is believed this is the first case where this has been grown commercially in the northwest.

William Holmes, of the Hollywood Gardens, has returned from his annual spring vacation, and Miss Wharton, Miss Callopy and Miss Robb are away on theirs.

Ray Guyer, who left Rosaia Bros. in October of last year to handle decorations for the Greater Theaters Co., is again attached to this firm. Another change in the staffs of local houses is noted at the Pinehurst Floral Shop, where Ben Delfonti, recently with the Winter Garden Flower Shop and previously with Rosaia Bros., is now located.

A number of the Seattle florists have expressed satisfaction over the fact that the state of Washington is sending out bonus checks to former service men. Among those who have financial cause for satisfaction are Irving Harris, of Rosaia Bros.; Dave Lenchner, of Kenney's Home of Flowers; La Verne Jackson, of L. W. McCoy, and Bert Linegar, of the City Flower Shop.

Some of the largest home-grown calendulas seen here in some months are being shown at Kenney's Home of Flowers. This stock has been commanding ready interest on the part of buyers. Both incoming and outgoing telegraph business is increasing.

Rosaia Bros. have been featuring statice in their window displays. Some especially effective pink and purple shaded stock is here at present. Elaborate church and home wedding decorations were handled last week. Easter lilies, snapdragons, palms, peach blossoms, pink tulips, smilax and Woodwardia ferns were used at the church and the home decorations were of iris,

The Pinehurst Floral Shop has been getting splendid results of late with the Columbia roses which are being cut by the Beall Greenhouse Co., of Vashon, and the recent weather conditions have induced a notable increase in transient business. Medium-priced cut spring offerings are especially good sellers at present.

Improvement in both quality and amount of cut is reported on roses, especially Columbia, by the Woodland Park Floral Co.

E. W. Clark and Tom Rhoades, of the Woodlawn Flower Shop, and Mrs. Clark spent the last week-end on a fishing trip and brought back satisfactory early-season catches. A window developing all of the color possibilities of spring flowers was shown last week. A number of valuable oil paintings were secured from a local gallery and set in effective light. About these were grouped various floral items, such as baskets, corsages and cut flowers in vases. Centered in the window was an easel with the color splashes made up of bright-colored spring offerings. The main sign carried the statement, "Like the masters, Woodlawn artists work with Nature." King Alfred, a new daffodil with a stem of about twenty-four inches and with a large flower, has been featured of late. H. M.

Amanda, O.—The greenhouse of John Phillips has been purchased by Denver Griffiths.

Eldorado, Ill.—Avarad Davis has completed his plans and will soon start in the wholesale and retail business in this town.

A-JAX BLACK GLAZING CEMENT

A PRACTICAL glazing material made for application in a practical manner. No clumsy, slow working tools necessary—simply a putty bulber or two and a filling gun to load them—furnished free to users.

Ajax Black Glazing Cement has been used throughout the country for several years with excellent results. To prospective purchasers we can give names of satisfied users in every greenhouse center—over a hundred names in Chicago locality alone.

NOT AFFECTED BY EXTREME HEAT OR COLD

Our product is a cement-like composition of Asbestos Fibres, and heavy, semi-drying hydro-carbon oils. Its exceptionally long life is due to the fact that it never thoroughly hardens like old fashioned white putty. The outside surface (which is exposed to the oxygen of the air) forms a resilient tough skin, below which the material remains soft and plastic. Because of this we guarantee that the coldest weather will not cause it to become brittle or pull away. On the other hand our product is warranted not to sag or run in extremely hot weather due to its being inter-laced with the Asbestos Fibres.

As Ajax Black Glazing Cement never thoroughly hardens, glass glazed with it can be shifted when desired without the loss of breakage that so often results when hard drying white putties are used.

LOW COST

Compared with the old fashioned White Lead putties, Ajax Black Glazing Cement not only lasts years longer, but is a great deal lower in initial cost.

One gallon is sufficient to glaze 500 lineal feet of sash.

While primarily made to stop water leaks, so thoroughly does Ajax Black Glazing Cement hermetically seal up the sash, that it will soon pay for itself in the saving of heat that is otherwise lost through air voids. This fact has been demonstrated time and again, and we can prove it.

TOLEDO, O.

The Market.

Last week found little change in market conditions. In fact, business since the Easter holiday has hardly kept pace with production. Yet business as a whole was good and far ahead of anything anyone might have expected when other trade conditions were taken into consideration. The extremely warm weather left us for a while and last week we were deluged with rain storms at intervals that made all outside work out of the question. Still, this is the season for weather of this kind and a few sunshiny days will soon remove the gloomy condition.

Various Notes.

Local florists are interested in the attempt to have W. H. Crouse removed as administrator of Mrs. J. B. Freeman's estate. The guardians of Mrs. J. B. Freeman's grandchild, who is entitled to two-thirds of the estate, claim that Mr. Crouse drew $16,000 for seven years' salary, taking care of the books at night and holidays.

Miss Helen Patten spent last week in Chicago attending Harriett McCullom's lectures on psychology. Miss Patten claims that she needs the benefits to be derived from these lectures in order to get more money out of the customers. During her absence Miss Betty McAleese was an efficient manager.

H. R. Ivens is the new designer at the Central Flower Shop. Mr. Ivens' design work is well liked and is of high quality.

The Helmar Flower Shop is making rapid strides and reaping the result of good work and careful attention to details.

W. F. Krueger's roses are coming along well. Production was a little backward in this line, but from present appearances good returns will accrue from now on. H. E. K.

The Only Greenhouse Wood

MR. GREENHOUSE MAN, if a contractor tells you frankly, "That kind of lumber will rot too soon, I would rather use Cypress," he is worth dealing with. Trust his judgment, his experience and his honesty. Give him the order.

MR. GREENHOUSE MAN, if a contractor says to you, "Cypress will cost you more to begin with than some 'substitute' wood, but it will be CHEAPER for you if you figure your building costs BY THE YEAR," listen to him. He is speaking from experience, and YOU will do well to PROFIT by his experience, and the experience of the greenhouse trade as a whole.

MR. GREENHOUSE MAN, CYPRESS is the one "natural-born greenhouse wood"—that is as thoroughly established as is the succession of days and nights. The thousands and thousands of owners who have tested it out and have profited by its marvelous endurance and corresponding freedom from repair and replacement bills, make a case that CANNOT BE DISPROVED. Don't let any one talk you out of Cypress.

THAT BEING THE FACT, THE REASONABLE CONCLUSION IS: ANY OTHER WOOD THAN CYPRESS FOR GREENHOUSE WORK IS "A SUBSTITUTE" FOR THE PROVEN BEST. CYPRESS IS THE BEST—NO ARGUMENT POSSIBLE ON THAT POINT.

Now for a volume or a dozen volumes of our CYPRESS POCKET LIBRARY—they are free to you. Send a letter or a postal hiking for what you need. VOL. 3 is about GREENHOUSES—nothing but. Just you GET IT.

THE LILAC BORER.

What should be done to get rid of lilac borers? F. E. H.—Ill.

The borers can often be killed by running wires into the holes entered by them. If the holes are sufficiently large, a little cotton wool soaked with carbon bisulphide can be put into the holes and the entrances closed immediately with putty. The gas from the carbon bisulphide will suffocate the borers. Then the broken shoots, and those so damaged that it would be useless to leave them on the plants, should be cut off and burned. C. W.

Norfolk, Va.—Miss Carrie Ward plans to enter the florists' business in the near future.

MORE ABOUT

— JESSE P. KING, —  — FLORIST —

There he is, looking at one of his own 'mums. If you know Mr. King at all, you know he did a lot of his looking after them, months before they were worth looking at.

Which, have a notion, has a little something to do with their later being so goodly to look at.

If we, up here at the office, never saw one of his 'mums, we could come pretty close to telling you the quality he grows. Suspect that the way he goes about buying his greenhouses is the way he goes about growing whatever he grows.

It's a lot of genuine satisfaction to sell a man who virtually sells himself.

It's a lot harder than selling a man who will let us sell him.

Harder, because he goes about it carefully, step by step, and sees to it that he fully understands every detail, and its purpose.

When you are through talking, he has just begun to get started.

He didn't put his name on the dotted line that first day he talked with us.

Or the next, either.

He went back to Mount Airy, and got out a perfectly good knife, sharpened his pencil with it, and did some figuring. Then he did some comparing of the houses he has, with the houses we wanted to sell him.

We called him up on the 'phone, but he was still figuring.

Then, one day, along comes the order, and our salesman threw out his chest, as if he had sold him.

But he hadn't.

Jesse P. King first sold our construction to himself.

Then he sold our houses to himself.

But, before he started doing any selling to himself, he was first thoroughly sold on our Company being the kind of concern he wanted to do business with.

Not a half bad way to go about buying houses, wouldn't you say?

You know, we go anywhere to talk green-houses.

You can sell one to yourself any time anywhere you are.

AMLING'S MAYWOOD RANGE

Their motto is: "Go and Get It"

That's why—

Amling Bros. came all the way back from Santa Ana, California, to talk greenhouse building with the AGMCO.

—and that's why the AGMCO is now building

consisting of

FIVE connected pipe-frame houses, 40 x 400 feet, and a service building 37 x 81 feet. The heating will be the well known McKEE VACUUM SYSTEM.

When the AMLINGS want anything, no matter what it is or where, they "go and get it"—

That's why they get the business no matter where they go.

That's why they build AGMCO houses no matter where they go—

What we've done for them, we can do for you—

AGMCO

Built by us for Memorial Park Cemetery, Evanston, Ill.

There is no denying nowadays that a greenhouse is an essential part of a cemetery. The trouble is in so many cemeteries the greenhouses are poor, makeshift affairs and, besides being inefficient, are an eyesore.

The conservatory as shown above is a modern curved eave steel greenhouse which, in addition to producing excellent stock, is a distinctive ornament and a salesman in itself.

We will be more than glad to give you an estimate and sketches for a conservatory or any other kind of greenhouse if you will just drop us a line.

MOTHERS' DAY NUMBER

Greenhouse Builders

Stertzing Of St. Louis Bought A Greenhouse That's Forty Years Young.

Here is a copy of a letter recently received from Stertzing's which is one of the most interesting received in many a day.

"We have just completed the final details on our Floral Conservatory and Show House, which we started to erect last August, on the Manchester Avenue side, adjoining our retail store. As it is now completed, we feel that a few words to you in reference to it would be appropriate.

"This Conservatory, together with two other greenhouses, which we purchased, were originally designed and built by Lord & Burnham Co. for Mr. Kauffmann, on his grounds at the N. E. Corner of Kingshighway and Lindell Boulevards, almost forty 40) years ago. We were remarkably surprised to find that upon dismantling them that they showed little or no signs of wear, with the exceptions of some of the wooden panels. The conservatory is constructed with steel frame and was rebuilt upon our place without any remodeling. It is now considered to be one of the Show Places of St. Louis and is said to be one of the prettiest Floral Conservatories west of the Mississippi River. We might also add that our business has increased almost 100 per cent since we erected this conservatory and we feel that the money we paid for it was well spent.

"This letter was written without solicitation and you have our permission to use any or all of same for publication."

To which let us add that when you are ready to talk building, say when and where and we'll be there.

Carnations Will Be Scarce

For Mothers' Day

PEONIES

At Mothers' Day you must ask your customers as much, or more, for a dozen Carnations as you ask for a big, showy bunch of fine, fresh Peonies. Carnations will be scarce and hard to get, but you can get plenty of Peonies if you send your order NOW to our sales agents:

A. L. RANDALL CO.

Exclusive sales agents for Gould's "Select" Peonies

180 N. Wabash Avenue

CHICAGO, ILL.

Send your order direct to them and your shipments will be made direct from Chicago.

They are now booking orders for our Tennessee crop, for Mothers' Day shipment, at $12.00 and $15.00 per 100

Our series of Peony farms, stretching from Tennessee to Wisconsin, assures you of a steady source of supply of carefully, scientifically grown stock, to take care of your trade on Mothers' Day, Decoration Day and throughout the Peony season. You are guaranteed that the blooms are properly cooled, packed and shipped to reach you in perfect condition.

CARNATIONS

While we will have a good supply of Carnations, there will not be enough flowers to supply the demand, so push roses on that day. You will find that the public in a great many cases prefer them to carnations, so make allowance for the scarcity of carnations and substitute roses. They will move just as quickly. Make up your order for us today.

MR. FLORIST!!

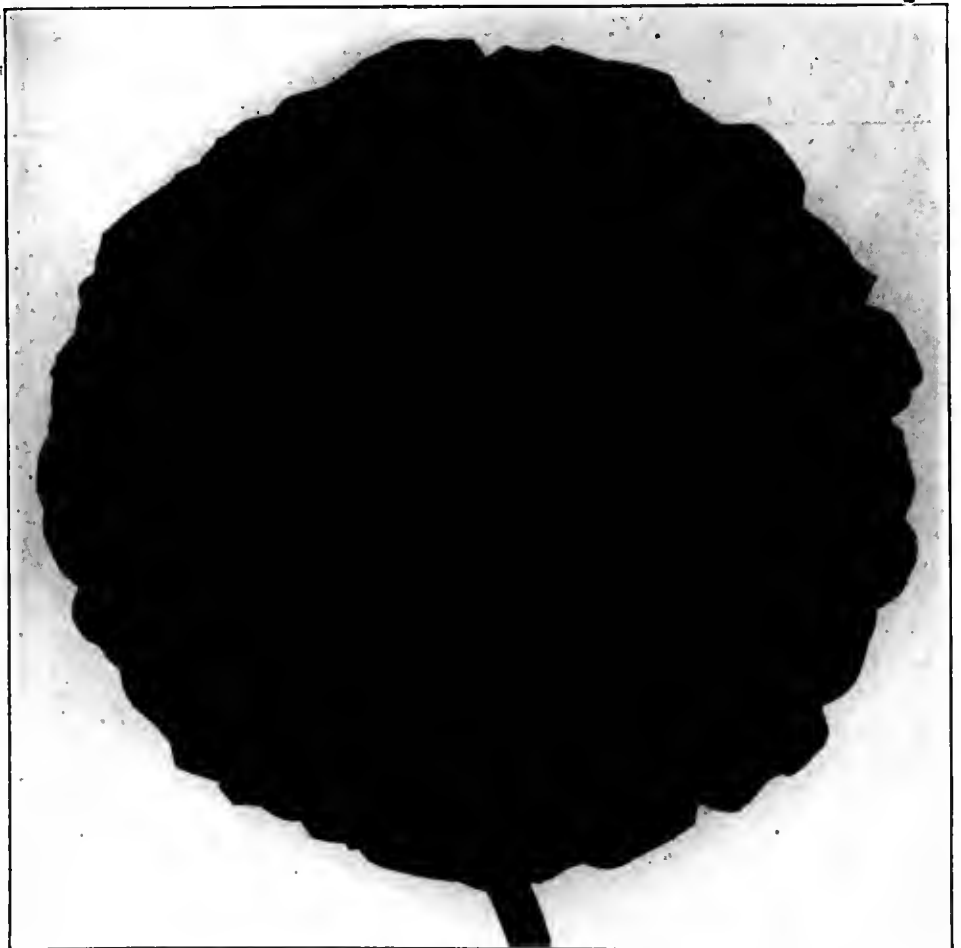

Plant Bodger's Seeds and they will "Say It with Flowers"

We have been working for several years perfecting stocks and we are now able to assist you in giving the flower-buying public what they are calling for: the beautiful pastel shades of delicate pinks, tyrian rose, fiery cerise and an endless list of pleasing shades in a New Type of immense size and unusual petalage, the Dahlia Flowered Zinnia. This type is popularizing the Zinnia. We have also introduced in Giants the Picotee, the Victory Quilled and a rich Golden Yellow called "Buttercup." These are distinctive and attractive as cut flowers. We have also on the market the long-stemmed Beauty Type of Aster and next year will have an Early Flowering Aster in this type for you.

We also recommend our Selected Strains of Cregos and American Branching, our Fancy Strains of Half Dwarf Cineraria, Calendula, Candytuft, the New Double Cosmos, White, Pink and Crimson; Giant Zinnia in fifteen distinct shades, and many other reselected strains for florists.

We are growers and sell only in bulk, but all reliable seedsmen carry —

TRADE'S NEWEST DAY BECOMING BIGGEST

Though little more than a decade has passed since florists began pushing Mothers' day, the second Sunday in May has risen, in that short time, to the first rank of the trade's business-bringing holidays. This year the trade's preparations augur a better day than before.

WHEN was born that idea which resulted in appointing a day of commemoration for mothers is not definitely known. But it is known that the idea was first brought to light in 1908 and the day has been growing in importance in a surprisingly rapid manner ever since. It is one of our youngest national holidays, yet the spirit that prompted it is one that has caused its quick and nation-wide acceptance. It is a day founded on a deep, elemental love that is as old as mankind. Dating back as far as the earliest readable and understandable hieroglyphics, the Muses have prompted the singing and writing of praises to mothers. Poets, writers, composers and singers, as far back as history goes, have all brought into their masterpieces the theme of mothers' love and love for mothers. Long before there

MOTHERS' DAY.

A Tribute by J. Austin Shaw.

The beautiful hands of my mother dear,
At rest 'neath the daisies for many a year—
Strange, is it not, as the shadows grow
And the eventide gathers, they thrill me so?—

Beautiful hands of the long ago,
Hands that so tenderly tolled, I know,
Tolled for me as my baby feet
Toddled along in the busy street,

Tolled, as sped on the years of my youth,
Patiently pointing the path of truth.
Beautiful, soothing, soft, white hands,
Pain would vanish at their commands.

Fears would scatter, and sorrow flee,
When those dear old hands were laid on me.
And those beautiful hands are as real to me,
After fifty years, as they used to be.

And I feel the thrill of her presence now,
And I see her smile as my head I bow,
And my heart o'erflows, with the passing hours,
And I dream of her, as I "Say It with Flowers."

was Christianity; long before there was an America, an England, a France, or any of their favorite national heroes; long before the coming of any of the events or persons who prompted the naming of special days to commemorate them; long before any of these, there were mothers.

The foundation of Mothers' day is a love that is indeed difficult to describe. It is told in a poem that ends thus:

Sir Leon paused, as if he would not breathe her name in careless mood, thus lightly to another,

He bent his head, as if to give that word the reverence due, and gently said, "My mother."

There, in the olden days, in the court banquet hall, each and every knight present gave a toast to the one he loved the most. This knight, the bravest, the most highly respected and the best loved knight in the hall, gave his toast to his mother. That deep, profound love for a mother which Sir Leon showed has not been at all dimmed by the passing of the centuries. Today the love for mother is as strong as, or even stronger than, in those days. That deep, underlying love and respect which that knight showed and which has been accentuated during the elapsed years, is what makes Mothers' day a day when everyone wants to show mother that she is loved and appreciated. That is why Mothers' day bids fair to outgrow any other national holiday. And especially does it promise well to the florists.

Human Nature.

Some have condemned the florists for seeming to commercialize the day. Rather should they be congratulated on the fact that the propaganda which they have spread has had its part in furthering the popularity of this wonderful day. Economic conditions and human nature demand that every holiday be a commercialized day for some line of industry. In the olden days, every man did everything for himself. If he wanted meat, he went to the forest and shot some game. If he wanted corn, he planted it. If he wanted clothes, he spun and made them himself. There was no grouped and specialized work. Now, there is such a specialized division of labor that every line of work has a special field. One man does or makes the thing which he can do or make the best. Another man does the same thing; in fact, all men over all the earth do the same thing. Each man gets pay for what he does, and in turn buys the things that he needs in order to return pay to the man who is in another line of work. So, when a person wants flowers, the only thing to do is to go to a man whose work is to sell flowers. And there is where human nature comes in. The first thing that a human being thinks of when he wants to show his love for someone else is to present that someone else with a gift of some kind. And flowers and love naturally go together. It was not the florists who designated flowers as the symbol of love. Long before there were any commercial florists the two were linked together. It is only natural that love, the sweetest thing on earth, should be symbolized by nature's most beautiful and delicate offspring—flowers. So it is the most natural thing possible that florists should be busy on Mothers' day.

Why Advertise?

You ask, "If that is the case, why advertise?" You advertise to let everyone in the country know that there is a Mothers' day and when it is. There are, comparatively, only a few who know that Mothers' day falls on the second Sunday in May. The majority of people would not know when to celebrate the day if it were not for the florists' advertising. And florists advertise to let all the people know that they can "Say It with Flowers" better than they can say it with any other article. There are approximately 110,000,000 persons in the United States and there are few of those who would not want to give flowers to a living mother or to wear flowers for a mother's memory. So each and every one of that number has to be told just when to wear them. The florists must advertise and advertise extensively if they want to get every one of these prospects in line to purchase flowers for Mothers' day.

And the florists are advertising. On the accompanying pages, there are several of the best examples of advertising for Mothers' day that have been printed in the papers in the last two years. There are several different means of conducting a Mothers' day advertising campaign. One way that is extremely popular is the group advertising.

Good Examples.

One page 25 are shown two good examples of this type of advertising. The florists in Milwaukee, the first to establish a local year-around coöperative advertising campaign, have found that each retailer gets as much good from general advertisements as he would if he went out on his own hook and advertised only his own store. The purpose of the two advertisements shown was to tell the people that Mothers' day was on a certain day and then to let the people buy at the most convenient place. For it was almost certain, when the people found out when the day was, that every store in the city would have enough work to keep it busy. These illustrations are striking examples of artistic and attention-getting copy which has that appeal to feeling that a Mothers' day advertisement should have.

The advertisement on page 27 is one that the florists of Worcester ran in the daily papers last year, in a coöperative campaign for Mothers' day advertising. It is an excellent example of what can be done simply with type and without expense for cuts or artistic decorations. In plain words, it tells when Mothers' day is, the purpose of the day and just the feeling that one has toward mother that inspires one to give her flowers.

Much Coöperative Advertising.

This coöperative advertising is far less expensive and can be carried on more extensively than if the florists all carried separate advertisements. And the results are just what are wanted; that is, the furtherance of the use of flowers on this day. And if more flowers are used, certainly all florists receive the benefits. The business gained by publicity will be split up among all the florists in the community and each and every one will receive his share according to the popularity of the neighborhood where he conducts his store.

Then there is another method of group advertising, such as was carried on in Hamilton, Ont., last year. Whole pages of the local newspapers were given over to Mothers' day advertising. At the head of the page was the general advertising for Mothers' day and below this general outline each florist had a space for his individual advertisement. This sort of advertisement has some of the advantages of both the individual and group advertising. It brings business to all florists, and especially to the ones who advertise individually, because the residents of their respective sections are led to those particular stores for their Mothers' day purchases.

Individual Advertising.

On this page there are specimens of individual advertising that are good. Individual advertising is done by some florists in cities where coöperative advertising is done, with the idea that specific direction to that store is needed in addition to the general urging to buy flowers for mother. Of course, where no local campaign is undertaken the only course is individual advertising. The advertisement of the Joy Floral Co., at Nashville, occupied ten inches two columns wide, while that of W. J. Palmer & Son, at Buffalo, was twelve inches deep and three columns wide.

All advertising for Mothers' day, however, is not confined to newspaper advertisements. Many florists print and send to their customers small folders or cards telling the date of Mothers' day. A particularly successful one, from Scott the Florist, Buffalo, was a sheet of good-grade white paper with purple and green printing. At the top in the center was the picture of mother. Then, in green print, there was a brief explanation of when and what Mothers' day was and how well it could be observed with flowers. A purple and green vase of flowers in one corner completed the folder. It was a neat and appealing folder.

Distinctive Advertising.

There is one thing noticeable in almost all of the Mothers' day advertising. That is simplicity. There is seldom a long story told in the advertisements. They are short and seem to be full of feeling. That is as it should be. The day is one founded on a tender love; so the advertisements should be respectful of that emotion and show that florists are advertising because they realize the love that prompted observance of Mothers' day and because they want everyone to show it on that day. Because of that, Mothers' day cannot but keep on growing into a widely celebrated day. And advertising by florists will continue to make flowers the emblem of the day. Excellent service coupled with this advertising will make the second Sunday of May a big day for all individual florists in 1921 as in the years before.

ART IN EXHIBITIONS.

Seek Natural Surroundings.

The secret of good installation in the arrangement of flowers in public exhibitions, says Thomas Allen, vice-president of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, in one of its latest bulletins, lies in the ability of the person making it to visualize the whole effect of his exhibit before it is installed. It demands imagination; more than that, he who attempts the installation of a great floral exhibition should possess a cultivated taste and be endowed with a highly sensitive color sense. Without going into a deep philosophical consideration of terms, taste may be defined concisely as a love and appreciation of beauty, and beauty is a quality that arouses a pleasurable intellectual emotion, always followed by a feeling of attraction and affection for the object that caused it.

We are told that "flowers are most beautiful as seen growing in their natural surroundings." If this aphorism is true, then all our exhibitions are based upon a false premise, for nothing could be more unnatural or artificial than the halls, with brick walls and wooden floors, in which we install them. It is one of the conditions of our climate and civilization. We do not attempt to grow flowers in such surroundings, but we do show them there, and in showing them most exhibitors make an attempt to simulate nature in their installations. In one regard we have a decided advantage over nature. Nature furnishes the material, but we have control over the material, and by skill, contrivance and ingenuity we regulate beauty and produce a work of art, and we concentrate in a comparatively small space what, practically, it took the whole world to produce. Of course, we deceive ourselves in attempting so-called natural arrangements, for the whole situation is absolutely artificial, but we may comfort ourselves with the thought that "the sole object of art is the beautiful."

Boston Spring Show.

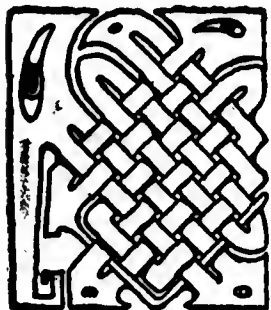

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society held at Boston in March, 1920, a great exhibition of orchids and spring-flowering plants and, as it proved to be the most ambitious and most successful flower show ever staged in this country,

WEAR A FLOWER FOR MOTHER.

Won't you wear a little posy on the eighth of May?
It will serve as a reminder that we then have Mothers' day.
Just a rose, carnation, tulip—any fragrant kind will do;
You will feel a satisfaction that to mother you are true.

Just a flower of purest fragrance, for our best and truest friend,
She who stands by you in trouble and a helping hand will lend;
She who laughs when you are happy and who cries when you are sad,
She who looks with disapproval when you happen to be bad.

Just a posy, any color, so she'll know you don't forget.
She'll be happy in the feeling that you're thinking of her yet;
Even though she has departed, wear a flower on this day,
Think of mother, here and yonder, on the eighth day of May.

WINDOW ADVERTISING.

Even When Costly, It Pays.

"Cost never enters our minds when making a window display," commented R. Clyde Sauer, window decorator for George C. Shaffer, of Washington, D. C. "During the orchid season there was no less than $1,000 worth of those flowers in our window display. It brought lots of trade, but of course it was not always orchids the customers were buying. I just want to bring out the point that window displaying is the finest kind of advertisement and, no matter how costly it is, it always returns proportionate profits.

"Flowers are acknowledged the most perishable of merchandise, but, withal, the most appealing to all classes at all times. We use our best cut flowers and plants for display, not those on the verge of fading because we know they will die anyway with no opportunity for sale, as many think. I note little street urchins pressing their noses against our windows looking longingly at the flowers, tired men and women hesitating in their homeward journey to view the display, fashionable society stopping machines for a glimpse of nature's beauty, and the hurried business man compelled to halt a moment. That is the true science of window advertisement—to demand the attention of people in all walks of life."

Appealing Arrangements.

Asked as to his procedure of window decorations, Mr. Sauer said: "Sometimes I find a symphony of a single color is most appealing, such as the yellow scheme I had in one of the Easter windows, in which yellow jonquils, tulips and other flowers of the same color formed the central figures amid canaries in gilded cages. Straw mats, ribbons and stands of the same shade followed out the color scheme. This display told the story of spring and joy. Sometimes the blending of the colors of many flowers or the variegated colors of an individual species make an attractive display. I have made a window of simple woodland flowers appealing to the public. No matter what the scheme, it must carry some note of appeal.

"Uniqueness also lends to the attractiveness of a floral display. A daring contrast in flowers or ribbons will call the attention of the passer-by. A freak of nature or a flower with unusual color or the first blossom is an excellent advertisement. Draperies also play an important part in our window displays. We spend thousands of dollars on the velours alone that we use.

Seasonal Displays.

"Objects, especially those of a seasonal nature, should be taken into account. The heart for St. Valentine's day, the cross for the Lenten season, the egg and chickens and rabbits for Easter, pumpkins and witches for Halloween, all have a telling value for the florist if he knows how to blend them with his wares. The life of the woods, as birds and small animals, offer assistance.

"Figures may be used judiciously in seasonal displays. Our display that won the first prize for the best window in the city was that of a wedding procession in the month of June. There were the bride with her shower bouquet, the groom with a flower in his button-hole, the bridesmaids with bouquets, etc. All the figures were kewpies. Shower bouquets and flowers appropriate for the wedding formed the background of the window scheme. It must be remembered that these flowers had to be changed daily to maintain their freshness. And that is one of the things for which the florist has to be on the constant lookout—the fading or drooping flower or plant. No other business demands such constant watch or constant change of display, be it in the window, on the counter or in the ice chest. The eye of the admirer or customer must never be permitted to be jarred by a faded or drooping bloom. That is one of the reasons why a florist's display is costly." W. H.

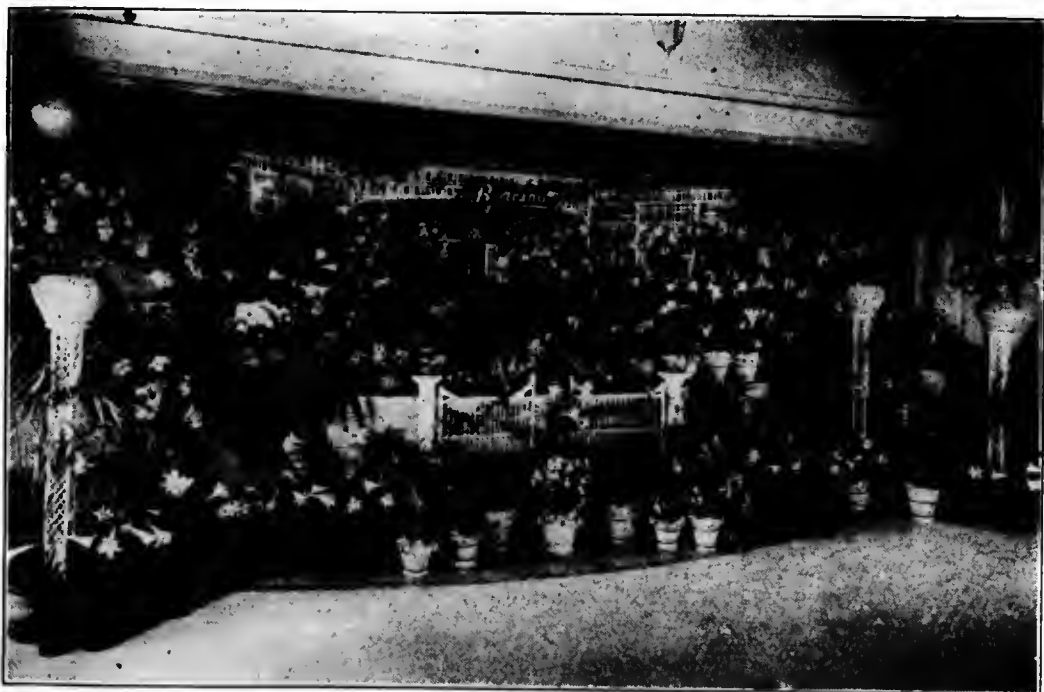

HOTEL FLORISTS.

Realizing that hotel patrons are the likeliest customers of a flower shop, retailers have been quick to locate adjacent to large hotels of high standing and of late have found a shop within the hotel itself an exceedingly attractive enterprise. Today a census of leading hotels would find a flower shop in the majority of them. In some cases the florist rents a shop in the hotel building, just as he would in an office building, retaining his own identity as in any other location. In some cases the florist runs the store as an adjunct to the hotel, either under the hotel name or his own, and works on a commission basis, either paying the hotel a fixed percentage of his receipts in lieu of rent, or receiving from the hostelry a percentage of the profits in lieu of salary. Then, too, there are cases where the hotel has established a flower shop of its own, paying the manager a fixed salary, but these are not so numerous as the other forms of management.

In the Palace hotel, San Francisco, is a flower shop that has been particularly successful under its present manager, Fred Bertrand, who has shown marked ability in catering to the tourists who patronize that stopping place. Since Mr. Bertrand purchased the flower business in the Palace hotel he has moved the stand to a new location in the lobby, where he has more space and better display facilities than under the old arrangement. The stand itself has been extended and new features have been added, greatly increasing its attractiveness. This flower shop is of white latticework and gives the effect of an artistic conservatory. White wicker baskets, on tall stands, add to the graceful appearance. The illustration on this page gives a view of Mr. Bertrand's shop as it appeared dressed up for Easter.

In addition to specializing on baskets and other decorative flower work, Mr. Bertrand carries a line of fresh and dried fruits put up in attractive boxes and packages to appeal to hotel guests and especially to eastern visitors. He is also adding a large showing of favors and novelties. One of the best advertising mediums, so far, however, is a canary bird, whose song brings people from all over the first floor of the hotel to see him. Mr. Bertrand has had several offers to buy the bird, but will not part with it.

BECKMANN AND HIS WORK.

It is not every day that a florist is called in to have his picture taken standing beside one of his pieces which has given more than ordinary satisfaction. Yet that is just what happened to G. A. Beckmann, of Middletown, O., and that is why the photograph of Mr. Beckmann and his piece appears on this page. The C. L. & N. railway ordered the piece for a young man who had been an engineer on the railroad. The officials were so pleased with the completed piece that they insisted upon Mr. Beckmann having his picture taken beside the piece. It stood five and a half feet high and was five feet across. The border was of Russell roses, swainsona and galax leaves. The center was set in pink and white carnations and tulips and the letters and emblem were of red freesia. This was just one of the eighteen pieces that Mr. Beckmann made for this funeral. Another one was a shower wreath which stood over seven feet high.

ried vs. White, 97 Tenn. 36, 36 S. W. 393, 32 L. R. A. 782, where, speaking of the landlord, the court said:

"It does not make him an insurer to the tenant. On the contrary, in the ordinary contracts of letting, it does not imply any warranty on the part of the landlord that the leased premises are in a safe and habitable condition, since the tenant ordinarily has it in his power to inspect the premises and so accept them at his own risk.

"In Jaffe vs. Hartean, 56 N. Y. 398 (S. C., 15 A. R. 438), it was held that a lessor of buildings, in the absence of fraud or any agreement to that effect, is not liable to the lessee or others lawfully upon the premises for their condition, or that they are tenantable and may be safely and conveniently used for the purposes for which they are apparently intended.

"It is urged that the failure on the part of the complainant to repair these premises amounted to a constructive eviction of the defendants. This could not, however, be true unless the duty of making repairs rested upon the lessor.

"The mere fact, however, that the premises become untenable, if such condition is not the result of any wrongful act of commission or omission on the part of the landlord, cannot be the basis of an eviction." 16 R. C. L. p. 686.

Legally Obligated.

"It is insisted that the complainant became legally obligated to make repairs by reason of the promise of her son and agent heretofore referred to. We think, however, this promise was absolutely without consideration. The agreement of the defendants to remain and to pay the rent notes furnishes no consideration for this promise to repair, even if the authority of the agent in this respect be conceded. The lessees were bound to pay the rent notes and the agreement relied on was without consideration.

LEASING PREMISES.

For Business Purposes.

A florist who takes a lease on premises for use in conducting his business takes them as he finds them, without any obligation on the landlord's part to make repairs, except as the landlord may agree to make repairs or may be guilty of fraud in concealing defective conditions. And a mere naked promise on the part of the landlord, made during the tenancy, to make repairs is not legally binding upon him unless supported by some new consideration.

These important rules of law were laid down recently by the Tennessee Supreme court in the case of Boyd vs. McCarty, 222 Southwestern Reporter, 528. The facts of the case, as found by the court, are substantially as follows:

In 1910 the plaintiff leased property near the gate of a cemetery in Memphis to S. G. Hexter for greenhouse purposes. Hexter conducted this business until 1916, when he transferred his lease to the defendant, McCarty, who continued the florists' business on the premises. Certain rental notes which were given by Hexter and assumed by McCarty remained unpaid and the plaintiff brought suit on them. The defendants set up a counterclaim for damages resulting from the dilapidated condition of the premises. Trial of the action resulted in a decree in favor of the defendants. But this decree has been reversed by the Tennessee Supreme court.

Proof Shows Condition.

The proof shows that the house on this property was in a dilapidated condition when the lease was made. It does not appear, however, to have been in such condition that it amounted to a nuisance to anybody prior to 1915. At that time the city authorities condemned the house as unsafe and ordered it to be torn down, but this order was never enforced.

The defendants' claim for damages arises in this way: The greater portion of the lot not occupied by the house was covered with greenhouses. Defendants alleged and introduced proof tending to show that in March, 1917, bricks and shingles from the old house were blown down on the greenhouses and broke the glass and that the flowers and plants in the greenhouses were thereby exposed and damaged by the cold. This damage in March, 1917, is estimated to have been about $80. In December, 1917, the glass in the greenhouses was again broken in the same way during a severe spell of weather and the defendants claimed that the contents of the greenhouses were damaged to the extent of about $1,300. After the last accident McCarty vacated the premises.

Ceased to Pay Rent.

The defendants ceased to pay rent notes after the loss in March, 1917, and called upon the complainant to repair the old house and make it safe. In a letter from the son of the complainant, who is alleged to have been her agent in response to this demand of the defendants for repairs, he agreed that the necessary repairs would be made. The defendants also testified to other assurances from the complainant's son that he would have such repairs made.

Deciding that, on these facts, the plaintiff was entitled to recover on the rent notes, the Supreme court says:

"Under these circumstances the chancellor was of opinion that defendants were entitled to recoup their damages against the complainant's demand for unpaid rent. In this we think his honor was in error.

"The lease contract contains no covenant on the part of the landlord to make any repairs to the premises demised. The defendant Hexter was familiar with the condition of the property when he leased it and defendant McCarty was familiar with the condition of the property when he took a transfer of the original lease to himself. There was no fraud whatever on the part of the lessor.

"We think under such circumstances the tenant takes the premises as he finds them at his own risk and there is no implied covenant to be ascribed to the landlord that they are fit for the purposes for which they are rented. It therefore follows that the landlord is not responsible to his tenant under such circumstances for damages occasioned by the landlord's failure to repair them.

"Principles governing this case have been set out by the court in Schmalz-which hold that, when the property leased is condemned by municipal authorities, the cost of tearing it down or repairing it, as between landlord and tenant, must be borne by the former. We do not think these cases are pertinent. It has been expressly decided in this state that the destruction of leased property by municipal action does not relieve the tenant from the obligations of his lease. Mere threat of condemnation, therefore, would not affect the contract rights of the parties." S.

A FLORAL CURTAIN.

The "final curtain," shown in the illustration on this page, was made at the store of Wolfskill's & Morris Goldenson, Los Angeles, Cal. It was for the funeral of D. J. Grauman, father of Sid Grauman, the well known theatrical man of that city. Carnations of various shades were used as a groundwork. The roses in the raised portion were mostly Ophelia, set off with lilac. It was a beautiful piece and was much admired. H. R. R.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

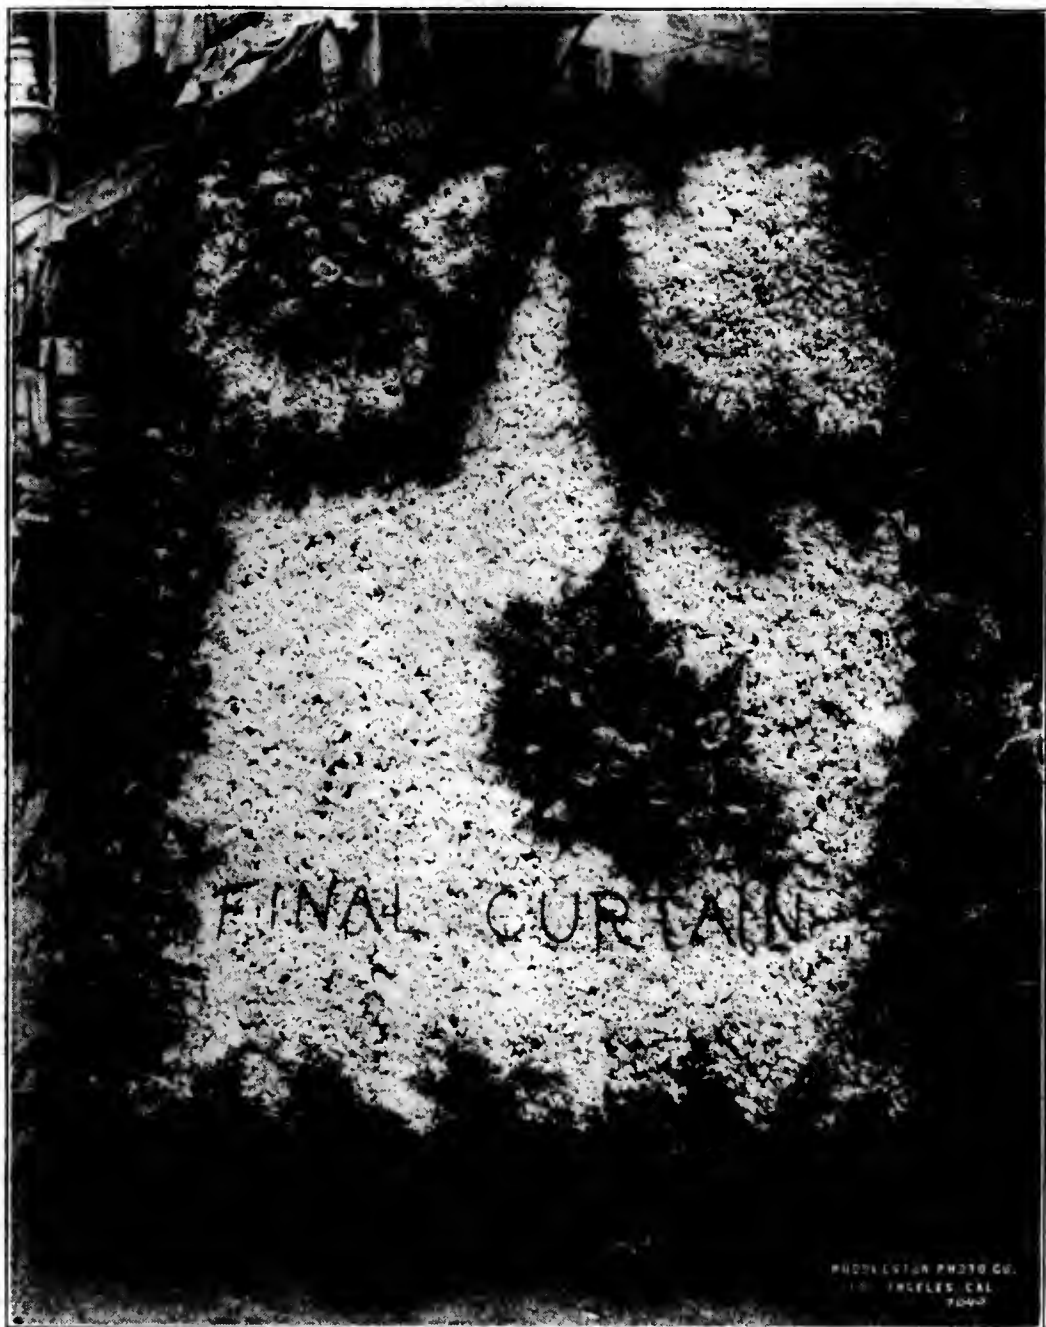

The Market.

The dark, wintry weather, with freezing temperature and considerable snow, which came last Sunday and Monday, followed by days of rain and coolness, has had its effect on the flowers. Practically all kinds of stock have shortened up and better prices have been realized throughout the week. This cold spell has also relieved the high tension at which most of the seedsmen and nurserymen have been working recently. Fruit experts report that considerable damage has been done to the fruit trees by the recent storm and that little fruit may be expected from the early varieties of cherries, peaches, etc., which were in full blossom. Retail florists, however, have been kept busy and report a favorable business, the greater part of which has been funeral work. Local shipments have been much lighter and out-of-town shipments have been found considerably so. In some cases there has not been enough to go around.

Exceptionally good roses reach us and the quality is particularly good. More medium stock, however, can be used than the long grade. Columbia, Martinet, Premier, Ophelia, Maryland, Hoosier Beauty, Cook, Sunburst, Ward and the Killarneys are all in fair supply. Sweet peas are shortening up considerably, but there is a good demand for them. Yellow daisies reach us in abundance, but the sale has dropped off somewhat. The supply of carnations is not nearly so large as usual, but the quality is good. Many Easter lilies were seen last week and the demand was good. Violets are in fair supply, but the lateness of the season is showing on them. Forget-me-nots, pansies, mignonette and marguerites are among the smaller flowers seen. Valley is good and the demand keeps up pretty well. There is no particular demand for orchids or gardenias of late. Outdoor bulbous stock is making an appearance, but the freezing weather of a week ago hurt the stock considerably. Not much bulbous stock is being received from the greenhouses now, except potted hyacinths.

Various Notes.

tremely heavy week with all kinds of funeral work. They have a large quantity of bedding stock, which is moving well, considering weather conditions.

Louis Collatos had a beautiful display of flowers in his window last week. In the center of the window was a beautiful, tall, willow lamp finished in blue gold. Yellow flowers were used in the display and the combination was pleasing and artistic. He reports business good.

J. Cleary, of Driving Park avenue, is doing a nice business in that section of the city, and finds that, compared with last year's business, things are most satisfactory. Funeral work is in good demand.

David Scott, of Corfu, N. Y., is shipping to the market some fine snapdragons, peas and calceolarias, which find a ready sale.

Some good Columbia and Ophelia are received from the Fairport Greenhouses every day, and these have a quick sale.

George Keller is cutting fine Easter lilies and orchids, which were found particularly welcome last week.

Miss Stevens, of George B. Hart's office, spent the week-end with her parents at Seneca Falls, N. Y.

Salter Bros. are showing some splendid calceolarias.

Al. Rayton, of Irondequoit, is cutting some fine snapdragons, which find a ready sale. His bedding stock, he says, is in splendid shape and a lot of it is ready for moving.

Hugo Teute is growing an enormous quantity of primulas for Christmas flowering. He is cutting some particularly good Laddie carnations, which are well formed and of excellent color.

Several of the Rochester florists made the trip to Buffalo Friday afternoon, April 22, to attend the Western New York Publicity Committee's banquet.

Excellent newspaper pictures of Hiram E. Wilson were seen in the Herald April 18. He is shown cutting down a small orchard which he himself planted sixty years ago. He is now attaining a ripe old age and is seen daily in the greenhouses. He is active and in fairly good health.

Max the Florist had a large quantity of funeral work during the middle of the week. He reports business as good.

Canton, Ill.—The mother of George W. Jacobs is in a critical condition following a fracture of the hip sustained three weeks ago. Monday, April 25, she was in an unconscious condition. She is the widow of B. Jacobs, who established a greenhouse in Canton in 1878. This is now operated by the son.

S. A. F. PUBLISHES

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

Honor Roll Printed.

The S. A. F. publicity committee is at present concentrating its attention upon plans to continue the national advertising as soon as possible. The slogan, "Say It with Flowers," as all know, became pretty well established through the first three years of our campaign, becoming an asset to the trade of very considerable worth. This asset should not be jeopardized; hence the committee's desire to resume magazine advertising at the earliest possible date.

The committee believes it due to the subscribers that the sums paid into the campaign fund be publicly recorded, and, therefore, hereafter will furnish the trade papers regularly with lists of subscribers, with the amounts actually paid into the fund, instead of the amounts of subscriptions guaranteed. Such a list appears below, showing total receipts since January 1 last, amounting to $21,525. Bills are going out to subscribers who are delinquent in respect to their guarantees, and the committee urges that remittances be made to the secretary without delay. Nothing but the need of funds is holding the campaign back, and it is not believed that those who are in arrears want to hamper the work.

Special Efforts.

It might be pointed out that although the sum mentioned as received since January 1 is rather large, it should be remembered that it had to be drawn upon to meet obligations incurred by the committee in connection with the last advertising, and also to clean up the contract made for billboards. The latter expense, however, forms an asset which will be realized upon to the full, as billboard sales work off the stock on hand. When all are disposed of, these will be live advertising in force of inestimable value and will have cost the campaign little or nothing.

Incidentally, it may be said that another effort is to be made right away to get personally in touch with prospective subscribers. J. Fred Ammann will start about May 8 on a trip to cover fifteen of the largest cities in the west, with the idea of forming in each allied florists' associations to cover district territory, which will engage in publicity work and turn in to the national campaign fund a liberal portion of the subscriptions collected, for national publicity, using the remainder for local publicity. This plan has already been tried, and with success, associations already formed in Chicago, St. Louis, Buffalo, New York and Portland, Ore., contributing a percentage of their funds to the national movement.

Trade Exhibits.

The secretary has prepared a floor plan covering the area set apart for the trade exhibits, and copies of it will be distributed shortly. It must be borne in mind that the space rental, $1.75 per square foot, will include railing, background and the official sign. It is the idea of the committee to have the exhibits at this show uniform in appearance, to enhance the decorative effect of the show. At other shows the irregular appearance of the trade exhibits has greatly marred the beauty created by the competitive exhibits, resulting in criticism which should not be forthcoming at any show inaugurated by florists.

Considerable interest is already shown in the competition for the grand capital prize, several entries already being promised. At the next meeting of the committee, regulations as to dimensions of exhibits will be decided upon, and opening and closing dates for entries fixed. It is expected that a meeting of the local executive committee will be held in Cleveland within the next two or three weeks, at which the chairman and secretary of the national flower show committee will be present. Much important business will be transacted at this meeting.

A WORLD TOUR FOR FLORISTS.

Ralph M. Ward's Proposal.

The late Ralph M. Ward visited so many places of more than ordinary interest to florists during his last trip to world after the war," he wrote in disclosing his plan, "as there are many important places, horticulturally, to visit. Get 100 or more good fellows interested and charter a steamer for the journey. There are plenty of florists who could well afford it and such a trip would be instructive to them and of great benefit to the trade."

Mr. Ward made out an itinerary for such a trip. It is as follows:

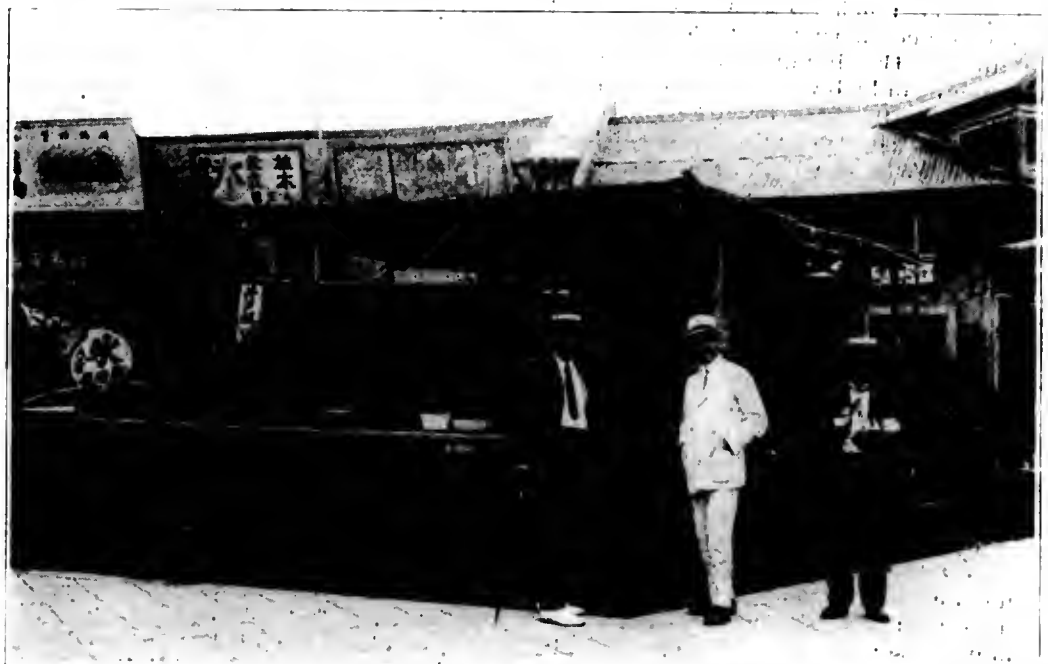

California.
Honolulu.
Japan.
China.
Celebes.
Java.
Straits Settlements, with a side trip to Siam.
Rangoon (Burma).
Calcutta.
Ceylon.
Through the Suez canal to Italy.
Through Europe and then to New York.

During Mr. Ward's trip he visited many botanical gardens, florists, nurserymen and experiment farms from Siberia down the coast, through India and in Java.

"Perhaps due to the war, many English gardens are sadly neglected this year," said Mr. Ward. "In Singapore the director of the gardens was drilling when I got there. Everything there was war. In Calcutta it was the same. The gardens in French Cochinchina at Saigon were in a little better shape.

Tropical Gardens of Java.

"But at Buitenzorg, Java, they were grand, of course, as they are the finest tropical gardens in the world. There are also, in connection with the gardens, museums, a herbarium, a library and several laboratories always open to those interested, while one of them is set aside for the use of visiting biologists for research work. Besides, there is a fine collection of reptiles and insects. As the gardens are exactly 100 years old, the great variety of trees and palms can be seen at their best. The gardens are classified well and everything is plainly labeled. There also is a fine collection of orchids, some of them with as many as 3,000 flowers, twined around the big trees.

the Orient and to Asia, that when he returned he proposed that the members of the trade make a similar journey.

"I think the S. A. F. or someone should arrange for a trip around the "Business all over the Orient was good. One can sell anything he can get boats to take there."

E. H. Wilson, of the Arnold Arboretum, Harvard University, who was in the Orient making a collection for that institution, chiefly of pines, traveled with Mr. Ward from Mukden to Dairen. The accompanying illustration shows Mr. Ward, Mr. Wilson and Inosuke Arai in front of a florist's shop in Dairen (Dabney), Manchuria. The shop is not like those of Fifth avenue, but is typical of the country from which the picture came.

ADIANTUM WRIGHTII.

Adiantum Wrightii is the name of the fern that Thomas H. Wright was so fondly handling in the photograph in The Review of March 31. It is a new variety raised in the greenhouses of Wright's Flower Shop, Los Angeles, Cal. Mr. Wright considers it a cross between Adiantum Williamsii and A. gloriosum, the latter being a synonym or, rather, a local name for Adiantum Glory of Moordrecht. But this is probably only conjecture, as anyone acquainted with fern hybrids will understand. It is lighter in color than A. Williamsii, much stronger in growth, less compact and a wonderful keeper.

The variety first appeared about six years ago and has been freely used since by Mr. Wright in plant boxes, baskets and other arrangements. The most convenient size is 3 to 4-inch stock.

To quote Mr. Wright, it makes "a fine, long, bushy 4-inch plant and keeps wonderfully well when grown in a temperature of about 60 to 65 degrees. You could not ask for anything that grows more rapidly and when taken out of this temperature, the fronds do not curl. I have been using it as a cut fern almost exclusively because of its excellent keeping qualities. Customers ask for it because they know that it will keep as long as roses do."

For the last three years it has been grown on raised benches in the same house with California, gloriosum and Croweanum and has outproduced any of these by two to one, to say nothing of its excellent keeping qualities. It is most effective when used in conjunction with orchids and roses and, by breaking up the large fronds, excellent material for funeral work is obtained. It is not uncommon to cut fronds that are three feet long and some plants have produced as many as seventy-five of these in one season. The same soil as that used for other ferns is used for this and all are mulched with decayed horse manure. Adiantum Wrightii, being a vigorous grower, is naturally a strong feeder. Mr. Wright intends to send this fern out in the fall, when he will have prepared about 150,000 plants of 2½-inch stock. H. R. R.

SEATTLE STARTS

Meeting of Retailers and Growers.

At an enthusiastic and well attended meeting held at the New Washington hotel Tuesday evening, April 12, preliminary work was completed on an organization to include both the growers and the retailers of Seattle and vicinity. More than fifty were in attendance. So much interest was shown that it was necessary to arrange an overflow table in the banquet room before all present could be seated. The organization committee, as named by Gene Sandahl, of the Burdett Co., consists of Harry A. Crouch, of the Woodlawn Flower Shop; William F. Holmes, of the Hollywood Gardens, and William S. Goldsberry, of Kenney's Home of Flowers. These represented the retailers. Ralph Richardson, of Stuber & Richardson; Frank Chervenka, of the Woodlawn Park Floral Co., and A. B. Matthieson represented the growers. The first-named member is chairman, and the date of the next meeting and all other necessary arrangements have been left in the hands of this committee.

Gene Sandahl, who handled practically all of the details of this successful get-together meeting, acted as toastmaster and he called on three of the men present to give prepared talks. Harry Crouch spoke on the "Retail Question." The matter of profits necessary in the retail business was shown to be a generally unstudied subject, and the speaker brought out the fact that in order to assure a fifteen per cent return, the raw materials used in funeral work must not exceed thirty per cent of the sales price; those in cut flowers should stop at thirty-three and one-third per cent and those in potted plants thirty-five per cent.

Ralph Richardson followed with a talk on "Growers' Problems." He showed that organization is essential for the success of the wholesaler of flowers. He brought out the fact that the retailer would really welcome a dependable supply of flowers at a price which would be reasonable, and that here again organization offered the one sure way of bringing this desired condition to pass.

Advantages of Organization.

W. D. Desmond, of Ridsen & Desmond, who was Mr. Sandahl's chief assistant in planning this meeting, closed the formal program with a talk on "Coöperation and Organization of Florists." Prestige for the industry in the matter of public opinion and in fighting any adverse legislation which might arise; a means of fighting unfair sales competition and bringing together the best minds of the industry on its common problems were the advantages pointed out by Mr. Desmond in such an organization as is projected here. He called for an instant start and so well did the matter please those present that a motion calling for the naming of the above committee followed at once. In addition, Mr. Sandahl read a letter from Albert Pochelon regarding publicity for florists to be gained through the coming visit of George Beban in his vaudeville playlet, "The Sign of The Rose"; an offer from J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., and H. V. Swenson, of Chicago, national organizers for the S. A. F., and a letter from Dr. Walter A. Moore, of the Hollywood Gardens, expressing his regret at being unable to be present.

This was followed by informal talks by various growers and retailers, among those called upon being Wallace Beall, of the Beall Greenhouses, at Vashon Island; Frank Chervenka, of the Woodland Park Floral Co.; A. B. Matthieson, John Van Alst, Thomas Wylie and George Trafton. These were the growers. Felix Rosaia; William Holmes, of the Hollywood Gardens; Dr. Francis A. Allen, of the Pinehurst Floral Shop; Harry Crouch and A. Moore, of the Woodlawn Flower Shop; Carl E. Melby, of Melby's Flower Shop, and William Goldsberry were the retailers who spoke. Fred W. Gust, Pacific coast representative of the McCallum Co., Pittsburgh, and E. A. Aldrich, of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, spoke for the knights of the grip.

Distinctive Decorations.

Coöperation in the decorating of the banquet room led to the production of one of the most beautiful works of this sort ever seen here. The tables were grouped about a hollow square in which stood three fountains and two benches of spring flowers, flanked by ferns and greens. On the speakers' table stood a tall silver vase of Columbia roses and at the opposite end was a lower basket of the same flower. On the long tables were centerpieces of daffodils, Ophelia roses and greens. The tablecloth was strewn with daffodils. The walls were a mass of salal, Oregon grape and spring fruit blossoms. The Columbia roses were grown by the Hollywood Gardens. F. J. Bell supplied the daffodils and spring blossoms; the greens were brought in by Messrs. Rodda and Sherbac; the centerpieces came from Rosaia Bros. and the Hollywood Gardens and Kenney's Home of Flowers supplied the fountains. The decorating was done by Fred W. Gust, W. D. Desmond; William Goldsberry, of Kenney's Home of Flowers, and G. Peterson and A. Moore, of the Woodlawn Floral Shop. Punch of unusual merit in these days of the eighteenth amendment was supplied by Felix Rosaia.

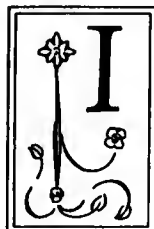

Those in attendance at the banquet were: Growers: S. Holcroft, P. Hirleman, Frank Chervenka, Ralph Richardson, W. D. Desmond, John Van Alst, S. Johnson, Wallace M. Beall, Allen Beall, Frank Bell, Fred Gasch, Chris Joehinsen, E. M. Goldsack, Walter A. Scott, Joseph Stuber, James Wylie, Thomas Wylie, F. W. Winters, Mack Reese, H. M. Hansen, C. H. Benson, George M. Trafton, Gus Burkman, Henry Hammerlund, Gene Sandahl, J. McMonies, Ernest Meyers, Leonard Johnson and A. B. Matthieson.

Retail trade: Thomas Rhoades, David L. Jones, Harry A. Crouch, Felix Rosaia, Gus Peterson, William S. Goldsberry, Sylvester Meucci, Carl E. Melby, Bert Linegar, David Lenchner, A. Moore, Albert Ramage, Russell L. Jones, E. C. O'Neil, Dr. Francis A. Allen, E. W. Clark, N. B. Healey, William F. Holmes and Lambert E. Peder-son.

Travelers and press: Fred Gust, E. A. Aldrich, W. F. Vander Schoot, M. A. Snow and H. B. Mills.

The committee named on arrangements is to report its findings soon and permanent organization is expected to be under way before the pending visit of J. F. Ammann and H. V. Swenson.

GROWING DUTCH BULBS IN AMERICA

IT HAS always been cheaper to import them than to grow them in this country—that is a brief expression of the prevailing prewar opinion in regard to Dutch bulbs and many other products of the soil. But, however well founded that opinion may have been in the past, “it is certain that in the future the conditions will be different.” So says a bulletin recently issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. And the florists’ trade realizes, indeed, that conditions already are “different.”

The prewar preference for the imported Dutch bulbs—not to speak now of other articles of stock—was greatly strengthened, also, by the general impression that the bulbs could not be successfully produced in this country, but would deteriorate from year to year in the American environment, so that a renewal of the stock from foreign sources would soon be necessary. In conformity with this discouraging creed, the entire annual crop of bulbs grown in the United States has seldom been worth more than $25,000, though in normal times the bulbs used per year in this country have approximated $2,000,000 in value.

Reasons for Failure.

Yet experience has proved, as attested by the government bulletin already quoted, that “narcissus bulbs of perfect quality can be grown in this country over a wide latitude, and tulips, though more exacting in their requirements, can also be produced successfully. Those best informed are just as sanguine about the production of hyacinth bulbs, though decisive tests on these have not yet been made.”

The principal reasons, apparently, for the frequent failures in the propagation of Dutch bulbs in this country are, first, careless and neglectful culture, especially with reference to the use of fertilizers, and, second, the selection of an unsuitable location.

In regard to general neglect in culture, the aforementioned bulletin has these suggestions: “We may gain a valuable lesson as to the requirements and suitability of these bulbs from the long private experiences of those who have flowered them either in pots or in borders in different regions and then tried to carry on their propagation. It is the common experience that these stocks gradually decrease in size in the hands of the small grower. This is not always a proof of lack of adaptability, because it is seldom that the stocks are properly handled. They become overgrown with weeds, are left undug too long, or are improperly fertilized.

“The fertilizer requirement of bulbs is not sufficiently appreciated in this country. These stocks require heavy fertility to produce well and to maintain their size. We have sometimes thought that the better success with narcissus than with other bulbs is due to the fact that this group requires less fertility and is exceedingly impatient of any soil loaded up with organic matter, even when well incorporated. This does not mean that the narcissus requires a lean soil, but that a heavily fertilized soil must not be in contact with the bulb. The practice of rotation by the bulb grower on the other side of the Atlantic is in this particular instructive. The formula of the rotation may be stated as follows:

Rotation of Crops.

“A heavy application of cow manure in winter is followed by a crop of pota-

are the best localities for the growing of the staple farm crops, so experience must answer the same question with reference to this comparatively new American crop, Dutch bulbs.

Sometimes only a slight difference in latitude or longitude may make a vital difference in conditions. Thus, though Dutch bulbs thrive well on the north Pacific seaboard, they have proved to be a disappointment in a certain district of northern California, a district which would scarcely be called interior or inland, being only forty miles from the coast. There the hot, dry period arrives too early to permit the full growth and perfect maturity of the bulbs.

“Suitable temperature, moisture and soil conditions,” says the government bulletin, “obtain in both our Atlantic and Pacific coast regions. In the interior of the eastern United States, as far west as Illinois and Michigan at least, conditions are favorable enough for success. The temperature is not so favorable as in the cooler coastal climate, but, in our opinion, where friable, well-drained soils occur the conditions are generally as satisfactory for the production of Dutch bulbs as for the common staple crops usually grown there.

Seacoast Conditions.

“Thus far, the commercial production of Dutch bulbs has in this country been confined mainly to the Atlantic and Pacific seaboard, in the former north of Norfolk and in the latter north of San Francisco. The available data are more or less meager in either case, but good bulbs have been produced in both regions.

“The western bulb area appears to be rather narrow, being confined to a strip of territory which receives suitable rainfall and is sufficiently affected by seacoast conditions to prevent rapid transition from winter to summer. The eastern area is much more indefinite as to width, as the heat and moisture conditions are not so sharply defined.

“In the interior, in the Ohio and Mississippi valleys, small quantities of tulip and narcissus bulbs have been grown sufficiently long to show the possibility of the successful production of many varieties.

“Some of the hardier and more robust of the narcissus varieties thrive well and naturalize even in the gulf states, but this region is best adapted to the so-called South France stocks. The growing of tulips and Dutch hyacinths probably should not be attempted there.

“Contrary to what would be generally supposed, it is not too cold for tulips and narcissi to succeed as far north as Sitka, Alaska. They thrive well along the entire northern border of the United States, wherever the mois-toes dug early, and these are followed by hyacinths one year, tulips the second year and then narcissi. When the latter are left in for two years they commonly receive a top-dressing of manure the second year. The soil in which the narcissus is planted in this rotation has produced a crop of potatoes, one of hyacinths and one of tulips. The application of a mulch of manure always works well with the narcissus, because the fertility is secured in the form of leachings. The relative fertility requirements of the bulbs are well exemplified in this rotation.”

PROVED PRACTICAL

“The success with the three main groups of these bulbs on the northern Pacific coast; the large production of a long list of narcissus varieties in southern Illinois and Virginia; the culture of Darwin and other tulips in Michigan, northern New York, Ontario and Virginia, and the admirable hyacinth bulbs often produced in private gardens throughout the region south of New York, under conditions of comparative neglect, would seem to prove sufficiently that we have an abundant territory adapted to growing these stocks.”

Turning our attention now to the other cause of failure, the selection of an unsuitable location, we shall find, it seems, that there are abundant opportunities for the choice of favorable regions in this broad land. Dutch bulbs, says the government bulletin, “succeed under a great diversity of conditions. Indeed, they seem to be as adaptable as ordinary cultivated crops.” But, just as experience has demonstrated what ture conditions are suitable through the entire season."

The nature of the soil, of course, is important, but the range of choice in this respect is wider than is commonly supposed. Sandy soils are generally preferred, but the government investigators have concluded that "success can be secured in bulb production on a friable loam soil, whether it has a preponderance of sand in its composition or not. In the experiments at Bellingham, Wash., thus far, better tulip and narcissus bulbs have been produced on silty soil than on the lighter sandy soils." On the other hand, the cost of cultivating light soil is relatively small. Even if especially heavy applications of fertilizer must be used on sandy soil, the expense of culture is still likely to be less than when the soil is heavy.

Results of Two Methods of Preparing Hyacinth Bulbs for Planting.

The foregoing remarks have had reference only to general culture and nothing has been said about the actual process of multiplying or propagating the bulbs. The methods of propagation, and especially the routine followed by specialists in propagating the group of bulbs called Dutch hyacinths, are thus described in the government bulletin:

Methods of Propagation.

"Dutch bulbs can be propagated from seed, but this form of reproduction is used only by the breeder. Tulips, narcissi and hyacinths reproduce naturally in another way also. Upon reaching maturity the bulbs divide into two or more bulblets, which are removed and grown to flowering size. The degree of splitting varies greatly, even in members of the same genus, and is modified by both cultural and handling methods. In practice, this is the commercial method of increasing the stocks of tulips and narcissi, and to some extent of hyacinths. The reproduction of the narcissus by this method will mean approximately a doubling each year. In the case of Darwin tulips about an eighty per cent increase each year may be expected, and in single early tulips a little less than this. So many factors are involved that it is difficult to give exact figures.

Process of Scooping or Scoring.

"While the propagation of the Roman hyacinth is essentially the same as that of the narcissus, the Dutch hyacinth is reproduced by a decidedly artificial process. It consists essentially of the destruction of the growing point of the bulb, causing the development of many growing points on the calloused edges of the severed scales. Two forms of this artificial reproduction are practiced. One, known as the 'scooping' method, consists of cutting out a convex section of the bulb base, removing the basal plate entirely and making the cut parallel to its upper surface. This is done with a curved scalpel or a round-bowled spoon sharpened on the edges. The other, known as the 'scoring' method, consists of making two to four cuts with a sharp knife across the base of the bulb, each cut being the diameter of the circular base and passing entirely through the basal plate and intersecting the other cuts in the growing point, which is destroyed.

Callousing the Cut Surfaces.

"It is a common practice to dip the cut surface of the scooped bulbs in a little air-slaked lime mixed with dry sand, to hasten their drying and prevent the growth of molds. As soon as the bulbs have been prepared by these methods they are placed in a room in which the temperature and moisture are under control. Some growers withhold heat for a time, simply keeping the bulbs in atmospheric temperatures; others apply a little heat immediately; but in either case a comparatively dry atmosphere is essential until the cut surfaces are calloused. This takes from ten days to two weeks. Too rapid desiccation during this period, however, must be avoided, or the center of the bulb will be injured. After callousing, the bulbs are kept in an artificial temperature and a high humidity for about three months. The temperature will vary widely, between 70 and 90 degrees, the object being to get a maximum development of bulblets without causing the bulbs to be forced into excessive leaf growth.

Buried While Callousing.

"It is a common practice to bury the scored bulbs under ordinary field conditions for ten days or two weeks and then bring them into the propagating house.

"At the end of the period of incubation, which will be early October, the propagated bulbs are planted in the same way as untreated bulbs.

"The rate of increase will vary not only with the method of cutting the bulbs, but also with the variety. Scooping gives a comparatively large number of uniform small bulblets, while the scored method produces a smaller number of bulblets, much less uniform in size but much larger. The former method is much more favored, on account of the more uniform progeny, but it requires a longer time to bring the bulblets to maturity.

Rate of Reproduction.

"In practice, all bulbs with perfectly round bases are scooped, while those of such a character that they would not hold together if the bases were cut out are scored. In scored bulbs an average of fifteen bulblets would be considered satisfactory, as would thirty-five in scooped bulbs, but the number of bulblets may run as high as thirty with the former and sixty to 100 with the latter treatment.

"The building suitable for propagation is a simple affair, in which heat, moisture and ventilation are under control. At present this work is done by the Department of Agriculture in a boarded-up room in the basement of the bulb storage house, in which has been installed a hot water heating system. Light seems to be a factor of little consequence, except that provision should be made for good artificial light for use when examining the bulbs. At present most houses for this purpose in the Netherlands are constructed without glazing."

PLANTS IN BASEMENT STORE.

Our floral department is located in a cool, well ventilated basement, artificially lighted, but we experience great difficulty in keeping our plants. Fresh plants, of any variety, brought in from the greenhouse last not more than twenty-four hours, even buds and leaves dropping off. There is no gas; the store is electrically lighted throughout. There is plenty of steam heat, when any is needed. Would it help any to replace our electric lights with blue daylight bulbs? C. F. S.—Mich.

Plants should remain fresh far longer than twenty-four hours in such a basement store as you have. If it is cool and well ventilated, there is no reason why even flowering plants should not keep longer. It is likely that there is a leak of some illuminating or sewer gas, which causes this trouble. This would not be likely to occur if the basement had a fair amount of ventilation in it all night, as well as during the day. If the plants are carefully watered and looked after, it would certainly be advisable to see if any escaping gas is the troublemaker. The electric lights should do no particular harm to the plants. Of course, plants in a dark location will lose leaves and foliage more rapidly than where they get natural light, but plants should not go to pieces as rapidly as yours are doing. C. W.

GROWERS AT SPRINGFIELD

ST. LOUIS GROWERS MEET.

Good Attendance at Springfield.

The meeting of the St. Louis branch of the National Flower Growers' Association was held at Springfield, Ill., April 19, and was one of the best and most largely attended meetings of the branch since it was organized.

The St. Louis party, twenty-three strong, arrived at 11:25 a. m. via the Chicago & Alton, while the growers from the various towns in central, western and southern Illinois were not so many as was expected. The delegates were met by the entertainment committee, composed of W. J. Hembreiker, A. C. Brown and V. J. Cole, of Springfield, and were escorted to the St. Nicholas hotel, where the meeting was held.

Lunch was served at 12:15 p. m., in the meeting room. At luncheon, President Walter A. Amling introduced Oliver F. Davenport, of the Springfield Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Davenport welcomed the delegates and his remarks drew much applause.

J. F. Ammann, secretary of the national body, responded to Mr. Davenport's address in his usual eloquent manner.

Executive Committee Meeting.

After lunch, the executive committee held its meeting in an adjoining room, while Vice-president W. J. Pilcher, of St. Louis, presided over the main body.

President Amling presided at the executive meeting. Present were A. C. Brown, Springfield; J. W. Ross, Centralia; W. A. Rowe, Joseph Deutschmann and C. E. DeWever, St. Louis; J. A. Cole, Peoria, Ill., and H. Blixen, of Edwardsville, Ill.

After the minutes of the last meeting, held at Pana, Ill., were approved, communications read and bills ordered paid, the question of cooperative buying came up for discussion. This ended in a motion that a committee, consisting of W. A. Rowe, C. E. DeWever and Secretary Beneke, be appointed to have charge of all the buying for the members who make orders from the questionnaires that have been mailed out by the secretary.

The pot plant men's affairs will be looked after by a committee, consisting of L. J. Bourdet, C. E. DeWever and Albert Senger, all of St. Louis, Mo.

Also a committee, consisting of Frank Washburn, Bloomington, Ill., and H. Blixen, of Edwardsville, Ill., these to select the third member, was formed to look after the affairs of the retail growers.

The chair appointed as auditing committee, J. W. Ross, H. Blixen and J. A. Cole. All committees appointed are to report at the next board meeting. This meeting will be held at Edwardsville, May 17, on invitation of H. Blixen.

Next came the question as to the next regular meeting place of the organization. J. W. Ross extended an invitation to meet at Centralia, Ill., July 19, and, on motion, the invitation was accepted. The executive committee meeting then adjourned and the regular meeting of the body opened for business.

Main Session.

This was presided over by Walter Amling, who, following the program as arranged by the entertainment committee, called upon J. F. Ammann, the national secretary, for the opening address. Mr. Ammann spoke in a most interesting manner. He told the members what the organization has accomplished so far and pointed out the benefits the members would derive from it. His remarks were received enthusiastically and he was tendered a rising vote of thanks at their conclusion.

The secretary's report showed that the organization now has fifty-eight members, all of whom had paid their first quarter's dues and fourteen of whom had paid one year's dues in advance. Twenty-eight had responded to the call for the second quarter's dues. The total amount collected to date amounted to $856.67; total disbursements to date were $397.84, leaving a balance in the treasury of $458.83.

Treasurer Rowe showed in his report that he had a balance of $458.83. This report was also accepted, with the approval of the auditing committee.

The membership committee, through Chairman Joseph Deutschmann, reported ten new members. The committee was urged to keep on working. The Illinois committee on membership, through W. J. Hembreiker, reported progress and was urged to work harder.

Steidle Shows Carnation.

John Steidle, Olivette, Mo., staged the seedling pink carnation known as Edna, and the 100 blooms made a fine appearance. The committee to judge them, Messrs. Fillmore, Washburn and Baer, made the following report, judging by points: For color, 22; size, 16; calyx, 3; stem, 18; substance, 16; form, 9, and fragrance, 3; total, 86. The report was accepted, on motion, and a certificate of merit from the association was awarded.

Then came a general discussion of interest to growers, in which all members took part. Many good points were brought out. Before adjournment the members gave a rising vote of thanks to the entertainment committee, as well as to the management of the St. Nicholas hotel, for the day's entertainment. Hembreiker & Cole, who furnished the decorations at the hotel, received a vote of thanks and were highly complimented on the work.

Entertainment.

Next came the entertainment features, which started with an automobile trip through the city and a visit to the growing establishments of Carl Rauth, G. H. Hennessey, Bello Miller, A. C. Brown and Hembreiker & Cole, all in excellent condition. Hembreiker & Cole have a most modern and up-to-date place. This range, consisting of 70,000 square feet of ground covered by glass, was highly complimented by the visiting delegates.

A trip to Washington park was another rare treat to the delegates. Dinner, also a welcome feature, was served in the park pavilion. This was followed by a theater party at the Majestic theater in the evening on invitation of Hembreiker & Cole.

Those attending the day's gathering were Joseph Otto, George F. Deutschmann, John Steidle, Otto Bruenig, C. E. De Wever, W. J. Pilcher, A. S. Cerny, Martin Ude, August Hartmann, Henry Berning, L. J. Bourdet, Thomas Carr, W. C. Smith, F. J. Fillmore, Frank Windler, J. J. Beneke, A. Senger, of St. Louis and vicinity; H. Blixen, J. F. Ammann, Louis Miller and L. R. Smith, Edwardsville, Ill.; Walter Amling, E. C. Nielsen, Pana, Ill.; Frank Washburn, Bloomington, Ill.; J. W. Ross, Centralia, Ill.; J. A. Cole, J. A. Nelson and H. Baer, Peoria, Ill.; L. A. Larson, Middleton, Ill.; Chas. Johann, Collinsville, Ill.; Frank Meier, Vandalia, Ill.; F. J. Daut, Decatur, Ill., and Otto Hembreiker, Lincoln, Ill.

A. C. Brown, G. H. Hennessey, V. J. Cole and W. J. Hembreiker, of Springfield, attended all sessions and saw that the visitors were made comfortable during their stay. J. J. B.

had a fine growing season in the nursery and have good orders ahead both for shrubbery and bedding plants. They had the finest Easter stock in this vicinity and it all found a ready market.

Edward Siek, Canandaigua, N. Y., is taking a brief vacation, following the busiest season on record. His spring stock is in fine condition.

White Bros., Medina, N. Y., leaders in carnations in this neighborhood, have fine crops for Mothers' day. The store has been given up, as they find the sales at the greenhouses more convenient. In fact, the store was only an experiment in the first place.

Fred G. Lewis, Lockport, N. Y., is justly proud of a house of Begonia Melior in 2 1/4-inch pots. They are expected to make fully as fine stock as the specimens pictured in The Review last fall. A variety of stock necessary to supply the retail store is grown, but special attention is paid to bedding plants, which have always sold well and are expected to go well this spring. Mr. Lewis reported a fine Easter trade, with plenty of healthy lilies and a bountiful demand.

J. H. Gould, Middleport, N. Y., is a sufferer from chronic rheumatism, but finds consolation in the assistance of his son, Charles, and Miss Gould, who is the artist. The young man is the grower and is doing good work. In fact, the stock could hardly look better.

Commenting upon the progress of our profession as evidenced by the fact that Carnation Laddie sells quickly at $3 per dozen and other varieties at not less than $2.50 per dozen, John Lawrence, Ogdensburg, N. Y., whose name the printer read as "Saunders" and "Lawrence" in these notes in the issue of April 14, has great faith in the future of the business. He lays stress upon the opportunities possessed by the trade in the smaller cities. Fred Lawrence, while in service in the Philippines during the war, was stationed in the home of the phalænopsis and intends to devote a house to this orchid as soon as the ban is lifted.

Wayne H. Lillie has purchased the Taylor greenhouses at Canastota, N. Y., and has plans to remodel the entire range.

L. L. Cook assumes ownership of the Kraft greenhouses at Oneida, N. Y., July 1. He will add a house, 18x200 feet, for blooming plants. W. M.

ART IN EXHIBITIONS.

competitor take outside advice in his installation he would be disqualified, just as if he had borrowed the flowers wherewith to make the exhibit. Following the established rule, a society precludes itself from rendering assistance in the installation of exhibits and therefore is impotent in any effort to raise the standard of excellence. This might be overcome if a society should deem it wise to invest with absolute authority some person in whom it had supreme confidence and permit him to give advice to any and all exhibitors requesting it. Such person should also have authority to correct and improve any unsuccessful installations.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

William Scott, of the William Scott Co., Buffalo, N. Y., commented upon the changing conditions of the retail trade, saying that his experience has warranted the dropping of growing cut flowers in favor of pot plants. One reason is that the prohibitive value of real estate does not allow the erecting of more glass, and another reason is the convenience of the commission house for obtaining stock necessary for the store. The usual satisfactory cemetery plantings are looked for. In fact, a large part of the stock is already spoken for. Harking back to the fine Easter business, Mr. Scott touched upon the fact that so many rose plants were reported blind, and he attributed it to the fact that the wood is not sufficiently ripened nor the plants established when brought into the greenhouse, thus causing premature breaks and consequently blind wood. The company has given up this line for several years, owing to lack of room. William Warren, who has held the position of artist for more than a quarter of a century, is ever on the lookout for new ideas to put into practice on the attractive corner which the store occupies.

Dobbs & Son, Auburn, N. Y., have a surfeit of carnations. There was an enormous crop, which could not help but "bear" the market in the endeavor to realize some return. Otherwise business is reported tiptop.

When Terence Gilbert, Auburn, N. Y., retired with honors as an officer in the world war, he realized that pedagogy, his former profession, would be too tame. In his perplexity he sought out Secretary John Young, who advised Mr. Gilbert to make a "hobo" of himself for one year and make a round of some of the leading establishments, mentioning those especially relative to the needs of the "tramp." That the advice was well taken is seen in the improvements already made in the Patrick place, which Mr. Gilbert purchased and in which he is ably assisted by Carl Schmidt, a grower of international reputation.

"I hate to do it," observed E. A. Patrick, Skaneateles, N. Y., referring to the fine-carnation plants he was throwing out in order to make room for bedding stock. It is one of the problems which the retail grower in a small town has to wrestle with every year and only experience makes profitable manipulation possible. A fine general stock was noted. "The demand is all we could desire," added our clever fellow craftsman, who concedes to his "fair daughter of Eve" a large measure of his success.

Walter H. Workman, Oswego, N. Y., expressed satisfaction with business conditions following his locating in the new store in the center of the downtown district. The store is almost perfect in arrangement. "We worked hard and waited for results for some time," observed our worthy confrere, "and we were finally rewarded." Walter, Jr., has charge of the greenhouses and is producing fine stock.

W. D. Stewart, Oswego, N. Y., is furnishing the wholesale and retail trade with a fine supply of sweet peas. The demand for carnations exceeds the supply. When informed that John Lawrence, of Ogdensburg, is growing Laddie that brings $3 per dozen at retail, Mr. Stewart showed considerable interest and made favorable comment upon the advancement of the business as the result of such production.

"Accustomed as we are to receiving sight drafts for large amounts, especially since embarking in the seed business," observed George B. Hart, of Hart & Vick, Inc., Rochester, N. Y., "we were, nevertheless, surprised to find that a collector had called in our absence on Saturday night, April 9, and forced the safe, intending to help himself, but he found only postage stamps that were intended for use on duebills. Fortunately, we made an early deposit, following a heavy day's business."

W. & T. Cass, Geneva, N. Y., are in the class of optimists, as they have

The following list of roses suitable for growing in New England was given by W. N. Craig in his lecture before the American Rose Society at Boston, April 9. Those with the greatest number of stars have proved the most reliable and those with a circle need more protection than the others.

COMBATING ROSE MIDGE.

The rose midge, Dasyneura rhodophaga Coq., is a most destructive insect, which has caused heavy losses for some rose growers.

The midge is 2-winged and closely related to the chrysanthemum midge. The female deposits her minute yellowish eggs between the folded leaves of the leaf buds or beneath the sepals of the flower buds. The maggots hatch in about two days and at once feed upon the tender tissues of shoots and buds. They become mature in from five to seven days and then leave the plants, dropping to the soil, where they change to the pupal state. Following his studies in Ontario greenhouses, W. A. Ross, of the Canadian department of agriculture, states in an article published recently in the Agricultural Gazette of Canada that "the midge is most abundant and destructive during summer. With the coming of autumn it declines in numbers and by November wholly disappears from the rose plants. It remains dormant in the soil throughout the cold winter months and does not reappear until early March."

The following method of control has given success in the United States: Tobacco dust is distributed evenly over the beds, from one-fourth inch to one-half inch thick, to prevent the falling-larvæ from entering the soil, followed by nightly fumigations with tobacco paper, as long as adults are seen. As an additional precaution all walks are sprayed with a five per cent kerosene emulsion to kill any larvæ which might have fallen from the plants to the walks.

SOIL FOR CARNATIONS.

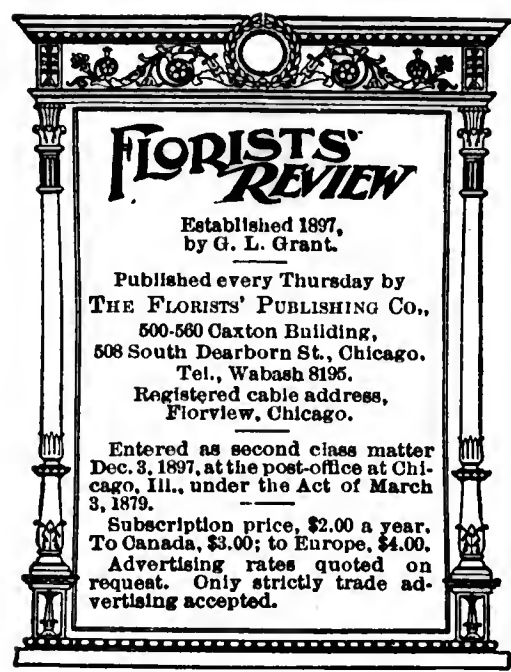

Please answer a question in regard to some carnation soil which is to be taken into the greenhouse next fall for planting. I have some horse manure that was used for a hotbed last spring. This spring I placed it in one big pile. About forty per cent of it is fine wood shavings. The manure itself is well rotted, but the shavings are not. Would the shavings do any damage to the growth of the carnations? I noticed that this manure contains a great number of angleworms. What can I do to get rid of the worms? My intention is to turn this manure, putting air-slaked lime with it and also adding bone and blood. Would you advise doing this?

H. C. A.—Ill.

The manure in question would be far from ideal for the purpose mentioned. If you can get stable manure that is slightly rotted, it will prove far superior. This hotbed manure would be more valuable to mix with potting soil, which for many kinds of plants should be somewhat lighter than the soil used for benching. There is probably little fertilizing value in it; it would not be of much use except for lightening purposes. If your soil is heavy, it might prove beneficial, but, unless that is the case, it would be advisable to procure the fresher manure. Straw manure is always preferable to that in which shavings have been used for bedding. The shavings may not be particularly harmful, but they have not the fertilizing value that straw has.

If you must use this manure, it would be better merely to add the lime at the time you turn it, to get rid of the angleworms. Leave the other fertilizers out until you mix it with the soil. Before adding the bone and the blood, send a liberal sample to the experiment station at Urbana and ask the experts there to advise you as to what you should add to your soil for best results. That is one of the things the experts are there for and you will always find them ready to assist you in your problems. Send samples of both the soil and the manure. Growers do not avail themselves of the valuable assistance offered by these institutions as they should. They have the trained men and the facilities for investigation and are better able to give reliable advice than anyone else. Furthermore, you will find them just as anxious to assist the smaller grower as they are to help the big fellow. A. F. J. B.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

SEND The Review a clipping of your Mothers' day advertisement and a copy of any other advertising matter you use.

MOTHERS' DAY stands as this trade's monument to publicity. Advertising made it what it is and will make it even more.

THERE is the prospect for a record crop of cape jasmine buds this year. They seem timed just right for Memorial day trade.

AMONG retail shops the florists' have assumed first place for window decorations. They have been found a real means of bringing in buyers.

SOME florists wonder if the bride's month has been changed from June to April. Certainly florists have never before had as much wedding work in this month.

IT is a mistake to use your salesroom for a workshop. People do not buy fine furniture in a carpenter shop, nor will they pay good prices for flowers in unimpressive surroundings.

THERE is room for increased production in this trade, it is true, but the greater need is for better quality and a more frequent application of the golden rule in accepting and filling orders.

THERE are other factors working as well, yet Mothers' day makes this the largest issue of The Review ever published, next to the special Easter numbers in 1920 and 1921. Truly this holiday, florists' foster child, grows amazingly.

TOURIST travel to Europe seems to be as heavy as in pre-war days. Though parts of Europe are necessarily cut from sight-seers' itineraries, the battlefields of France and Belgium are magnet enough. Seaport florists are having many orders for bon-voyage flowers these days.

THOUGH glass production has doubled in the last five years, according to government statistics, the increase has been in value rather than in actual output. Glass manufacturing plants increased in number from 348, with an output valued at $123,085,000, in 1914 to 367, having a production valued at $254,709,000, in 1919, according to figures made public last week by the Bureau of Census, Department of Commerce.

No other season has seen so many of the little lines in the Classified department of The Review as are appearing now. Not only is this trade doing business as usual, but growers are busier than usual.

IF an early start means anything, visitors will have an exceptionally interesting and enjoyable time at Toronto next October, when the Canadians are going to spread themselves in entertaining the F. T. D.

OPINION that a prolonged period of prosperity will follow the present readjustment is general among business prognosticators. Florists who are adding to their glass area will then prove the wisdom of their present building.

ITS annual report for 1920 shows the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, in which a number of leading New England florists are active, to be strongly situated, with 199 annual members, 772 life members and assets of $850,150.47.

MANY retailers have the imagination that is necessary to develop new things in floral decoration, but few have the needed confidence to put them over. We haven't yet reached the power of the haberdashers, who can make men wear flappy bows on the back of their hats and like it.

FOR three years or so the florists' trade has ridden the high tide of general business prosperity. We still are doing much better than are those in most other lines. But we have lost headway. It is time to get up steam. If you cannot do it yourself, hire someone who knows how to fetch buyers in.

PERHAPS the most exasperating thing as well as one of the most frequent occurrences in this trade is the neglect to acknowledge the receipt of orders. When an order cannot be shipped within twenty-four hours of its receipt a postal card acknowledgment should invariably be sent. The card should state when shipment will be made.

BORONIA SEEDS.

In answer to G. W. R., in the issue of April 7, seed of Boronia megastigma may be procured from F. H. Brunning, 64 Elizabeth street, Melbourne, Australia. Wing Seed Co.

PROGRESS NOTED.

Somewhat better conditions have been sensed, rather than experienced, by florists keenly alert to the business situation. Other trades, having felt the depression more markedly, note the reaction with liver appreciation, though not with more welcome. The progress toward better business conditions was outlined by Dun's report last week in these terms:

"After long continued liquidation, more stability has developed in some markets, with a definite gain in business. Completion of the readjustment is yet to be attained in many instances and improvement is not general, but basic conditions are gradually strengthening. A tendency toward easing of the monetary stringency, partly reflected in some lowering of discount rates, is a favorable augury and freer marketings of grain are making for a lessening of the financial tension in country districts. Recent sudden changes in temperature have been detrimental alike to crop advancement and seasonal increase in retail distribution, yet weather influences are secondary to some other factors in the present situation, questions of prices and wages being uppermost.

"The process of price deflation, continuing steadily for a year, is providing a basis for revival of buying, but resistance to wage revisions is being encountered in various quarters, and labor troubles in some sections serve to impede the industrial recovery.

"Broadly viewed, however, some progress is recorded each week, and the distinct betterment in the hide and leather trades and in some textile divisions is encouraging. In these lines and in certain others there is now more steadiness in prices, with some advances as demand enlarges, and Dun's list of wholesale quotations this week discloses a smaller excess of recessions. The element of price, on the other hand, still enters sharply into buyers' calculations and no departure from the policy of operating strictly within well defined requirements is witnessed. The gain in transactions, where it appears, is mainly the result of moderate-sized commitments to cover immediate or nearby needs, but such engagements are becoming more frequent. In the existing circumstances the absence of speculative tendencies in business is a wholesome factor."

SOME EXTRA BUSINESS.

Any florists who have a large supply of flowers after Mothers' day probably will welcome National Hospital day, plans for which were described in The Review of March 21. As the day appointed is for May 12, it will take an extra large supply of flowers to accommodate much of a demand on this day, since it comes so soon after Mothers' day. However, for those who will be able to handle added business four days after Mothers' day, here is the chance to get it. A few signs around the store or in the windows will call attention to the fact that May 12 is Hospital day and will bring those interested into the store. It is indeed unfortunate that this day comes so close to Mothers' day. If it were set at another time there would be a much better chance for florists to aid in the observance of the day.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Cleveland, O.—The Smith & Feters Co., one of the oldest florists' establishments in this city, has gone into the hands of receivers.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Shady Avenue Florists, in the east end, have been forced to close their doors on account of financial difficulties.

ALWAYS SOMEONE TO BUY.

Among the 12,600 florists, nurserymen and seedsmen who read The Review there always is someone in need of stock. This is the result:

We have had very good results from the advertising that we have done in The Review this winter and spring, and the nice part of it was that we so far have never had a complaint. Guess that if a man will supply top-notch stuff at a fair price he will always find someone to buy it.—H. E. & C. W. Krebs, Cedar Rapids, Ia., April 22, 1921.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

OBITUARY

Frederick C. Green.

Frederick Chase Green, superintendent of parks of Providence, R. I., for twelve years past, and a widely known landscape gardener and floriculturist, died at his home in that city, April 21.

Mr. Green was born in Chaddington, Buckinghamshire, England, November 10, 1864. At 15 years of age he became apprentice landscape gardener under his father, who was well known as gardener on the Rothschild estate in England. When he had barely reached 20, Mr. Green came to America, where he applied himself assiduously to acquire a comprehensive knowledge of horticulture.

He was in his fifty-seventh year. Before he went to Providence, he had developed and beautified many estates in New England, among them the property of John Jay, Westchester, Mass., and that of the late Nelson W. Aldrich. During his period of service in Providence, Mr. Green developed Roger Williams park into one of the show places of New England, besides being instrumental in laying out many other park areas.

Mr. Green was married January 7, 1894, to Margaret Bell, Lancashire, England, who survives him, together with two children, Dorothy S. and Hervey E. Green. He was a member of the National Association of Gardeners, the American Association of Park Superintendents, the Rhode Island Association of Park Superintendents, the Rhode Island Horticultural Society and the Rhode Island Nurserymen's Association. He was a member of the Mount Herman Lodge of Masons, Providence Royal Arch Chapter, St. John's Commandery of Knights Templar, Palestine Temple of the Mystic Shrine and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

John White Miller.

John W. Miller died last week at his home on Narragansett avenue, Narragansett Pier, R. I., following an illness of two months. He was 68 years old. Death was due to heart trouble.

Mr. Miller was born in Providence, R. I., September 24, 1853, the son of John and Margaret White Miller. Forty years ago he went to Narragansett Pier, where he was engaged as a druggist, and later as a gardener. During this time he was in charge of several large estates.

He is survived by his wife, six daughters and three sons.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

More than a week of dark, dreary, drizzling, rainy weather has completely upset what little market there was, and given everybody an "everlasting grouch." That is, everlasting until pleasant weather drives all cares away. The only ray of hope in the situation was the shortening of supply and the consequent driving of the venders from the street corners. However, a few were out with large baskets of sweet peas at low prices.

There is said to be an abundance of good potted stock for Memorial day, and the downtown dealers are all stocking up heavily with artificial designs, for which there has been an increasing demand the last few years.

Various Notes.

Swanson Bros. are getting ready to enlarge their range, on Stenton avenue.

Frederick Deitz was extremely busy with funeral work last week.

Noonan Bros. are marketing thousands of baskets of pansies, twelve to a basket, both at wholesale and retail.

Henry J. Doll, of the Wanskuek Greenhouses, has registered a new seedling geranium, Mrs. Mattie A. Doll, with the S. A. F.

O. H. Williams & Sons, Hartford avenue, have their greenhouses well filled with early vegetable plants and are picking a fine crop of tomatoes every day.

The Cumberland Hill Greenhouses, which succeeded Vose the Florist, at Cumberland, has been adding new telephone facilities at the range.

Chipman's Greenhouses, Woonsocket, has several thousand special tomato plants ready for delivery.

Kinder Bros., of Bristol, had the wedding flowers for the Tuplin-Benard nuptials, in that town last week.

Aaron S. Esty, for twenty-six years superintendent of the Grace Church cemetery, celebrated, with his wife, the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding, April 18.

Arbor day will be observed this year May 13 by the public schools throughout the state.

The board of park commissioners of Providence has appointed Jeremiah J. Triggs as temporary superintendent to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Frederick C. Green. Mr. Triggs was in charge of the work during Mr. Green's illness.

CINCINNATI, O.

The Market.

The market conditions here were about the same last week as the week previous, but they promise to be better soon, owing to the amount of wedding and social events scheduled for this week. Flowers in general moved well and at fair prices, but business was a little sluggish.

Roses were to be had at prices considerably less than last year at the corresponding time. Carnations arrived in large quantities and moved well, except white, which seemed to be anything but a favorite, the demand being for colored.

Sweet peas were at their height and promised to be good as long as the bright days stay with us. The most popular varieties were Yarrowa, Rose Queen and Margaret Atlee.

Some exceptionally good outdoor double Nareissus poeticus arrived from the south during the week and moved well.

Some of the best Liliun Harrisii that have been in this market for some time were to be had last week. The same can be said for callas. Both moved well.

Cornflowers made their appearance, but only a limited number. Other miscellaneous stock was to be had.

Various Notes.

C. J. Jones, of the Walnut Hill Floral Bazaar, was confined to his home last week with his old ailment, rheumatism. The physician said it would be three to four weeks before Mr. Jones could be in the market again.

The first gladioli arrived here during the last few days and, as is usually the case with the season's first, they went well.

Julius Baer deserves special mention on a window display which made Fourth street radiate with its beauty. It was trimmed with hat baskets and Spencer sweet peas.

H. W. Sheppard had the best week in basket arrangements that he has had for some time.

Edward A. Forter reports a good week in wedding orders and also a number of funeral baskets.

C. E. Critchell has been receiving some excellent Darwin tulips from Charles Pfeiffer, of Fort Thomas, Ky., and some good snapdragons from William Schaefer, of Price Hill.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange has been receiving some choice callas from Thomas Jackson, of Latonia, Ky.

Among last week's visitors were Joseph H. Hill, of Richmond; J. T. Herdigen, of Aurora, Ind., and Joseph R. Goldman, of Middletown, O.

Lawrence Lahmann, manager of the Richmond Greenhouse Co., underwent an operation for kidney trouble at the Christ hospital last week. He is improving nicely. Mr. Lahmann has a host of friends in Cincinnati and, therefore, will not have many dull hours while convalescing.

G. H. K.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

There were no unusual features connected with the market last week. The abnormally heavy crops were off, but there was no shortage of any kind of flowers—far from it. Business had picked up considerably and stock moved fairly well, but there were so many flowers that high prices were impossible, as complete clearances were not being made. Still, it is the general belief that the flower business is excellent, compared with other lines. In many cases wholesalers report sales as again running ahead of last year and several are so optimistic as to believe May will be an unusually good month, possibly the best yet.

Peonies put in an appearance last week; we shall have them with us, probably, until August, which will give them a season of over three months! The first arrivals were from Halls, Tenn., and the quality was worthy of special mention. Usually the first peonies are officinalis, locally known as Old Red, but the Halls stock was early pink and white in several of the better varieties. Being grown specially for this market, the stock was cut and bunched right and it has been selling well from the start. The Halls crop will amount to at least 20,000 dozens and all will be cut by Mothers' day. It will not be long now before other shippers will begin cutting and a flood of peonies is looked for before Memorial day, although there begin to be reports of frost damage which was not apparent at first. The local season is said to be nearly two weeks early.

Roses are of splendid quality. While the supply is not so large by half, the quality has suffered not at all through the spring crop going off. Columbia is the most abundant variety, but everything on the list is available in such shape as to make good values. Wholesalers are pushing roses for Mothers' day. They believe they will be moderately plentiful and that they will afford, particularly in the longer grades, the best value that can be given the public. The warm wave that started April 23 served to fill the market at the opening of the present week and there are divergent views as to the effect on the Mothers' day supply.

Carnations have gone partly off crop and the recent supply has not been large; yet it has been enough. While the present demand is not unusual, it is the general belief that Mothers' day will bring the heaviest call in years and that the supply will not be there. When buyers ask for lots of from 5,000 to 10,000, and there are many such, it takes huge supplies to go around. And a favorite device at Mothers' day is to place an order for a thousand with each of half a dozen houses. Short as the supply seems likely to be, growers are being warned against holding back to accumulate a supply; they are being told the retailers and the public demand fresh flowers and will not pay the bill if the stock goes to sleep too soon.

There are good supplies of sweet peas and the Mothers' day crop probably will be heavy; they should sell well, as they are the favorite flower of many mothers. Snapdragons also will be in good supply. Valley will be abundant; push it. Bulbous stock is nearly done for the season; outdoor Darwins are about all that remain. There are cat-

Albert Hall, who has built up a nice business as the Lakeside Flower Shop, is preparing to expand. The march of progress calls for his removal about May 9 to a store in the new Sheridan

Plaza hotel, which is only a short distance from his present location on Sheridan road, but which will bring him into touch with a better class of flower buyers. The hotel has a Kroeschell refrigerating installation, on which Mr. Hall will operate his display box. He has ordered a new refrigerator, wall case, work bench, etc., of the A. L. Randall Co.

At the Hotel Randolph April 21 the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago held a closed meeting, in which the matter of local advertising was discussed at considerable length.

R. E. Kurowski is emerging from a fortnight of unusual strain. For several days his youngest son was so ill of scarlet fever that serious fears were entertained. When the child was past the danger point Mrs. Kurowski became ill with the flu, but fortunately her case was a light one; and then the nurse had it. Mr. Kurowski and the older boy have been living with E. F. Kurowski, because of the quarantine at home. It is said orders have been coming so numerous of late that the John C. Moninger Co. is working to capacity. Last week a huge furniture car of material was sent to California and mail orders were booked from Pennsylvania and Arizona.

Bassett & Washburn say they bought 12,000 tons of coal last season, but have burned only about 8,000 tons because of the mildness of the winter.

Charles Erne reports a steady call for indoor-grown myrtle, a green much sought by south-Europeans for use in the hair for weddings.

Mary Berlin Dagobert died April 22 and was buried April 25, from the chapel at 2116 West Division street.

She was the wife of Max Dagobert, now of Streiff & Dagobert, 3211 West Madison street, who for several years before he started in business for himself was with the late C. Frauenfelder. They have two little girls. A number of florists attended the funeral and there were many flowers.

If you can not account for something unusual in the appearance of Paul R. Klingsporn, probably it's the spectacles. He has not worn them before.

The marriage of Miss Anna Tonner and Louis Beattie took place April 21. The couple are on their honeymoon.

Hans Jepsen, at Maywood, is having splendid success with sweet peas. From two not large houses he sent 35,000 long-stemmed flowers to market April 25. Mums and peas round out Mr. Jepsen's year.

Doing a strictly neighborhood trade, Max Cohen, of the Jackson Flower Shop, on Sixty-third street, finds it pays to advertise. Every time he distributes a card or circular, putting them in all the mail boxes for several blocks around, he notes an immediate increase in the sales to transients, some of whom always prove to be permanent additions to his list of regulars.

Mrs. M. E. Irby, of the Flower Shop, Memphis, was in the market last week. The new store, with its modern equipment, although occupied only a few weeks, already has demonstrated that up-to-dateness pays. Business is increasing steadily in the face of unfavorable business conditions.

The Market.

The week ending April 23 was considered by most of the wholesalers to have been a good week in the wholesale cut flower trade. Arrivals of stock were not unduly heavy and the demand was such as to make clearances satisfactory. Saturday, April 23, the business was particularly good in spite of the weather, which was stormy. There was little change in prices, those of the week previous holding firmly, with concessions few and far between. Carnations were chiefly subject to concessions, as nobody likes to carry these flowers over Sunday.

Cape Jessamine Buds for Memorial Day

The Queen of Flowers 600,000 this Season
The largest Jessamine Farm in the U. S.

TO OUR CUSTOMERS AND THE TRADE:

The Cape Jessamine Bud Crop will be ten days earlier this season than it has for the past several years, starting about May 8th. We will also be able to take care of any rush order after May 10th. An early order or two will no doubt stimulate your Decoration Day trade.

Our Buds are fine; we believe in cultivation and fertilization, which costs money, but the extra quality more than repays it. "Squirrel ear" leaves and knobby buds do not go with us. If you have never bought of us, all we ask is a trial shipment.

We ship anywhere in the U. S.; time arrivals and guarantee A-1 stock. No order too large for us. Place your order where the supply is large, but to avoid the rush, order early. We are booking orders daily. Special attention given regular orders. We get second class express rate.

was abundant and clearances were rather slow. Outside stock of narcissus was rather abundant, but poor in quality, and cleared at prices hardly worth quoting.

Lilae was in quantity and shrub and fruit blossoms were overplentiful and much of the latter went to waste. Dogwood blossoms, which are excellent this season, fared a little better and were in demand for decorative purposes.

Roses were in good supply all week. Dark weather, perhaps, was instrumental in preventing what might have been an oversupply. American Beauty was in small supply and sold freely. The crop of this variety is expected to increase materially within the next week or so. Hybrid teas were plentiful in most varieties, but met a good demand, some sorts selling at advances over the previous week's prices. Yellow varieties were in short supply, but met an equally short demand.

Carnations were plentiful, but prices kept within a good price range.

ELCO BRAND OF RIBBONS

Cattleyas were not particularly abundant, but prices remained within the range of the previous week. Gardenias continued in large supply and moved slowly. Valley was plentiful, but moved well. The wedding season is a big factor in the movement of this subject. Some outdoor-grown valley of good quality arrived and brought a fair price. There was a good supply of white lilies and prices continued to hold up.

The supply of callas was large and their movement was slow. Spanish iris was prominent and met with a fair demand. Cut blooms of German iris were also to be noticed, but the demand for them was shy.

Miscellaneous flowers continue to arrive abundantly. Ranunculus and sweet williams were added to the already large list. The supply of lilac is not expected to be so large this season as formerly, for the reason that much southern stock has been ruined by heavy late frosts. Several large shippers of peonies from sections south of New York state reported that they will only be able to cut about ten per cent of their average peony crop, as the frost has killed all the early buds. The prospect for peonies for Memorial day is now narrowed down to northern supplies and it is not expected that the local crops will last out, even in the late varieties. Yellow daisies were unusually abundant and sales were dragging. Sweet peas shortened up considerably, but some fair quality stock was coming in. Antirrhinum, mignonette and delphinium met a fair demand.

Various Notes.

Herman Mamitsch, of Rockville Center, N. Y., has acquired property at Tenafly, N. J., on which he will erect greenhouses in the near future. On account of the health of his wife, he will move from his present location as soon as he has disposed of the greenhouses.

The Du Pont estate, at Roslyn, L. I., which was recently completed at a cost of $1,500,000, was sold at auction Saturday, April 23, for $470,000. The residence, which was built for the late wife of Alfred I. Du Pont, was never occupied. The purchaser was Howard C. Phipps, who comes of a family horticulturally inclined. Consequently, flower show enthusiasts believe he will prove to be quite an acquisition to the ranks of exhibitors at our flower shows.

The executive board of the Allied Florists' Association of New York held a meeting at the New York Florists' Club's quarters Monday afternoon, April 25, at which publicity matters were chiefly discussed. The association recently distributed cards, printed in English and Greek, to the effect that after May 1, wholesale florists would add to all slips an amount equivalent to half of one per cent of the purchase denoted on the slips. This amount will be applied to the general fund to be expended for advertising. These notices have been prominently posted in the wholesalers' establishments. If the retailers come into the movement under this arrangement, it is believed that the association will be able to put through a publicity program that will work to the material advantage of all branches of the industry. If the retailers show a willingness to take their share of the burden, it will act as a great incentive to further support by the growers and others who have made the initial effort in the direction of publicity both possible and profitable.

Carnation Beacon is still likely to be a prominent red variety, if one should judge by the quality of the flowers which Schneider & Noe, of Congers, N. Y., are shipping to P. F. Kessler, at the Coogan building.

Vegetation this year, owing to the unusually early warm weather, is far in advance of normal. This has affected not only shrubs and trees, but tulips also. The Darwin and cottage tulips form the greater part of the tulip display at the New York Botanical Garden, Bronx park, and usually are at their best from the middle of May to the first of June. This year, however, the earlier varieties were in bloom last week, and the next two or three weeks will see the flowering of the entire collection, so that the display will probably be finished at about the beginning of the flowering period of these tulips in normal years. There are two displays of tulips; one located in the beds in the court of conservatory range 1, but a short distance from the terminus of the Third avenue elevated, the other in the horticultural gardens on the southern boulevard, almost opposite Fordham hospital.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The big men who control the destinies of the cut flower market have been devoting their energies toward increasing the sales to the retail stores at the expense of the street men. They aim to do this by calling in extra shipments wherever necessary to keep the supply steady and by giving the retailers every opportunity to secure and fill orders. Their efforts have been successful. There is little difficulty in finding a market for the best stock at fair prices. It is the medium and low grades of stock that require care in handling to advantage. Take sweet peas, for example. Perhaps one-quarter of those now coming into this market are fine and sell readily at good prices. The fancy colors are especially desirable. About one-half of the peas are of medium grade. They can be used in many of the stores when they are fresh, at moderate prices, when they are offered at the right time and in the right way. The remainder are poor and can only be used by some of the stores now and then, and at low prices. It would be much easier to job them to the street men for a song, but it would be bad business under existing conditions, and the wholesalers are doing their work well.

Business for the week ending April 23 was fair for the season, though not quite so active as during the previous week. The supply of sweet peas and roses was heavy. Carnations were not so plentiful. There is a good deal of snapdragon and it is popular at moderate prices.

The heavy frost that so closely followed Easter ruined most of the outdoor lilac.

St. Leonards.

The Lord & Burnham Co. has transferred the property at St. Leonards station, on the Newtown branch of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad, to the St. Leonards Farms Co. Frederick Newman, formerly member of the florists' firm of Newman & Legg, at Manasquan, N. J., is to manage the place.

A start has already been made. Tomatoes have been planted in the 72x600-foot greenhouse on the place.

The Banquet to His Eminence.

The Knights of Columbus gave a most elaborate banquet in honor of Cardinal Dougherty in the ballroom of the Bellevue-Stratford hotel Monday evening, April 25. There were 900 guests, who were seated at eighty-five tables. The floral decorations were beautiful, arranged in J. J. Habermehl's Sons' best style, including palms, ferns, flowering plants, electric lights and a wealth of cut flowers. The papal colors were used, cardinal, gold and white. The red was furnished by Darwin tulips and American Beauty roses, the yellow by snapdragons and daisies, the white by sweet peas. It was a fine affair.

It is understood that these new houses will be planted with carnations. Both carnations and chrysanthemums have done well during the past season and both will be largely increased. It is Mr. Bickley's ambition to make the Bickmore Greenhouses one of the finest places in the country. In this aim he is heavily supported by his manager, Clarence Alwine, who is doing excellent work at Wallingford.

Various Notes.

George Aeugle believes that the local peonies will be in bloom about May 20.

Raymond Brunswick and Mrs. Brunswick celebrated their wedding anniversary by a little trip to New York.

Arthur A. Niessen believes that our business is doing much better than many others, that while it did not soar so high, it has not fallen so low, which is gratifying.

The Market.

On the whole, business last week was satisfactory. While one or two days were clear and warm, the weather in the main was cold, sunless and wet, snow falling on one or two days. This materially shortened up supplies of roses and carnations, and no great surpluses were carried over. Roses have done fully as well as a week ago and short-stemmed flowers have averaged rather better. The greater demand is, as usual, for the newer varieties, like Pilgrim, Columbia, Premier and Mme. Butterfly, with Hadley still realizing the highest prices and Ophelia, Russell, Ward and Miller all in good demand. The small corsage roses continue to sell well.

Carnations are much the same as a week ago. Good colored flowers sell at $5 per hundred, but there is a considerable surplus of whites. Laddie now is in heavier crop and sells well. Marguerites are arriving in great abundance and values on these have taken a tumble. Sweet peas are still of good quality. The best now have trouble in bringing $2 per hundred; a good many short-stemmed flowers sell lower.

Lilies and callas average $8 to $12 per hundred and there is an abundant supply of each. Snapdragons, as usual, remain more or less druggy, and calendulas are overplentiful. The supply of Dutch bulbous flowers is comparatively small, as indoor supplies are now entirely exhausted and only a few growers have them outdoors. Showing the earliness of the season, the ordinary bedding tulips are now at their best, and many Darwins are already open, while even the late-blooming Narcissus poeticus is flowering, although last year a good many remained until Memorial day.

There is not much call for myosotis, bachelor's buttons and miscellaneous flowers. Pansies are abundant, and the best realize $1.50 to $2 per hundred. A fair supply of Cattleya Mossiae is still available.

chids at Horticultural hall, but none more noteworthy, extensive, beautifully arranged and appreciated than the one of New England native orchids which occupied the whole of the main exhibition hall of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and which opened its doors to the public free of charge April 23. It had been planned to close the show the following night, April 24, but so great have been the crowds that it was wisely decided to continue it for several more days. On the opening day, in spite of a cold, driving northeast rain storm, there was an attendance over twice as large as that registered on the first day of the late big spring show. The show was widely advertised in the newspapers and many visitors came long distances to view it. A considerable number of the orchids grew outside Massachusetts.

The usually somber exhibition hall never looked so attractive as it did with this setting of cedars and spruces, twenty-five to thirty feet high, irregularly barked around the sides. Here and there rose rock formations, naturally planted. Charming pools and swamps, planted with orchids found in such locations, were equally impressive. The central feature was a large, rather irregular oval, with a pool in its center. Planted around the sides were wonderful masses of Osmunda regalis and other native ferns, Iris sibirica and sarracenias in abundance, heavily flowered, with other native vegetation, in which were masses of magnificent Cypripedium spectabile and hirsutum and an albino form. One clump, a superb one, carried fifty-three flowers; another, thirty-four flowers, mostly two to a stem. The stems averaged eighteen to twenty-four inches high and it is doubtful if there is any tropical orchid the equal of these in grace and beauty.

Along the sides, sometimes in rocky cliffs, were fine colonies of the more common Cypripedium acaule, of which there were a number of pure white clumps; also C. parviflorum, the yellow lady's slipper, and the larger and more showy C. parviflorum pubescens, individual plants of which carried up to twenty-five flowers each; also the more miniature C. arietinum.

There was a good representation of goodyeras, including repens, pubescens, tesselata and decipiens, and Habenaria fimbriata, hyperborea, dilatata, clavellata, bracteata, flava, lacera, orbiculata, Hookeri, obtusata and psycodes.

In addition, there were colonies of the beautiful early-flowering Orchis spectabilis and O. rotundifolia; Liparis Loeselii; Spiranthes gracilis and Romanzoffiana; the charming Calypso bulbosa and Aplectrum hyemale.

It was no inconsiderable task to collect about 1,000 plants of these New England orchids preparatory to this exhibition, and, as they flower naturally from April until September, it was a still greater effort to assemble a large proportion of them in bloom in April, telescoped into a single synchronous display against a background of pink, spruce and hemlock trees so thick that it seemed like a veritable forest. Song-birds hidden away in cages added to the reality of the scene by their sweet music. All paths were of pine needles as well as all the space in the forest-like groves, while dead oak leaves, green sphagnum moss and other effects were used to excellent advantage.

The beauty and variety of native orchids were a revelation to the visitors and gave a strong stimulus to the movement for the protection and perpetuation of them. Another pleasing feature is the effort at hybridization to be carried out at Beverly Farms with native varieties, which may give us some lovely new varieties.

Gold medals were awarded to A. C. Burrage for his display of native orchids and to Douglas Eceleston for harmonious and effective arrangement.

William Reoch, gardener for Mrs. N. M. Bryant, received a bronze medal and cultural certificate for some wonderful specimens of herbaceous calceolarias. J. Clancy, gardener for Mrs. Andrew Adie, received a certificate of merit for Dendrobium Victoriae-reginae, the so-called blue dendrobium.

Various Notes.

A contract has been awarded to Hitchings & Co. for a range of green-houses to be erected at Franklin park for the park and recreation department of the city of Boston. The estimated cost is $48,910. Foundations, etc., are to cost $30,583 additional.

Professor C. S. Sargent, the venerable and esteemed director of the Arnold Arboretum, celebrated his eightieth birthday April 24 and received a host of congratulations. A handsome box of odontoglossums was A. C. Burrage's token of good cheer. Professor Sargent, who has been in Washington for a few days, returned in time to view the great display of native orchids, April 25, and was thoroughly charmed with it. When at home, in spite of his advanced years, he is still on active duty at the Arnold Arboretum.

News of the death of Frederick C. Green, superintendent of Roger Williams park, Providence, R. I., April 21, caused keen regret among his many horticultural friends in Boston, near which he resided for some years. Mr. Green was a frequent attendant at Boston exhibitions and had been a member of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston for many years. A party of club members, including Julius Heurlin, Robert Cameron, W. N. Craig, Victor Heurlin, John Barr, Frederick Coles and several others, attended the funeral services, April 24.

The collection of malus, or ornamental crabapples, is in beautiful flower at the Arnold Arboretum this week. The pure white variety, Arnoldiana, is one of the most lovely sorts. Some of the earlier lilacs are already in flower also.

A. J. Loveless, Lenox, Mass., was one of the visitors at the native orchid show. Mr. Loveless is secretary of the new American Orchid Society and will soon prepare a bulletin on native orchids to send out to members.

The Market.

Stock moved slowly last week, and the market was nearly glutted with roses. Carnations are getting scarce and with some of the retailers it is only shrewdness enables them to clear the day. Funeral work has been slow and entertainments and dinners are few and far between. Matchless is the only good carnation on the market at present. A marked change has come over the carnation market in the last two weeks. The wholesaler was begging to sell stock, and now the retailer is begging to buy it. There were no bargain sales in carnations last Saturday, and the trade is getting ready for 12 and 15-cent carnations for Mothers' day. Roses are more plentiful, but the hot days have caused inferior stock to flow in. Ophelia and Columbia are by far the heaviest producers. Carnations are demanding $5 and $6 per hundred. Sweet peas are fast falling off, but the are coming to the market, although many are showing sun spots. Darwin tulips are in fine shape at $4 to $6. Lilies are getting a little scarce, although there are some fine formosum to be had at $3 per dozen. Callas are moving nicely at $3 per dozen. Snapdragons are falling off in quality and quantity, selling at $8 to $10.

Visitors.

Among those calling on the trade last week were Julius Dilloff, of Wertheimer Bros., New York; William Reid, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago; M. H. Levine, of the M. H. Levine Co., New York, and Frank Stuppy, of St. Joseph, Mo. T. E. E.

TOLEDO, O.

The Market.

The item of most importance last week was the outlook for Mothers' day. The optimists predict the best business ever, while the more conservative claim business will be about like that of last year. The local growers probably will be short of pot plants and many are looking elsewhere for suitable plant offerings for the day. The cut flower growers will be in good crop, but, of course, there is not enough nor a sufficient variety grown here to meet all the demands for stock.

Two weeks of the genuine April brand of weather did not seem to hurt business much, since all the stores report business good considering existing conditions. Some excellent stock of Hydrangea rosea is on the market at present, but to all appearances will be disposed of before Mothers' day.

Various Notes.

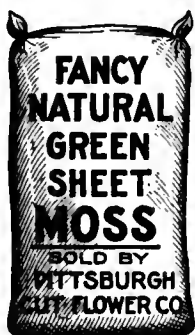

The suit in the Mrs. J. B. Freeman-Crause case, to remove the husband as administrator, was compromised by the administrator offering to settle with the grandchild for $8,000 clear.

Hirzel Bros. have the finest pink hydrangeas seen on this market for a long time.

Louis Merkel, of C. Merkel & Son, Mentor, O., was in town booking orders for Mothers' day. H. E. K.

Summit, Miss.—Karl Fach, Jr., has opened a small store here.

DWARF AND TALL DAHLIAS.

Several years ago I ordered six Storm King dahlias. These grew only about eighteen inches high and were covered all the fall with beautiful white show dahlias. I grew them the same the second year. The next winter I lost all my bulbs. I again ordered Storm King and it grows about four feet high. The blooms are like the low-growing ones. Were these dahlias freaks or are there dwarf dahlias?

J. B. A.—N. C.

Some dahlias are naturally dwarf, others the reverse. Soil and cultivation make a great difference in them. You might have had the Storm King true to name each time and planted in comparatively poor soil for two years and given your second purchase a different location and a new, generous soil. Often the same variety looks entirely different with nearby growers. Not improbably in your own case, soil, culture, and perhaps climate to some extent, are responsible for the added height of the plants.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Not for several years has the shipping business out of Los Angeles been so poor as it is just now. Much of the stock goes south and east, where the cotton and mining interests are now in such bad shape that business has slumped and consequently flowers are not much in demand. Mothers' day will doubtless stimulate things temporarily, but there is little to hope for in a general way. Gladioli are coming in and, as usual, the early flowers sell at a good price. There is the usual large cut of statice and pink strawflowers that is always on hand before Decoration day. Roses are arriving in fine shape. Valley and orchids are plentiful. Bulbous stock is about over for the season. Retailers are a little better off than wholesalers, but the business is not brisk and funeral work forms the mainstay.

Various Notes.

The Westrem Garland Florists are making considerable changes in their store with a view of having more space in the display room. As the result of the removal of a partition and the rearrangement of the workroom, the store looks much larger, needed space is obtained and increased facilities for handling their business are provided. It was the intention of the partners to postpone this change until the slack season in summer, but, owing to increased business, it became necessary to have more room at once. They are to be heartily congratulated on the showing they have made in so short a time and it is another instance of what can be done by close attention to business.

The sunken-garden table decoration at the Ambassador hotel recently, arranged by the Alexandria Florist, was an elaborate and successful one. Mirrors were used to represent lakes and flower beds of begonias, cinerarias and other such pot plants were worked out. Small kentias also were used with fine effect.

George Eischen and his friend Carl Brose have long been star members of the gun club and now Hunter Graham, of the Alexandria Florist, and J. Hardy, of the Dostal-Wolters Flower Shop, have joined.

Fine progress has been made in his new place at Inglewood by Frank Warner and practically the whole place is now planted and under irrigation. Some splendid beds of Spanish iris were noted and Darwin tulips were also at their best on a recent visit. Emperor, Golden Spur and other popular daffodils have made an excellent growth since flowering, as well as the novelties along this line. Gladioli are fine and are coming in large quantities and a large acreage not needed for flowers this season has been set out to grape and fig cuttings. Mr. Warner disposes of his stock at the American Florists' Exchange.

tity of Gladiolus Schwaben at the Montebello nursery.

Albert Goldenson is handling the entire output of one of the San Diego growers of statice and strawflowers. These are shipped ready made up into bouquets and wreaths. They make an elegant show at the Third street store.

The store of Walter Armacost & Co.

is the rendezvous for rose buyers and almost everybody in the trade may be seen there in the morning when the stock is first opened up. A fine cut of beautiful flowers is in now.

C. Gutting, of the Superior Dahlia Gardens, has added another large piece of ground for this crop, nearly doubling the size of the Figueroa street place.

Planting is well advanced and the young stock is making a good show.

S. Murata, of S. Murata & Co., is back on the job again and has recovered his usual health. He has also been spending some time growing a mustache. Y. Oike is away on a vacation.

Immense quantities of statice and strawflowers are being handled by the E. C. Amling Co., these flowers being exceptionally well suited to long-distance shipping.

Hahn's Flower Shop, on Hollywood boulevard, is one of the most attractive in the city and Mr. and Mrs. Hahn are so well pleased with California that they say they will not leave it.

One has to be on hand early at the American Florists' Exchange or the stock is all sold. Practically everyone is cleared out by 8 a. m. H. R. R.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

During the last few days the supply of stock in the market has been short and business has taken a sudden upward trend, with the result that flowers are hard to get. Lilac is practically over. The same is true of violets. Tulips are nearing the end of their season and are now scarce. For the present, it looks as if there were not much but roses and they are consequently dearer than they were week before last. Biting north and east winds have retarded sweet peas and other outdoor stock. The weather is now somewhat milder.

The show will be held in the vast Civic auditorium, which had plenty of space to spare when it recently seated over 7,000 people to hear the Chicago Grand Opera. Details of the flower show are already being planned. April 19 the committee on prizes met with P. V. Matraia at the store of the Art Floral Co. The members of the committee are H. Plath, J. A. We believe that this statement is entirely true. Because we believe it is true the entire thought of our company has ever been to improve service.

We believe that you want more Roses. We are building 9 houses, 100,000 square feet of glass, to grow them for you. We are planting the kind that you ask for most, not the kind which we prefer to grow or that would pay us best.

We are growing more and better Green, and selling it for less money.

We are packing better, with a lower packing charge.

We are building a bigger and better saw-mill. This will mean better and cheaper boxes and crates, consequently less express charges.

We are going to surprise you with our values in plants this winter.

If you know of any way that we can serve you better, won't you write us about it? We wish fully to deserve to be —

O. R. Thomas, of Provo, Utah, is visiting San Francisco after ten years' absence, and is renewing former acquaintances. He says that he is particularly impressed by the beauty of the retail shops and the fact that nearly every establishment, from dry goods stores to hardware establishments, has flowers as part of the window decorations.

Clever "lais" of marigolds and lilies won first prize at a Hawaiian masquerade for Manuel, of Podesta & Baldocchi, and his partner Saturday, April 16.

The E. W. McLellan Co. is still shipping roses which are coming in from their nurseries. Most of the wholesale firms report that shipping is almost over for April, but they are coaxing on their flowers for Mothers' day and Memorial day.

J. A. Axell is greatly enlarging his line of Mas-Art baskets. The baskets with interchangeable stands made by the Mas firm are especially novel.

Although tulips are now scarce, the United Flower & Supply Co. expects to have late tulips from the nurseries for several weeks to come.

Domoto Bros. will have good Easter lilies and potted hydrangeas coming from the nurseries all through May.

Enomoto & Co. state that Japanese mats, for potted plants, etc., have come down in price in Japan, so that they can sell them at a reduction. A large consignment of these mats, in all colors, was unpacked last week.

Podesta & Baldocchi made what the staff describes as "a kind of world" for Mary Garden for a luncheon tendered her by the Fine Arts Association at the St. Francis. This globe of flowers, six feet in diameter, was one of many offerings at the luncheon.

Angelo Rossi and Frank Thatcher, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., are at Stockton, as delegates to the state convention of the Native Sons of the Golden West. Frank D. Pelicano is busy planting his dahlias at his dahlia farm.

The rustic table decorations designed by Albert O. Stein's staff for a recent garden tea at Piedmont have been admirably discussed. The receptacles for the marigolds, heather and purple demand and a good assortment is to be found here, as the climate is such that almost anything in the perennial line does well here. Potted plants are scarce. Cinerarias and pelargoniums are the chief plants to be had just now. Snapdragons find a ready sale.

Various Notes.

E. Hedger, of the Davenport Flower Shop, reports good business. Table decorations are foremost and there is a good demand for corsage work.

Mr. Bomsen, of the Glenrose Greenhouses, says, "We have little time to spare, as our shipping business is keeping us on the go, both in work and growing stock, to meet the demand."

Miss Grace Beldon, of Eugene's Flower Shop, has left for a trip to California and expects to be gone for several weeks.

C. T. Kipp, of the Spokane Florist Co., spent a few days on the coast.

Mr. Rahn, of the Spokane Greenhouse Co., Inc., left for a few days' business trip to Seattle, Portland and other nearby cities.

P. Weil, of C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, was a recent visitor.

A. A. Kelly gave an interesting talk at the last Florists' Club meeting. A number of new members were admitted, as it had been decided to invite those working in the stores or greenhouses to join the club. This move will no doubt be beneficial to all. The florists want to push the use of flowers and also to teach the care of flowers.

C. T. Kipp, of the Spokane Florist Co., is giving his services at the hospitals, lecturing to nurses about the care of plants and cut flowers. The club also plans to donate vases to the hospitals. Our slogan is "A bigger and better business for flowers."

The prospects in regard to stocks for Mothers' day are good. The tendency to keep prices down as low as possible will, no doubt, keep the spirit of buying flowers up. It will also create a bigger demand for flowers and not let the thoughts of the buying public run to candy and other articles. H. H.

SEATTLE, WASH.

There was no noteworthy change in market conditions last week. Calceolarias and wax begonias were the only new offerings. Other novelties were limited to several varieties of tulips. There was a real rush of funeral work for the closing days of the week, with the result that practically nothing remained on hand to start the new week with. There were also a goodly number of decorations and the final showing on business was much better than the trade had expected.

The local cut of roses continued to show steady improvement, especially as to color. This may be traced almost entirely to the sunshine of late. Columbia was especially improved, while Butterfly and Ward were leaders. There was an unusually good sale of the short-stemmed roses.

There was a good increase seen in the cut of orchids and valley, so that supplies of these items were more than ample for any of the trade's needs. Snapdragon and uncertainly graded shipments of California iris covered the long-stemmed offerings. Fruit blossoms were popular for certain types of orders.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, H. G. Hastings, Atlanta, Ga.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

N. J. GROOT, representing Sluis & Groot, of Enkhuizen, Holland, is visiting the Pacific coast.

VISITED CHICAGO: Lester L. Morse and Frank G. Cuthbertson, returning to San Francisco after an eastern trip.

THE S. A. ROGERS CO., Newark, N. J., reports that its volume of seed trade this spring is the greatest the company has had since the business was organized.

FROM all reports the mail-order business flattened out earlier, more suddenly and flatter than usual and the season will go on record as one of many disappointments.

P. VOS & SON, Holland bulb growers, who located at Mt. Clemens, Mich., after the quarantine stopped the exporting of gladiolus bulbs to America, have removed to Grand Rapids, Mich.

THE trade gossips are engaging themselves with the question of the ability of this, that and the other seedsman to make July 1 payments. But the fact seems to be most seedsmen now pay as they go, with the help of the banks.

HALF a hundred friends of John Charles Vaughan, septuagenarian that day, gathered at Homewood Lodge April 24, to assist the veteran Chicago seedsman fittingly to celebrate the anniversary. Mr. Vaughan has been in the seed business since 1876.

THE commission box houses seem to be getting the best end of the seed business this season, especially those which put out nickel packets again this year. Most of them put out more boxes than heretofore and are getting a good volume of fill-in orders.

ACCORDING to reports from the coast, seed growers who have made eastern trips are returning home in more or less discouragement. They report having found their customers approaching the end of another unprofitable season, with considerable quantities of seeds on hand and no desire to add at present to their commitments.

WILSON'S SEED STORE, Columbus, Ohio, will move about May 27 from its present location, at 116 South High street, to a 3-story brick building on the southeast corner of Pearl and Town streets. The building is to be completely remodeled and will have a modern store front. The property was recently leased for a 99-year term at a price that will ultimately amount to $2,500 a front foot. This establishes a record price for frontage on the street where the building is located.

FRENCH SYNDICATE SETS PRICES.

The syndicate of bulb growers in the Ollioules district held a meeting April 23 to discuss prices for the 1921 crop of Paper Whites and Romans. Immediately thereafter the cable to America became freighted with the first quotations the trade has had for this season.

Large and responsible dealers at Ollioules cabled that the best offer they can make is 170 francs for Paper Whites of the 13 to 15-centimeter size and 195 francs for 14-centimeter and up. For Soleil d'Or the unheard-of price of 550 francs is quoted. Romans are 450 francs.

WHOLESALE BULB GROWERS

We shall appreciate your communications.

These prices are f. o. b. Ollioules. The present exchange rate is approximately 14 francs for a dollar.

In this connection it is worth noting that the market for the 1920 crop of Paper Whites closed at about 125 francs for the smaller size and 150 francs for the larger size.

The above quotation would mean a delivery price in America about $3 per thousand higher than last season's price.

The first impression created by the cables seems to be that the French growers' ideas are so much out of line with American ideas of price that little business is likely to result.

"We have received various letters from Review readers, attaching clippings from earlier issues, calling our attention to Fraser's new asters and zinnias, as developed in the Busch Gardens by R. G. Fraser & Son. To the seedsmen who have been receiving our novelty list from year to year, no explanation is necessary, but for the information of those readers who are not familiar with our operations, we wish to state that the famous Busch Gardens are one of the show places of southern California and for several years Mr. Fraser has exhibited our novelties and select strains of flowers in the sunken garden, much to the pleasure of the many visitors who pass through annually. We have no objection to the advertisement given our novelties in the Busch Gardens or the commercializing of them, but we do wish to impress upon the minds of any of your readers who may be doubtful on the subject that we are the hybridizers and introducers of the American Beauty aster and the 'new race' of dahlia-flowered and picotee zinnias and that our novelties and special florists' stocks can be purchased from any reliable seed house."

ALFALFA IN KANSAS.

The present situation as regards alfalfa in Kansas is, according to the Barteldes Seed Co., Lawrence, Kan., well described in the following report of J. C. Mohler, secretary of the Kansas State Board of Agriculture, Topeka, Kan., dated April 22:

"The present season has thus far been one of the least favorable for this legume. Having suffered severely everywhere from freezes, in many communities it is now attacked by myriads of so-called 'green bugs,' which are doing much damage. Entomologists assert this insect is probably not the true green-bug, but rather the pea aphid, but whatever the name, it is inflicting such injury as to justify concern. The work of these pests, together with the extensive damage by freezes, has unquestionably caused the loss of at least the usual first cutting, which ordinarily would amount to one and a quarter million tons, and the debilitating effect upon the plant is further shown by the reported general average condition for the state's growing alfalfa of 65.33, as compared to 89.1 of a year ago. Moreover, probably an average of fifty per cent of the spring-sown alfalfa was killed by the low temperatures."

it caused much damage. Business, which is in keeping with the spring-like weather, was uninterrupted.

The Schenectady Seed Co. also reports a busy season, particularly in heavy seeds and poultry supplies.

Bradt & Markle, Utica, N. Y., who succeeded to the seed business of Milton T. Jones, are well pleased with the returns thus far.

Batchelor Bros. Seed House, Utica, notes a larger demand for summer-flowering bulbs and hardy plants, proving the wisdom of adding this branch, which is really essential to every seed house catering to a home retail clientele.

Charles Guelph, of the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., was caught on the fly at Syracuse, en route for the west, and observed that conditions had the seedsman "coming and going" this spring.

The Harvey Seed Co., Buffalo, reports the largest sales on record for grass and field seeds. Granting the season is irregular, the ultimate total is expected to exceed that in any former year.

The Queen City Seed & Nursery Co., Buffalo, N. Y., is in the midst of the busiest business on record, according to Manager Sullivan. The landscape department is booming. W. M.

Blytheville, Ark.—Mrs. E. J. Heaton has opened a store here.

Midvale, Utah.—Howard E. Phelps has added a complete floral department to his department store.

Peoria, Ill.—John M. Lobberecht has purchased a 5-acre lot and will start growing flowers in the near future.

Atlanta, Ga.—A corporation, capitalized at $20,000, has just been formed to operate a wholesale cut flower truck farm and dairy business, with distributing headquarters at 273 Ashby street. It will be known as West End Gardens. The company has purchased thirty-five acres and, when estimates are all in, will erect greenhouses for wholesale growing, with W. M. Bailey as manager.

FRAT-M'S

Frat-M's are a great help to florists who make funeral work. They are exact reproductions of the official emblems embossed in gold and the different colors as required by each Fraternal and Labor organization.

The florist is saved time and worry in the nuisance of lettering, as well as the keeping of such a stock of wire frames, and different colored flowers. Just use such flowers as you have and then attach a FRAT-M with paste to the chiffon, or by the hanger that comes for each, as a card, and that is all there is to it, excepting the comment and commendatory talk for the florist.

Just pick out a dozen of the most used from the list following, enclosing $2.00 per dozen, and if they don't make you ten times their cost, return those unused and get your money.

Square and Compass, Chapter, Commandery, 82nd Degree, Shrine, Eastern Star, Royal Neighbors, M. W. A., Maccabees, Odd Fellows, Red Men, Knights of Columbus, K. of P., Moose, Jr. O. U. A. M., B. of R. T., B. of R. Clerks, B. of L. E., Br. of Blacksmiths and Helpers, Eagles.

Just give Frat-M's a trial; you don't have to keep them. We are willing to send them to you and return the money if they don't pay you ten times their cost. Address

You need Bailey's Books

Get the knowledge you need, hints and practical suggestions that will help in your work, by buying Bailey's new "Standard Cyclopaedia of Horticulture"—the florists' 6-volume library. 4,000 engravings, 96 full-page cuts, fine color work.

Take advantage of the present easy payment plan of $3.00 per month, or send $48.00 for the complete set of six volumes. This is the best book buy any florist could make—an investment that will pay a life-time of dividends.

The Market.

The local wholesale market got back last week to the wholesalers' liking. The glut which disrupted the market a week ago came to a sudden end and all seasonable stock shortened up considerably in some cases. The growers here say they will be off crop for a while. This points to a scarcity for the coming big flower day, May 8. Last week, however, there was plenty to meet a general demand. The jobbing off in thousand lots at cheap prices was not encouraged as it was a week ago by the wholesalers, as the price went up a few cents on prime stock. Premier, Ophelia, Columbia and Milady are at present of fine quality, but are not overstocked at any of the markets. White Killarney has a good daily demand for weddings, which have been many.

Carnations, which arrived in great numbers, also shortened up, while the demand about cleans them up now, at a cent or two more than last week's prices. All Enchantress varieties, Nebraska and Ward are of excellent quality.

There was a large supply of Easter lilies to be had at all times. Valley is in demand and outdoor tulips are plentiful. Sweet peas, too, have shortened up and the oversupply in them has ceased for a while. Snapdragons clean up in the choice stock. Delphiniums, calendulas, daisies and daffodils have their daily good demand.

In greens, the market clears almost daily. The demand is especially strong on asparagus and adiantum.

Various Notes.

The publicity committee held a poorly attended meeting April 20. Chairman Bourdet, who never fails to attend, presided over the meeting, which was called for the especial purpose of arranging all details for the "Say It with Flowers" week at the Missouri theater. Those who had the arrangements in hand had everything ready for the opening, April 23. The question concerning the appropriation for Mothers' day advertising was taken up and fully discussed. An appropriation of $600 was made, this to be handled by the advertising committee.

The Western Union Telegraph Co. made it known, in a letter, that it would place in each telegram, received and delivered by messenger, a card advising its patrons of Mothers' day and that the telegraphing of flowers to all parts of the country by the florists would be handled by the company. The committee at once ordered 10,000 cards printed, more to be printed if required, and sent to the office by the committee for use, beginning May 1 or sooner if advisable. Outside of that way of advertising the day, the committee decided to use only the daily press. This committee, consisting of eleven, has only one more month to serve. A new committee will be appointed by the St. Louis Florists' Club at its next meeting, May 12.

The "Say It with Flowers" week at the Missouri theater, beginning April 23, was in charge of J. J. Beneke, secretary of the publicity committee, with the assistance of the local retailers, wholesalers and the park department. Decorations on an elaborate scale were made. The publicity derived from a move of this kind in advertising our slogan should be of great benefit to all in the trade.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association will meet May 4 at the greenhouses of the W. A. Rowe Co., at Kirkwood. The feature of the meeting will be the annual election of officers. Secretary Joseph Deutschmann will send out special notices. A large attendance is expected.

C. E. De Wever, of Olivette, who visited Chicago and other points last week, has returned home, well pleased with his trip.

W. A. Rowe, head of the W. A. Rowe Co. and president of the St. Louis Florists' Club, celebrated his eleventh wedding anniversary April 20.

The St. Louis Association of Gardeners has arranged for a most interesting meeting, to be held at the municipal greenhouses in Forest park. A fine program has been planned, concerning which Secretary Hugo Schaff will advise all members in his regular monthly notices.

Thomas Carr, W. C. Smith, Frank Windler, W. A. Rowe and W. J. Pileher, who visited Springfield the day of the growers' meeting, could not resist the temptation to attend the big boxing contest. The same evening the rest of the delegation attended the theater party.

Fred Longren, representing the Burlington Willow Ware Shops, Burlington, Ia., opened his sample rooms at the Hotel Statler, April 20.

C. Young & Sons Co. attracts many by its artistic window displays of seasonable plants, seeds, bulbs and shrubbery. Charles Young says the season has only begun and he looks for a larger business than that of previous years.

H. C. Irish, in charge of the school gardens for the board of education, has organized a school boys' and girls' garden club, in which the membership is growing daily.

Theodore Heil, brother of Paul Heil and with the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. before Unele Sam required his services, states, in a letter from Mulheim, Germany, where he is stationed, that he has taken up general florists' work and that, in spite of the hard times there, the florists are all prospering.

The five high men of the "Say It with Flowers" bowling league were entered in the City League tournament when their season ended. They were Oscar Ruff, F. Hermann, J. J. Beneke, A. Y. Ellison and Frank Plotz. They bowled three games April 22, totaling

The regular bowling season of our "Say It with Flowers" league ended April 20, in a close race. The Carnations defeated the Gladioli in all three games, while the Sweet Peas won the odd game from the Roses. This gives the championship to the Carnations by one game. The winning team is composed of Fred Hermann, captain; Oscar Ruff, F. A. Windler, Al Gumz, A. Y. Ellison and Joseph Krager. The big closing tournament night is arranged for the night of April 30. J. Carnations will be scarce for Mothers' day. Orders have been coming to the wholesalers for the last two or three weeks, and inquiries from other than regular customers have been received as to the prospect of getting from 500 to 1,000. The orders received have been for larger quantities than usual. Customers who asked for fifty or 100 in past years have ordered from 300 to 500. With the increased demand for carnations over Easter and the crop far below what it was at that time, it is not hard to see that there will be many disappointed when their wants are not satisfied two weeks hence. peak of the carnation crop has been passed. For fully three weeks, about Easter time, the growers had to work fast to keep the flowers cut. They feared a glut, but the stock was worked off at low prices. Unless the weather turns warm suddenly, this market will be short on carnations. There will be other good stock, however. Roses have been coming well of late. Sweet peas will be right with some of the growers, and plants of various kinds will be plentiful. Various Notes.

Arthur Newell will feature wreaths for Memorial day. He has had a number made up of strawflowers and statice. Mr. Newell is still receiving compliments on the work turned out when the Commerce banks were merged. He supplied twenty-six baskets for the officials' desks, 3,000 carnations and roses which were given to patrons, and a number of baskets ordered by other banks at from $15 to $40 each. Fred Horst and Warren Spain were in charge of the work and were personally thanked by the bank officials for their efforts.

An effort is being made by some of the local club women to buy 25,000 carnations for Mothers' day. If they get them they will have 500 girls sell the flowers on the streets. To date, they have not been able to contract for the carnations.

How Are You Shooting?

Shooting ABOVE your customers' heads?
Shooting BELOW them?
Or shooting AT them?

William Tell, when he shot the apple off his son's head and saved both their lives, aimed above the apple to allow for the natural drop of the arrow. If he had aimed directly at it, he would have killed the boy.

To my notion, the best salesmen are those who aim high and bring their customers up to that aim. One thing sure, you can't ever bring a business up to a high level, by keeping on doing it below its natural level.

Nothing kills a florist's business so sure as lack of high aim.

The man who substitutes Hadleys when the F. T. D. order calls for Beauties, and never says a word, will never pick off the apple of the F. T. D. business in his section.

Leastwise, he never gets my business the second time. And I make it my business to see that others know what I know.

The Market.

Last week was a quiet one in the market. The demand had fallen off considerably and the supply was heavy. This was caused by a heavy supply of early outdoor stock, such as Darwin tulips.

Everyone was complaining of a dull week. Funeral work, however, held good, but counter sales showed a big falling off. It just seemed to be one of those off weeks when nothing big was going on to use flowers. Everyone seemed to think the slump was only temporary, as it was too early in the season for the trade to let down.

The street merchants had another big Saturday, April 23, for while the congestion was not nearly so bad as several weeks ago, yet Friday found the iceboxes of the wholesalers well filled with the finest sort of stock. This had to be moved, and the only way in which this could be done was to cut prices and sell in large lots.

Roses were holding up in fine shape;

Out-of-town orders for delivery in New York carefully and promptly filled at reasonable rates the varieties and quality were of the best. Carnations, while plentiful, were beginning to show the effect of the advanced season in size. There was an abundant supply of as fine snapdragon as I have ever seen on the market, yet it is not more than six weeks since I saw snapdragons that were not so good as these being sold for as much as $10 per dozen. Lilies eased up considerably; the abnormal after-Easter supply was over and the crop was back to normal. There was a big supply of miscellaneous stock. Green goods, all except smilax, were plentiful; the latter was not to be had.

When the audience stood, these were most effective, for in most cases a standing audience will completely hide this pretty part of a decoration. Spring flowers were used in the house. The bride's bouquet, a handsome piece of work, was a shower of valley and white orchids.

The 300 block of North Charles street, known as the "flower block," has lost one of its members. The flower shop conducted by the Seidewitz boys has been compelled to move to make room for improvements. They have been fortunate in securing quarters in the 800 block on North Charles street.

The Market.

Last week a considerable lull in trade was shown. Prices were still down and flowers a bit more plentiful than the week preceding. Carnations were at a low price, although the supply was not generous. Sweet peas, although plentiful, were not good and were coming in with short stems. This was attributed to the unusually warm spell a week before Easter. This weather caused the peas to come in in great quantities and they were just beginning to recover, as it were, from the strain. Roses were still coming in steadily and demanded a fair price. Easter lilies were in demand, but with callas coming in such enormous quantities it was difficult to keep clean of both and some were going to waste. Snapdragons were plentiful and were holding a fair price. Darwin tulips were in great supply, but the slight demand made them drop to a low price. Ten weeks' stocks continued to come in heavy supply and a great deal was going to waste. The supply of miscellaneous flowers was more than plentiful. A few delphiniums were seen and brought a good price.

Club Meeting.

The Kentucky Society of Florists gave a banquet Wednesday, April 13, at the Watterson hotel. About sixty members were present and, thanks to the entertainment committee, a pleasant evening was spent. August R. Baumer acted as toastmaster and introduced the first speaker, C. E. Pierson, of the Bradstreet Co. Mr. Pierson gave an interesting talk on credit, which, no doubt, was instructive to all those present. He pointed where the florist of today does business as any other merchant does and is not considered as merely a gardener or, as it has sometimes been said, "a digger of the soil." Therefore, being put on a level with real business men, the florist needs a credit system that the florist of yesterday thought little of. With the ever-increasing demand for flowers, the flower merchant now is almost forced to systematize his business in order that he may take care of it all.

Anton Baerman, formerly of Marret & Miller, but now with the Jacob Schulz Co., was then called on. He gave a most interesting talk on the florists' business in Holland. Mr. Baerman has just returned from that country, after a stay of about nine months, and,

The Market.

Last week found a much improved market. The cooler weather during the week kept the product down considerably, which naturally increased the demand. Each day found the wholesaler practically cleaned up.

Roses are being received in the best quality, the varieties including White Killarney, Ophelia, Premier, Columbia, Pilgrim, Butterfly and Richmond. Carnations are not plentiful. The demand far exceeds the supply and the price is exceptionally good. Easter and calla lilies have been meeting with a good demand. In fact, for several days it was impossible to meet the entire demand for callas. The demand for valley has been exceptionally good, as there have been a large number of April

The Market.

The market here holds steady, with a demand evenly balanced with the supply. Carnations are not of high quality, owing to the dark, rainy weather. They must be used soon after cutting or they curl up and turn brown. Sweet peas, lilies, snapdragons, tulips and a few outdoor violets can be obtained at a popular price and are much in demand for funeral work. Shipments of violets from the east have stopped, probably on account of the warm weather.

Various Notes.

James McKellar has received college orders for corsages twice in the last two weeks. Each time there was a great deal of work. One of the days was on the same day as the funeral of Senator Craumley. This kept the force of designers busy turning out enough designs. J. W. Thompson went Valley was coming into this market regularly in good quality. Retail business was rather quiet, which was fortunate, in a way, because, if business had been brisk, there would not have been enough stock to supply the demand. There were several weddings and there was a good call for white roses and valley, which was in sufficient supply to take care of the demand. NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

REPORTS indicate an increased demand for hedge plants this season.

MORE nurserymen are learning each season that a list of surplus items under the heading, "Nursery Stock," in the Classified department of The Review will move them faster than many circulars cast into the mails. And as to expense, it's a fraction of the old way.

JOHN H. DE MOTT is establishing a nursery business at Englewood, N. J. It will be known as the South Englewood Nursery. Mr. De Mott is a native son of Englewood and has been connected with the landscape gardening, horticultural, and tree surgery business all his life.

"Our shipping department is at the present time overwhelmed with orders and before the season closes we bid fair to double our last spring's output," writes Ernest F. Coe, president of the Elm City Nursery Co., New Haven, Conn., April 21. "This is a surprise to us, as we anticipated a slowdown in sales this year owing to the general state of labor conditions. It has, to the contrary, acted in the opposite direction, seemingly, and the general public is buying more freely than ever. Civic beauty and the utilization of gardens for fruit, berries, etc., seem to have become a uniform point of view throughout this section. We believe the nurserymen's market development committee is doing good work along this line."

THE United States Civil Service Commission announces an open competitive examination for nurseryman. A vacancy at the Chiloseo Indian School, Oklahoma, at $1,000 a year, and vacancies in positions requiring similar qualifications, at this or higher or lower salaries, will be filled from this examination. Appointees whose services are satisfactory may be allowed the increase granted by Congress of $20 a month. The duties of this position are the propagation and care of nursery stock, landscape gardening, and instructing Indian boys in nursery work. Applicants must have had at least two years' experience in the propagation and care of fruit trees. Additional credit will be given for experience in the propagation of forest trees and in landscape gardening. Applicants should at once apply for Form 1800, to the Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

MEMORIAL TREES.

Plan Would Create Big Demand.

Planting a tree along the great national highways in honor of each soldier who died in the late war is the suggestion of James Keeley, a former newspaper owner of Chicago. His idea was expanded by the added suggestion that a tree could be planted for every one who was in the army or navy and who served in the world war. The plan has been taken up with much zeal by several national organizations and also by several state and government boards and is being given much prominence in the newspapers.

The American Legion, the G. A. R., the D. A. R., the Gold Star Mothers, the Buck Privates' Association, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, all service auxiliaries and individual families are among those included in the nationwide campaign proposed for the furtherance of this plan. President Harding is said to be in full sympathy with the project. The United States forestry bureau has already promised its aid. Highway associations and governmental bodies will be included in the plans.

Present Plantings.

The cooperation of the officials of the Lincoln highway will, no doubt, be forthcoming soon. The highway association has a board of architects whose duty it is to make plans to beautify the roadsides. The president of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association said, "Both civic and highway organizations already have working committees interested in tree planting. The stage is all set for this movement."

There are already several small instances of planting trees for memorials. The Southern Illinois State University, at Carbondale, has planted six trees as a memorial for the boys in that school. There is a row of "service trees" about to be planted at Byron. At Kewanee, a memorial avenue of thirty-one trees has been planted.

BOBBINK & ATKINS, Rutherford, New Jersey

Proposed Highway Plantings.

Those are a small beginning of the new plan. This new project will line the Lincoln highway, from New York to San Francisco, and the Dixie highway, from Chicago to Florida, with beautiful trees, each tree bearing the name of a service man. For the men who fell, trees on prominent crossroads will bear their names and tell the fact that they died for their country.

The extent of the area to be covered is somewhat indicated by the fact that the Lincoln highway is 3,305 miles long. The Dixie highway is over 2,000 miles in length. A tree every thirty feet would necessitate approximately 1,750,000 trees. As this is less than half the service men, there will be plenty of trees left over to line several other great highways.

This proposal is one that nurserymen will support. Should the indications of its success prove true, there will be a good demand for shade trees in all sections of the country.

California privet is entirely sold out by local nurserymen, with Berberis Thunbergii a close second. These two varieties were always in good supply until this year.

W. H. Nichols & Son report a prosperous season and are busy planting perennials at present.

Planting season is in full blast and although nurserymen were busy the last few weeks filling orders, they are now just as busy planting stock for next season.

J. L. Wetzel & Son have been busy the last two weeks with landscape work in Cleveland. T. J. M.

NEWARK, N. J.

Transient cut flower trade is a little quiet, but there has been considerable funeral work the last few weeks. The seed, plant and shrub business is active, and there is considerable work in early cemetery decorations. Prices on flowers are down slightly, but they have not reached pre-war figures. The large amount of unemployment is the cause of much loss to local florists.

AGERATUM, Fraserii

We feel confident in offering Ageratum "Fraserii" to our customers that we are offering what will be one of the most valuable acquisitions to the bedding plant line in recent years, that is a blue, a decided blue, that would be continually in bloom. In our trial grounds last summer "Fraserii" attracted more attention than any other bedding plant. It only grew about eight to ten inches high and was covered the entire season with what can easily be classed as immense trusses of flowers, as many of them were over 2½ inches across, while the individual flower would be ¾ of an inch in diameter. The plant spread about 12 to 15 inches across. It can easily be used with Alternantheras as a border plant.

Being an early bloomer and dwarf, compact grower, it makes an excellent pot plant. 2-inch, $1.00 per doz.; $6.00 per 100. 3-inch, $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

NEW WHITE CARNATION THOMAS C. JOY

Very Fragrant Prolific Producer Excellent Keeper No Splits Perfect Form Strong Stem Good Shipper Pure White

“There is no other white that is just as good.”—AUGUST POEHLMANN.
(See letter below.)

This new Carnation, originated by Joy Floral Co., Nashville, Tenn., is being grown this season at three other nationally known establishments—for trial. Here is what they say of it:

It gives me great pleasure to recommend your white carnation Joy to florists who want a good commercial white. As far as I know, there is no other white that is just as good. I was a little skeptical at first but I am fully convinced, after seeing the variety growing at our place, that it is even better than Matchless, and that it will hold its own for some time to come.

Morton Grove, Ill.

AUGUST F. POEHLMANN

We want to report that in our location, where sunlight is about as rare a bird as any place in this country, it is not only holding its own but proving to be a wonder. We consider it to be an excellent commercial white carnation.

Cleveland, O.

FRED C. W. BROWN,

Mgr. Gasser Company.

We are much pleased with your new white carnation. It is clean growing, makes very little grass as practically every shoot runs immediately to a bloom. The color could not be a purer white at any time of the year. It is a non-burster, the calyx being long, the bud coming out quite a distance from the calyx before opening. When allowed to develop the flower has a high center, the form being excellent.

Tewksbury, Mass.

CANTON, O.

Johnston-Luce Wedding.

Zion Lutheran church, at Wooster, O., was the scene of one of the prettiest weddings in this section, of interest to the craft because Miss Rhea Luce, of Wooster, was the bride of Dan L. Johnston, of Canton. Mr. Johnston is the proprietor of Johnston's Flower Shop, at Canton, O. The bride was attended by a maid of honor, a matron of honor and eight bridesmaids.

The beautiful gowns worn were made more beautiful by the handsome, artistic arm bouquets of sweet peas carried by the maid and matron of honor and the colonial staffs with sweet peas carried by the bridesmaids. The bride's bouquet was a work of art and consisted of lilies of the valley and orchids. Satin ribbon and silk chiffon were used in profusion. Wild smilax and pink roses were used in the house and church decorations.

The bouquets were designed and executed by Miss Wilda Wallace, of Johnston's Flower Shop, and reflected great credit on her ability.

The occasion gave Mr. Johnston's brother nobles in the Shrine an opportunity to even scores. This they did by kidnapping him as he left the church and returning him at 9:30 p. m. minus his evening clothes but in overalls and a much-painted face. In this costume he was paraded around the center of town.

After the honeymoon trip the newly-weds will reside in their new home, on Massillon road, near Canton.

LANCASTER, PA.

Club Meeting.

The Lancaster County Florists' Club held its monthly meeting Thursday evening, April 21, at Neal McCowskey's cafe, in Center square. Forty members were present. After refreshments were served, the president, Willis B. Girvin, of Leola, called the meeting to order. The speaker of the evening was Arthur Niessen, of Philadelphia, who gave a helpful talk to the members and spoke optimistically of the future of the business. D. T. Connor and T. J. Nolan also spoke, telling why more greenhouses should be built.

B. F. Barr was appointed chairman of the committee in charge of the chrysanthemum show. He will name his committee in the near future.

It was moved that our congressman, W. W. Griest, be instructed to use his best efforts to have the census reports reexamined and have Lancaster county remain at the top of the list as the most productive agricultural county in the country.

Several handsome gifts were awarded and the lucky ladies were Mrs. J. Rutter Hess, Mrs. J. Wade Gayley, Miss May Brenneman and Mrs. R. Nagle. The next meeting will be held on the third Thursday of May at the Hotel Brunswick.

Various Notes.

Harry A. Schroyer and wife are spending a month at Hot Springs, Va.

Mrs. Albert M. Herr is chairman of the floricultural interests of the Lancaster Iris Club, which will give a flower show May 25.

D. J. Keohone, Philadelphia, was a visitor last week. H. K. R.

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

RADIATION AND PIPE NEEDED.

Having noticed in a previous issue answers to questions relating to greenhouse heating, I write to ask you what would be the necessary radiation in a greenhouse 21x72 feet, running east and west, with a service room at the west end, in the basement of which is a boiler. The side walls are five and one-half feet, thirty-one inches of which are glass. The rafters measure twelve and one-half feet in length.

W. L. N.—Neb.

About 800 square feet of radiation will be needed to heat the greenhouse described, but it will be well to use a boiler rated for approximately 1,000 square feet of radiation. This will require a grate about twenty-five inches in diameter.

To heat the house, it would be advisable to use three 2½-inch flow pipes, carrying one on each side wall plate and the other three feet below the ridge.

For the return coils run four 2-inch pipes on each side wall and five under the middle bench. Give all pipes a slight slope and, unless the flow pipes are connected to a 4-inch main flow, do not fail to connect the highest point of each flow pipe with the pipe leading to the expansion tank.

DWELLING AND GREENHOUSE.

I am building a greenhouse, connecting it to my dwelling, which is a 2-story brick structure with basement. The greenhouse floor will be about two feet above the basement floor, but I can make a pit for the furnace. The greenhouse will be 28x36 feet, with 6-foot eaves. There will be four feet of concrete and two feet of glass on the northeast and northwest and three feet of concrete on the southwest end and southeast side. The workroom, 6x28 feet, will be of wood.

As I intend to use a hot water system, I should like to know what size of furnace and pipes I shall need and how to install them in order to heat the greenhouse and my dwelling to 60 degrees, with zero temperature outside. Where should the expansion tank be located? Shall I need two tanks?

M. M. D.—Ind.

To heat the greenhouse to 60 degrees and to supply radiation to the amount of 400 square feet in the dwelling, a boiler with a rating of 800 square feet of hot water radiation will be needed. This would have a grate approximately twenty-four inches in diameter. It would be advisable to run a 3-inch overhead main to the farther end of the greenhouse, and drop down a 2½-inch supply pipe on each side of the door.

KROESCHELL BOILERS

Kroeschell Tubeless Boilers

It will pay you to consider the advantages of KROESCHELL BOILERS for Hot Water or Steam no matter how large or small the size of your establishment.

The superiority of our boilers has resulted in the removal and abolishment of hundreds of cast iron sectional boilers—in every instance KROESCHELL BOILERS give more heat with the same piping with less fuel.

KROESCHELL BOILERS have no bulky, soot-accumulating surfaces—you avoid the disagreeable work and trouble indispensable to cleaning boilers with complicated and tortuous back and forth fire passages.

The high safety factor of KROESCHELL BOILERS eliminates the danger of cracking and break-down risks.

Successful greenhouse owners everywhere insist upon KROESCHELL BOILERS because they are dependable and economical—you get better and longer service—you can reduce your heating costs by burning the cheapest grades of soft coal.

It is a sign of scientific management to own a KROESCHELL—a business management that insures a responsive, efficient and profitable heating system.

The supremacy of KROESCHELL BOILERS is proven by their country-wide adoption.

Summer Temperature in Winter Time!

ABSOLUTE CONTROL of temperature conditions in your greenhouses in June and January alike—is what you get from the easily installed Morehead System. Just attach the comparatively inexpensive Morehead Back-to-Boiler System to your present boiler equipment and you can dismiss the winter months' problem from your mind.

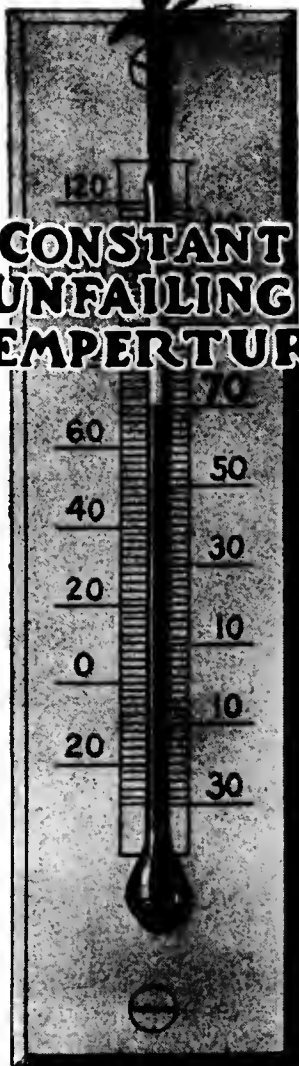

Substituted for the steam pumps you are perhaps using now—the Morehead System will eliminate sluggish circulation forever—and keep all your steam pipes clear of condensation—returning it to the boilers immediately as pure, hot feed water—in just the condition to be used again with the least consumption of fuel.

Now is the time to find out what the Morehead System can do for you. Write immediately for proof that the coal man actually pays for your Morehead System in a few months' time—as well as copies of letters from progressive florists who find the Morehead System invaluable in growing prize-winning flowers.

"BACK-TO-BOILER-SYSTEM"

Connect each supply pipe with a coil of six 2-inch returns running each way from the end door to the corners of the house and thence along the side walls. In case bottom heat is desired for any of the middle benches, it can be provided by using only four lines in each of the side coils and arranging two coils to contain three pipes each to run under the benches, or in the walks if solid beds are used.

A 3-inch flow pipe should be used to supply the dwelling. The expansion tank should, if possible, be located well above the radiation. Pipes should be run from the highest part of each flow pipe to the pipe leading to the expansion tank.

ARRANGING THE COILS.

I have erected a greenhouse, 13x32 feet, with 4-foot walls of glass. It is ten feet high at the ridge and has glass in only one end, since the east end abuts against the boiler house. The greenhouse extends east and west and is protected from strong winds. It is built of second-hand material and is fairly tight, but the temperature here sometimes drops to 20 degrees below zero for short periods.

I have an upright tubular boiler, two feet in diameter and six feet high, which I wish to use. Since the top of the boiler will be about two feet higher than the beds, where shall I place the flows and returns, and how many will be needed? What sizes would be best?
C. M.—Pa.

No mention is made of the temperature desired in the house, but we judge that it will be ample if 60 degrees can be maintained.

We suggest the use of three 2-inch flow pipes, placing one on each side wall plate and the other on the north row of purlin posts. At the farther end of the house, connect the flow pipes with the return coils. For these we should use 1½-inch pipes, with three lines on each of the two rows of purlin posts and four lines on each of the side walls. The coils on the purlin posts should be four or five feet above the tops of the beds, while those on the walls should be well up toward the plates. All pipes should have a slight fall, but this need not be more than one inch in ten feet. This arrangement of the coils is for the purpose of bringing them above the top of the boiler, and will serve the same purpose as the lowering of the boiler.

We cannot give an accurate estimate of the capacity of the boiler described above, but if it is fairly efficient, a boiler with a grate two feet in diameter should supply 800 square feet of radiation, while less than 300 square feet will be needed for the house described. If the grate is only eighteen inches in diameter, the boiler is none too large for this house.

FROM STEAM TO WATER.

I have a greenhouse, 45x125, with 7-foot side walls, three feet of concrete and four feet of glass. It is twenty feet to the ridge, which runs east and west, and the house has a 10-foot lean-to on the north side. It is now heated with steam. I should like to change to hot water. There is a 3-inch flow down through the center of the house about seven feet below the ridge. There are fourteen 1½-inch returns placed in the

Giblin Greenhouse Boiler

It Lets the Florist Sleep

W. D. Snell, Florist, Herkimer, N. Y., is a hard man to keep down. His activity exerted itself about twenty years ago in Newville, Herkimer County, New York, where he started in the Florist business in a small way.

He now owns or has an interest in four Florist Establishments, located in Ilion, Mohawk, Herkimer, and Little Falls. He says much of his prosperity is due to his first selecting Giblin boilers for his greenhouses and this prosperity has continued so vigorously that he has used six of them within the past twenty years.

Here is the letter he writes:

Little Falls, N. Y., April 2, 1921.
Giblin & Co., Utica, N. Y.
Gentlemen: Within twenty-one (21) years past, I have bought six boilers from you, and have bought boilers from no one else.
My purchases were as follows:
Newville, N. Y., Dec. 1900, 1 No. 70 Steam Boiler for Greenhouses.
Mohawk, N. Y., Dec. 1906, 1 No. 407 Boiler for Greenhouses.
Herkimer, N. Y., Dec. 11, 1911, 1 No. 407 Steam Boiler for Greenhouses.
Herkimer, N. Y., Jan. 1916, 1 No. 70 Steam Boiler for Residence.
Ilion, N. Y., Sept. 1916, 1 No. 406 Steam Boiler for Greenhouses.
Little Falls, N. Y., Jan. 1921, 1 No. 407 Steam Boiler for Greenhouses.
I bought the first boiler because I was anxious to see if it was all you claimed for it. I found it was, and I have bought the other boilers because I felt I could buy no other boilers that would give as much for the money invested.
I have found your boilers economical in fuel, in some instances doing the work for one-half it cost with other boilers.
I have maintained an even temperature for nineteen hours without attention.
If florists would disregard the first cost, which is ONCE ONLY, and pay more attention to the maintenance cost, they would get more profit out of their business.
I have paid a higher price for your boilers than I was offered for other boilers, but I thought the price I paid you none too high for what I got in return. Yours truly,

W. D. SNELL.

Wilks Self-Feeding Hot Water Boiler

For Economy, Durability, Dependability

Install a WILKS and Forget Your Troubles

No night fireman required—as the magazine or coal chamber holds sufficient fuel to keep fire 10 to 12 hours without attention. Best made for a small greenhouse.

S. WILKS MFG. CO.,
3523 Shields Ave., Chicago, Ill.

So. Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 28th, 1920.

Dear Sirs: Received your boiler O. K. As for the boiler, it is all you claim for it and more. Would not trade it for six like the cast iron one I had before it. When it comes to keeping heat over night, it's right on the job. During our coldest weather here this winter (7 below) it kept the house at 55 degrees, and did it easy on slack and nut mixed.

Thanking you again for past favors, I remain, the level of the greenhouse. I should like to leave the piping that is already in just the way it is. But I expect to put larger returns across the east end of the house. How much more pipe will be needed and where will it be best to place it? Would you use a circulator to keep a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather? The house is exposed to west winds and the boiler room is on the east end.

Yours truly,

(Signed) JAMES McCRAY.

T. J. S.—N. Y.

We should prefer to use 1½-inch pipe for returns, even with a circulator. But as you have 1¼-inch pipe on hand, it may be utilized if the hot water is carried under a pressure. The boiler seems to have sufficient capacity, but the margin is a narrow one.

In addition to the 3-inch flow pipe now used, we should use either two 3-inch or four 2½-inch flows, carrying one on each plate and, if 2½-inch flows are used, placing the remainder of the pipes at the middle of the rafters. For the main greenhouse, in addition to the fourteen 1¼-inch returns, we should arrange for ten 1½-inch lines through the middle of the house. Keep the returns as high as possible.

In the lean-to, run a 3-inch flow pipe on the back wall and run two 1½-inch returns in addition to the four 1¼-inch pipes now in use.

The radiation as planned above will give about 50 degrees in zero weather when operated as an open tank system, but by using the circulator, and giving more attention to the firing, it will be possible to maintain 60 degrees. In ordinary winter weather, 60 degrees may be kept up easily even without the circulator.

SEATTLE NOTES.

The cut of carnations passed its low period and local growers said that they expect to be able to care for the trade nicely up to the time of Mothers' day. The local cut was much improved, but the best of the deliveries were coming from eastern Washington and Oregon growers. There was an abundance of sweet peas, most of which made a most satisfactory showing as to color requirements. Narcissus poeticus came to hand in spotted lots and dealers did not have the slightest difficulty in disposing of the good stock.

Various Notes.

Commercial travelers calling on the trade of late included J. W. Hurick, of Portland; Carl Black, representing the Zane Pottery Co., Zanesville, O., and W. E. Hollingsworth, of the Western Waxed Paper Goods Co., North Portland.

W. Killing has been placed in charge of the greenhouses of Rosaia Bros., succeeding W. H. Hawkins, who has entered business for himself here. Harvey Simpson started the middle of last week for Alaska, where he will be for about three months on an extended vacation. Irving Harris, recently with Rosaia Bros. and previously with the Woodlawn Flower Shop, has resigned his position.

The City Flower Shop showed the first wax begonias of the new season and has also been offering some of the best Darwins coming to hand. There has been an increase in the number of decorations and the shipping business is also registering some improvement.

Tight Boiler Settings Conserve Heat and Save Coal

SEALRITE

Then in the busiest months you will find your furnaces ready to give the utmost heat units for the fuel consumed.

SEALRITE hardens on the outside while remaining plastic within, contracting and expanding with changing heat or weather conditions, but will not crack or peel.

SEALRITE is excellent to use in the place of putty for making panes of glass tight, and for adding to the life of cracked panes. Use it as a waterproofing material. No moisture can penetrate a coating of SEALRITE, no air or heat find its way through SEALRITE.

known as the Pink Beauty, while the other is Prince of Austria. The name describes the first type, while the other is also a pink, which shades off into white.

Probably the best of the local sweet peas coming to hand at this time are those being offered by C. H. Benson, of Kirkland. The color is especially good.

The Woodlawn Flower Shop experienced such a rush of funeral work the latter part of last week that it was found necessary to increase the force for the last three days. Among the novel funeral pieces developed at this shop last week was that for a lumber company official, which consisted of a log reproduction with the tree's rings shown in flowers. It was covered with moss on the sides and there was a large ax of flowers driven into the log.

The Tacoma Wholesale Floral Co. has been sending in some of the best snapdragons shown here this season, some of the color combinations being especially attractive.

L. W. McCoy recently handled a decoration at the Yacht Club. Ophelia roses, flowering wild currant and greens, were the featured items. With the coming of summer, a portion of the greenhouses is being switched over to early vegetables, but a heavy cut of seasonable flowers still is reported. Miss Horne has returned from a short vacation.

The Pinchurst Floral Shop last week experienced the largest business in funeral work since its organization. This shop is still featuring good quality Murillo tulips grown by Dr. Allen. B. Delfonti has been added to the sales force of this shop.

Raymond Kester, for the last year and a half with the J. M. Gasser Co., of Cleveland, is the latest addition to the staff of the Hollywood Gardens. He will bring his family into the northwest as soon as the school season has closed.

The Rainier Floral Co. has been sending in some Calecolaria hybrida which is of good color and especially strong growth. This has been a quick seller, as its novelty helps to move it.

Carl Melby, of Melby's Flower Shop, reports a growing business, with a number of orders for the preparation of home conservatories and window boxes.

One of the local flower shops last week carried this card placed in the center of three made-up corsages, "Surrender Her with Flowers and She'll Surrender."

Sylvester Mucci has been receiving the sincere sympathy of the entire trade on the news that his mother recently died at the family home in Italy.

The Market.

The glutted condition of the market last week has been relieved somewhat. An overabundance last week caused a sacrifice in prices. Business was slow and large quantities could be had almost at the buyer's own price. Conditions are improving, however, and prices have stiffened.

Roses have decreased in supply, causing prices to be more stable. Carnations continue to be plentiful and can be had at from $4 to $6 per hundred.

Snapdragons are in evidence and move fairly well at $10 per hundred. Calla and Easter lilies are numerous. The former sell at $15 to $20 per hundred, while the latter bring from $1 to $2 per dozen. Many sweet peas are in the market at 75 cents to $1.50 per hundred.

Only a few calendulas are seen. Darwin tulips are conspicuous and attractive in display windows.

Calecolarias are included among the potted plants offered. Blooming bedding stock is also being offered, but, as yet, does not meet with heavy sale. Blooming pansy plants sell readily. Ferns are beginning to meet with more active demand.

Various Notes.

Herbert Tons, with Temperley's, was recently married to Mrs. Olive Ramsay, of Fort Wayne, Ind.

Baur & Steinkamp are beginning to cut gladioli. This firm has begun to plant carnations out in the field.

O. E. Steinkamp and E. E. Temperley are taking part in the Murat extravaganza this week.

The majority of florists are adhering closely to Sunday closing, as was agreed upon by the florists. There are, however, a few who are taking advantage of the closing of other shops to enhance their own business on this day. The tradesmen feel that this is a case of honor among themselves, and that the agreement should be lived up to by all.

Allan Humason is in the city, calling on the trade.

SALT LAKE CITY.

The Market.

Stormy weather last week cut the supply down and relieved the glutted condition which existed the previous week. Although carnations were in oversupply, roses cleaned up well. Prices in most instances remained unchanged. Laddie carnations are becoming more popular every day, and although a good crop of these was on hand, all available sold readily. Sweet peas were plentiful, with a good demand. Iris arrived in large quantities, but the call for it was small.

An excellent Mothers' day business is looked for by all florists in this section. Growers are now being flooded with orders and the only thing that can hurt the wholesaler will be a shortage of stock. A good cut of all kinds of flowers is looked for, but much depends upon the weather.

Various Notes.

P. Weil, of the C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, spent part of last week in Salt Lake City visiting the trade.

Miss Elizabeth Huth, of the Flower Shop, Ogden, staged a special rose sale Saturday, April 16, to help the growers move some of their stock. Results were beyond expectations.

A visit to the greenhouses of the Inter-Mountain Floral Co. denotes the fact that Mr. Sorenson is surely ready for bedding season. This concern has 10,000 geraniums and a full line of other bedding stock.

Emil Lund, Bountiful, Utah, expects to have a big cut of carnations for Mothers' day. Five beds of Matchless in full crop are especially fine.

The Test of Time

Q MANY HOUSES look good on paper and when they are new, but not all stand the only real test: THE TEST OF TIME. You will find among the "old-timers" many Dietsch houses that have stood this test and been found not wanting. Dietsch houses are designed and built on correct, scientific and practical principles. It is not our aim to meet our competitors' prices, for that would be inconsistent with good materials. To the grower who does not thoroughly investigate and compare, our proposition does not appeal.

Q NOW IS THE TIME to build greenhouses. Dietsch construction has stood the test of years. Not only are Dietsch houses among the oldest standing today, but you will find each house an improvement over the last. Our construction is advancing with the times. We advocate nothing that has not proved its value. There will be better houses than we are now building, and they will be built by us.

Q WHEN PLANNING YOUR NEW HOUSES, it will pay you to investigate Dietsch greenhouse materials and methods of construction. We build most efficient and durable houses at moderate cost. Construction of wood exclusively or wood and iron combined, using each where it will best serve its purpose.

The Market.

The weather man seems to have picked out our city as a good place to send the cold, snow and rain. But even with all this, the florists are a cheerful lot and have no complaint to make of business this week. It has been good. No one has had much time to loaf. Prices have remained about the same, and there has been no oversupply of stock.

Various Notes.

Lanternier's are cutting some fine snapdragon.

The Blossom Floral Co. has had some fine begonias and potted pansies, which have helped out during the general shortage in the plant line.

At the Doswell Greenhouses are seen some fine Easter Greeting pelargoniums and hydrangeas that are going to be in just right for Mothers' day.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey are cutting a lot of fine carnations. They will be in good crop for Mothers' day also. Orders taking up practically the entire amount were booked long ago.

Velma Broekerman, the 15-year-old daughter of I. B. Broekerman, died Friday morning, April 22, following a short illness of tuberculosis. Mr. Broekerman is employed at the Flick greenhouses.

Among the out-of-town visitors last week was Leighton Tombow, of Butler, Ind. Mr. Tombow is adding more glass to his range this year.

A. G. Bieberick, of Huntington, Ind., was in the city negotiating for some rose plants with which to plant the two new houses that he is erecting this year.

S. N.

Anderson, Ind.—The greenhouse of the Dawson Floral Co. was the scene of a fire Monday, April 11. There was little damage done.

SKINNER

OF IRRIGATION

Just a glimpse at Movilla Gardens, Haverford, Pa., where James J. Boyd raises his gold medal winning peonies.

James Boyd Tells You How to Get Gold Medal Peonies in Abundance

Wish every one of you growers could talk to James Boyd himself.

Talk to him, while you walked with him through Movilla Gardens at Haverford, Pa., where he raises his peonies.

If you could get first-hand facts from him about what his Skinner System of watering does for his peonies, gladioli and other flowers; reckon you would be so altogether convinced of the absolute necessity of your putting in at least one 100 foot Portable Line, that we wouldn't have enough lines to supply all you growers.

Of great importance is the way the Skinner System will help you bring your peonies in bloom on time for Decoration Day.

If they come along a few days late, you know they are worth next to nothing.

If they come ahead of time, they can be easily held back in the ice box.

The really funny part of the whole thing to understand is, that growers will PRAY for rain, when they could simply PAY for it once and always have it. Have it ever afterward exactly when and where they wanted, if they had the Skinner System Portable or fixed lines.

If you haven't it, must be you kind of don't like to bother to write.

Don't blame you a bit. Then don't write us.

Just give us the length and width of the piece of ground you want to irrigate and we will send you some interesting facts.

The Market.

Business last week was good in spots. There was considerable design work and many decorations. Flowers were not any too plentiful, but a good supply is promised for Mothers' day.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' Association was held April 18. F. D. Clark, president, was in the chair. P. L. Whytoch gave a travel talk of his visits to the gardens of the old country after a two months' trip. Lockie Wilson gave a history of the growth of horticultural organizations. A vote of thanks was tendered on motion of H. A. Dilleuth. It was decided to approach the government asking the appointment of a commission to help gardeners and florists coming to this country. Messrs. Wilson and Whytoch were appointed as a committee.

On invitation of P. L. Whytoch, a special meeting will be held at his home May 2. G. M. Geraghty will report on the floral exhibit at the Canadian national exhibition.

The winter fair will be held November 17 to 25. A contribution of $200 was voted for this year. Thomas Manton, the representative of the association, will be assisted by Messrs. Mills, Evans, Whytoch, Geraghty and Holgetts in dividing up the $3,000 prize list.

J. K. M. L. Farquhar addressed the Toronto Board of Trade on the proposed botanical scheme last week and the Board of Trade will get behind the scheme and give it its support.

Various Notes.

The publicity committee of the Toronto Retail Florists' Club, under G. M. Geraghty, is planning an advertising campaign which will likely be the last for this season. The committee has done good work and its efforts are much appreciated.

G. M. Geraghty and J. J. Higgins will attend the publicity banquet of the

The Market.

Business is good, better than last year, which is saying a great deal, and the prospects for the spring and summer are, if anything, more hopeful than last season.

Beauties are coming into crop freely and will be the chief item on the program for Mothers' day.

Orchids are getting scarce and other flowers are lessening in quantity, owing to the early throwing-out that is going on in the greenhouses.

Various Notes.

Fred Cox, for ten years a shipper at the Dale Estate, leaves next month to open a store of his own at Oshawa. Walter Rigg, of the same establishment, has gone to W. E. McClure, at Chatham, while Charles Norton has opened an up-to-date store at Welland, Ont.

Paranoid instead of Putty

—the totally different Glazing Compound

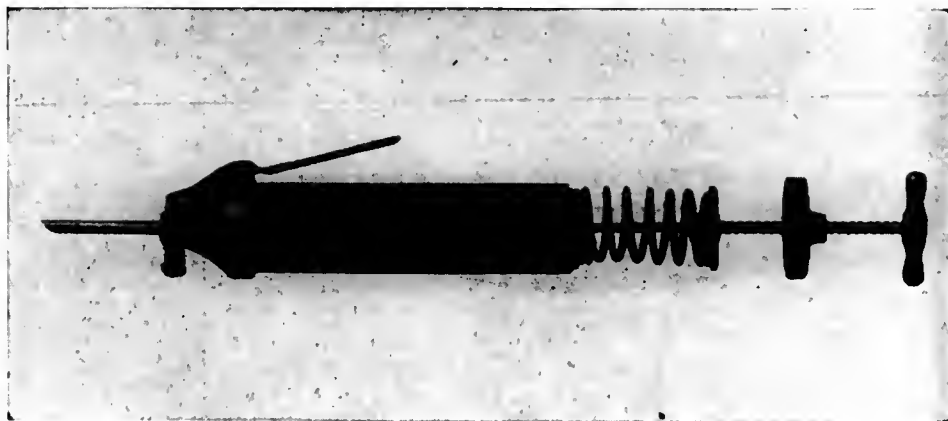

There is not a Glazing Material on the market today "JUST LIKE" Paranoid, as this product is manufactured from our own secret formulas and you can only secure this material direct from our factory.

Paranoid is a pure PARA Gum product. It is guaranteed to keep your houses tight for years, and you MUST HAVE TIGHT HOUSES to produce perfect stock.

Paranoid is non-hardening. The gums that go into its manufacture prevent this. Our product will hold the glass with a firm, tenacious grip, but at the same time elastic enough to distribute the strain to the houses, and SAVE YOU MONEY BY SAVING THE GLASS.

Paranoid is a quality product. It is the best that can be made and the investment that you have in your greenhouses demands that you use the best.

Don't experiment with cheap, inferior materials any longer. SPECIFY PARANOID on your next glazing job, and you will find that our claims of this wonder product are made with an honest foundation.

THE PARANOID SPRING MACHINE

A machine that is automatic and operated with one hand. The parts in the manufacture of this machine are the best, and we agree to keep it in repair indefinitely. Successfully used in hundreds of greenhouses. No other machine will glaze your houses as quickly or so well.

A Whole Day's Work in One-Fourth the Time and Healthier Plants Besides

This year with its many changes in market prices requires a bigger crop at lower cost to keep your income from coming down. Labor is still high. But what's the use of hiring men for hand cultivating when you can do your cultivating, discing, harrowing, furrowing and weeding in one-fourth the time with a

Merry Garden Auto-Cultivator

It's a proven fact that one man with a Merry Garden can do the same work as four men with hand implements, and do it easier. With a Merry Garden you can cultivate deeper, get as close to roots as desired, cultivate oftener and raise sturdier plants. You can use a Merry Garden where a hand or horse drawn implement can't be used. Straddles narrow rows, goes between wide ones and works on any kind of soil. Also operates 30-inch lawnmower. No danger of mutilating plants, as gears are enclosed and exhaust is to side.

Easy to handle. It makes a pleasant chore out of an otherwise day's drudgery. Equipment which can be furnished consists of 30-inch lawnmower, power pulley frame for stationary power work, tool steering device and 3 or 4 row seeder.

Solves Labor Problem

By A. F. J. Baur, Secretary of the American Carnation Society

From "The Florists' Review," Feb. 10, 1921

"Seeing a discussion in the columns of The Review regarding the merits of motor-driven cultivators, I feel impelled to add a word regarding our experience along that line. It is a most important matter to the trade and will be more so as time goes on.

"About a year ago we purchased a Merry Garden Cultivator. We judged that this implement was just about what we wanted here for cultivating young carnation plants in the field, and for any other cultivating of a similar nature.

"Up to last spring we had been using Planet Junior man-power cultivators. We were obliged to put four men in the field after every rain in order to secure the full benefits from the rain. During the past summer, with a slightly enlarged planting, we found it possible to do all our cultivation with this one Merry Garden Auto-Cultivator. It did the work in the same time as the four man-cultivators and did better work. We would not think of parting with this implement.

"We break our field in the late fall and work it down with the disk in the spring, using the team for both operations. After that, we need only the light cultivator and the Merry Garden is just the ticket for that."

A. F. J. BAUR,
Secretary, The American
Carnation Society.

Many Write Like This:

"The Merry Garden Auto-Cultivator easily pays for itself in labor saved every 30 days. On our place, one man cultivated, in 3 hours, a patch usually requiring two men, with hand cultivators, a day and a half. Besides, the job was done twice as deep."

How About an Aeroplane Trip?

Would you undertake a cross-country trip in an aeroplane with your wife and child without being thoroughly satisfied that every wire, brace, nut, bolt, valve, bearing, belt, and the hundred and one other parts had been tested by a qualified expert?

Well, hardly!

But that's just exactly what you do when you invest your perfectly good money in a greenhouse range without being thoroughly satisfied that it is scientifically designed and up-to-date in every particular. It is not sufficient that it be well built and of exactly the same model as the one you built fifteen years ago. The old one may have been a dandy. It may be doing good service now. But you wouldn't buy a 1915 model automobile just because you had one that was satisfactory. No, sir.

The day of the old one-hoss shay has passed forever. This is the day of the aeroplane.

The day of the old-time greenhouse has passed forever. This is the day of the AGMCO.

The Secret of the Great Strength of Our Pipe Frame House

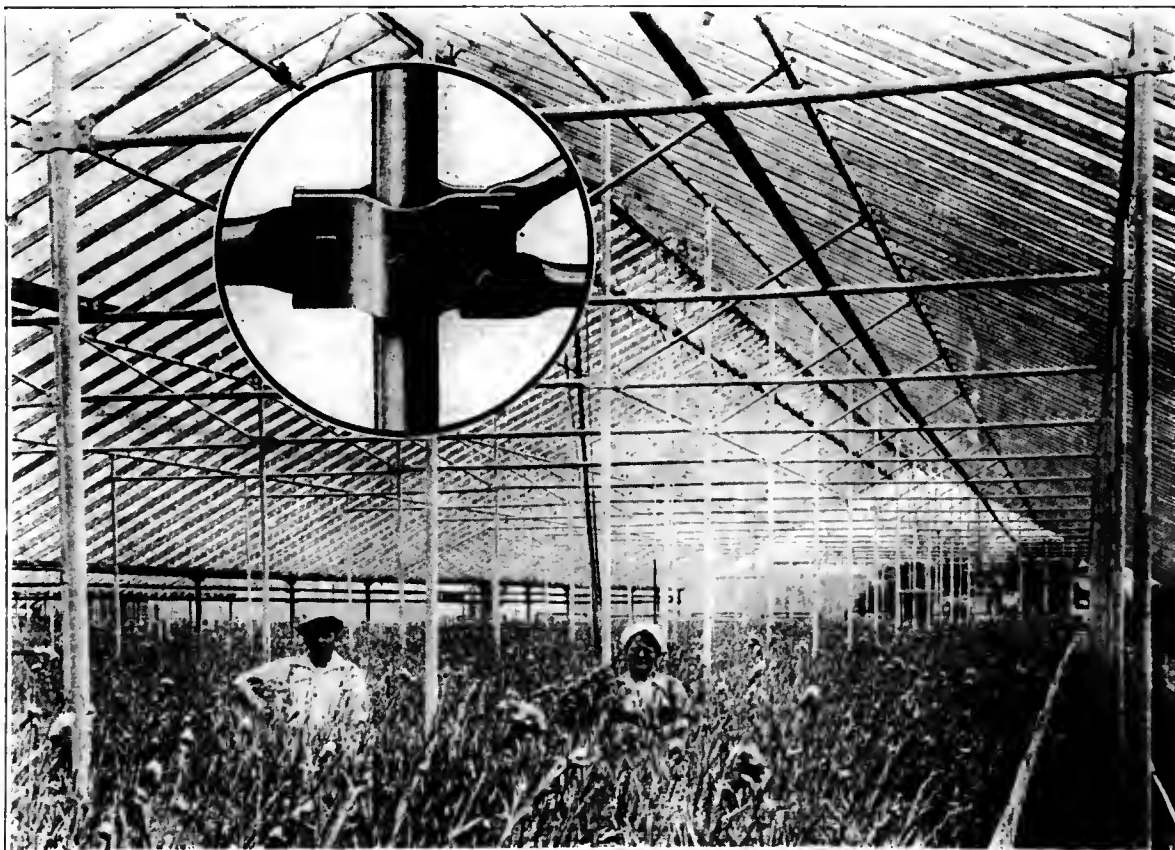

Many Pipe Frame houses are constructed well enough as far as the pipe itself is concerned, but just look at the connections of the various pipe members. They are CAST IRON.

Many years ago when they first started to build skyscrapers, bridges and buildings of all kinds, cast iron was used quite freely in the structural parts. BUT HOW ABOUT TODAY? You will find hardly any and what little there is used, is put in places where no strain is imposed on these parts.

Because cast iron is brittle and is apt to snap at any time under strain, WE MAKE OUR CONNECTION FITTINGS OUT OF GALVANIZED STEEL. And furthermore, we bolt these fittings DIRECTLY THROUGH THE PIPE; no "Slip on slip off" fittings in our greenhouses; they are there TO STAY AND HOLD.

Moninger greenhouses are built with an eye to your future business. You will never regret buying one.

This is the time of year to make changes: the time of year for repairs, and renovations, and replacements: boilers, like the coal they burn, are seldom cheaper in Fall than in Spring.

You know there are always a lot of last minute people, but do you know that their tardy demands always affect prices? Besides, it's a comfort to have such work done and ready when cold weather comes around.

There are different ways to heat greenhouses: however, there are more wrong ways than right. Much depends on the location, the size and the crop. Ask us about these things. Our opinions will cost you nothing and they are of value, because we have been doing heating work for several generations.

Hot water and steam with all their modifications are well known to us. Both are right in the right place, but many installations are not right—sort of the right church but the wrong pew, as it were. Glad to have you make use of our service.

We manufacture Tubular Greenhouse Boilers, Cast Iron Square Sectional Greenhouse Boilers, Cast Iron Round Section Greenhouse Boilers, pipe fittings, branch tees, coil headers with automatic vents, pipe chairs, pipe hooks, hangers. If you have a greenhouse or expect soon to have one, you need our service and our advice. Our representatives will be pleased to call on you at any time.

MR. FLORIST!!

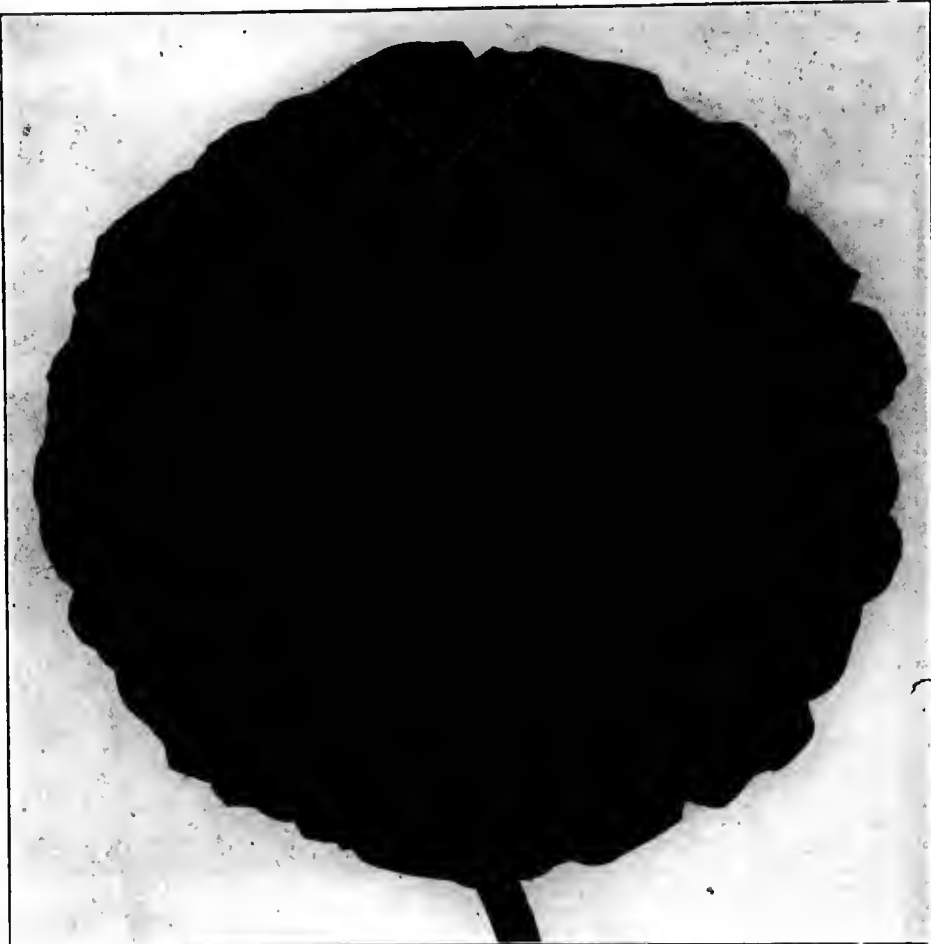

Plant Bodger's Seeds and they will "Say It with Flowers"

We have been working for several years perfecting stocks and we are now able to assist you in giving the flower-buying public what they are calling for: the beautiful pastel shades of delicate pinks, tyrian rose, fiery cerise and an endless list of pleasing shades in a New Type of immense size and unusual petalage, the Dahlia Flowered Zinnia. This type is popularizing the Zinnia. We have also introduced in Giants the Picotee, the Victory Quilled and a rich Golden Yellow called "Buttercup." These are distinctive and attractive as cut flowers. We have also on the market the long-stemmed Beauty Type of Aster and next year will have an Early Flowering Aster in this type for you.

We also recommend our Selected Strains of Cregos and American Branching, our Fancy Strains of Half Dwarf Cineraria, Calendula, Candytuft, the New Double Cosmos, White, Pink and Crimson; Giant Zinnia in fifteen distinct shades, and many other reselected strains for florists.

We are growers and sell only in bulk, but all reliable seedsmen carry —

Golden Yellow Sweet Peas!

McClenahan's Yellow Flower Dye

Will quickly and uniformly dye white, light-pink and rose-pink peas to golden yellow, apricot and burnt orange respectively

For two years I have supplied dyed peas to the Oklahoma City market, and they are now more popular than ever. The peas take the dye perfectly. It never streaks, but diffuses through the petals so the veins are not distinguishable, and the dyed flowers appear so natural that many people search seed catalogues and make diligent inquiry for seed of these new colors.

White Carnations take the dye to a medium yellow, sometimes leaving part of the central tuft uncolored, but producing a charming effect.

So far as we have experimented, roses seem to take the dye as readily as peas do. Cecile Brunners quickly change to orange.

See What a User Says:

"We have been handling Sweet Peas from you for the last two years, and have always been more than pleased with the yellow, apricot, and the burnt orange, which you have colored with McClenahan's Yellow Flower Dye. The colors have always been clear and real, never showing streaks as we have noticed in other dyes. We know the dye to be a great success."—THE FOSTER FLORAL CO., Oklahoma City, Okla., April 30, 1921.

This dye keeps indefinitely in dry form, dissolves instantly, and we use same solution for one to two weeks.

PRICE, sufficient to make one quart, $1.00, prepaid. Six for $5.00.

FLOWERING PLANTS BY LIGHT CONTROL

More economical production in the greenhouse has become possible as growers have increased means of control over plant growth. There is much still to be learned and, once learned, applied to commercial culture. Here is a means of control which may before long be attempted.

HAT there exists an intimate relation between the growth of plants and light is a generally recognized fact. This relation is particularly emphasized in our glass houses during the winter months. During that period cloudy days are numerous, a succession of them occurring not infrequently. The days also are short, so that the total amount of light that falls upon the plants during the winter months is much less than that which reaches them during the summer months.

The general effect of light on growth is to retard it. Plants grown in good light, are, as a rule, shorter than similar plants grown in weak light. It is largely because of this relation between light and growth that we have developed the practice of reducing the temperature in our greenhouses at night, for, as is well known, higher temperatures stimulate the plant to a greater growth rate, while lower temperatures retard it. In other words, by means of shifting the temperature the grower aims to establish a proper balance between the influence of light on the one hand and the influence of temperature on the other. If the adjustment is properly done, the result is good growth in quantity and in quality as well.

Retarded Plant Growth.

The influence of light is manifested not only in the elongation of the stem, which is the usual criterion of growth, but the effects are evident in the entire form and structure of the plant. A plant grown in weak light is deficient in green color, the stem is thin and weak, it has long internodes and the leaves are poorly developed. A plant grown in good light has a shorter but stronger stem; the leaves are well developed and possess abundant green color.

Light also affects the production of flowers. Every florist will testify that a spell of cloudy weather is accompanied by a season of fewer blooms. Flower production seems to be dependent upon certain environmental conditions which are more or less specific. In other words, the conditions which permit good vegetative growth—that is, the production of stems and leaves—are not the same as those which are conducive to flower production. We cannot draw a definite line of separation between flower production and

By Dr. P. A. LEHENBAUER.

NO INTRODUCTION NEEDED.

Readers of The Review everywhere have benefited by the helpful service to Illinois florists of Dr. P. A. Lehenbauer, head of experimental work in floriculture at Urbana, through the publication in these columns of his papers before Illinois trade bodies. His understanding of florists' problems and his practical view of scientific experiments have won for him widespread appreciation. He is now writing for The Review a series of articles of much interest and value to growers, the first of which appears on this page.

vegetative growth, for these two phases merge one into the other; nevertheless, each seems to respond in its own way to certain influences. In a later article I shall discuss this more fully, particularly in relation to the use of fertilizers. It is my purpose at present to point out some of the facts which we have learned about the effects of light on vegetative growth and reproduction. Extensive experiments carried on by Garner and Allard, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, have established facts which, it seems to me, are highly significant in this respect. Unfortunately, the plants which were used in these experiments were not the kind which are grown by florists; nevertheless, it is probable that many of the results are applicable to some of our greenhouse plants and it is for this reason that I feel justified in bringing the facts to the attention of florists.

Some fourteen years ago there was found a strain of tobacco plant which grows to an abnormal height and produces an abnormally large number of leaves. The individual plants of this strain grow to the extraordinary height of from ten to fifteen feet, while the plants of the old strain grow but a few feet in height. It is quite apparent that such a strain of tobacco, producing a larger amount of leaf material, is of great commercial importance. It is also a significant fact that this strain breeds true and always produces this character known as gigantism. However, in the latitude about Washington, D. C., where the plant is grown, it does not blossom in the field. No seeds, consequently, are produced and this is a decided handicap in the culture of this strain. If, however, plants which have been growing outdoors all summer are transplanted into the greenhouse late in summer, blossoms will soon appear and seed is formed in abundance. The results are similar if the plants in the field are cut back and only the stumps planted under glass. If seeds are planted in the greenhouse in the fall, the resulting plants will grow to a height of five feet or less and then produce abundant flowers. Similar seed sown in the spring outdoors will produce plants which grow to a height of from ten to fifteen feet, but which will produce no flowers.

Similar Seeds Differ.

What is the explanation of these phenomena? It is but natural to suppose that the conditions for growth in the greenhouse are different from conditions outdoors and that this accounts for the different behavior of the plants in the greenhouse. In the greenhouse the temperature is more uniform than it is outdoors and on the average lower than it is outdoors during the growing season. The moisture of both soil and air, the soil fertility, the carbon dioxide content, as well as light conditions, are more or less unnatural under glass. We may also reason that it is the season of the year which determines whether the plant will produce flowers or whether it will continue in the vegetative stage. During the winter months the days are short, while during the summer months the days are long. In other words, the quantity of solar light is less than it is during the summer months, for not only are there fewer hours of sunshine per day, but the intensity of the light also is reduced. There also is a difference in quality of light, since the position of the sun during the winter months is lower and, consequently, the sun's rays must pass through a deeper layer of atmosphere.

Important Factors.

Experiments were made to determine the effects of these various factors on flower production, and to find out what it is that determines the time when a plant will come into bloom. The following factors were studied carefully in this respect: Soil fertility, temperature, soil moisture, and light. All these factors were kept rigidly under control during the course of the experiments and only the one under consideration was varied in each experiment.

There is a rather common notion that partial starvation of a plant will induce flower development. Statements are frequently made that a fertile soil stimulates vegetative growth, while in a poor soil the tendency is to produce more flowers. In order to test this, tobacco plants were grown in pots or soils of different nutritive conditions and under partial starvation and it was found that during the winter months in the greenhouse "the plants invariably blossomed without regard to the size of the pot containing the plant or the extent to which the plant was stunted by unfavorable nutrition conditions." This conclusion refers only to time of flowering; a more detailed discussion of the relation between soil fertility and flower production will appear in a later article.

Temperature and Soil Moisture.

It was readily enough determined also that temperature was not the deciding factor of the blooming period. For in growing the plants in the greenhouse, the temperature of which was kept quite as high as prevails outdoors during the summer, the period of blossoming was not affected to any extent.

Similar tests were made to determine the effects of soil moisture. Plants grown in soils of different water content showed distinct differences in the size of the plants and in fruitfulness. However, the date of blossoming was not affected at all. All plants, regardless of the amount of water which had been added to the soil during the growing season, came into bloom on the same day.

In testing light intensity, some interesting data also were secured. Plants were grown in the open and under different weaves of cloth which produced different degrees of shading. The shaded plants showed the typical effects so often seen when there is insufficient light intensity; namely, slender growth, increased elongation of stem, enlarged area of leaves, reduced production of dry matter and reduced yield of seed. However, in no case did reduction in light intensity affect the date of blossoming. In some of the experiments, light intensity was kept continuously at only forty-three per cent of normal light, yet this had not the slightest effect on the time of blossoming.

Length of Illumination.

Experiments were finally carried out in order to determine the influence of the length of the daily period of illumination. For comparison, plants were grown under natural conditions of light while others were put in a dark room for varying periods of time each day throughout the growing season.

The results show that in the case of some species the length of the daily period of illumination is an important factor in determining the time of flower production. An example to illustrate this is Aster linariifolius, a form which grows wild in nature. Its blossoming period under natural conditions begins about September 1. A number of plants of this form were placed each day, beginning May 13, in a dark room at 4 p. m. and taken out again at 9 a. m. The period of exposure to light each day, therefore, was seven hours. Similar plants were kept continuously in the daylight—no artificial light was used—as checks. At the end of thirty-six days the plants which were exposed each day to light for seven hours came into bloom. The plants which were exposed to normal light conditions came into bloom only after 122 days. The common ragweed behaves in a similar way. When exposed to normal light for only seven hours each day, flowers are produced in twenty-seven days; growing under outdoor conditions, no flowers are produced until seven weeks later. It is thus seen that certain species of plants are either late or early blooming depending upon the daily period of exposure to light. It also is evident that in some species we can regulate the time of flower production by controlling the daily period of light exposure.

posed to normal light conditions came into bloom only after 122 days. The common ragweed behaves in a similar way. When exposed to normal light for only seven hours each day, flowers are produced in twenty-seven days; growing under outdoor conditions, no flowers are produced until seven weeks later. It is thus seen that certain species of plants are either late or early blooming depending upon the daily period of exposure to light. It also is evident that in some species we can regulate the time of flower production by controlling the daily period of light exposure.

Not all species, however, behave as do the two illustrations above. In some forms, especially, it seems, in the early blooming varieties, a reduction in the daily period of illumination has but little effect. This is nicely illustrated by means of four varieties of soy beans. These four varieties bloom under natural conditions in twenty-six, sixty-two, seventy-three and 110 days, respectively. When, however, these four varieties are exposed each day to light for only seven hours they come into bloom in twenty-one, twenty-one, twenty-four and twenty-six days, respectively. It is seen from this that all four varieties thus become early bloom-

Reverse Examples.

Some species behave in a still different way. The common cabbage and carrot refuse to respond to a shortening of the daily light exposure by producing earlier flowers. Hibiscus also produces no flowers when the light exposure is reduced to seven hours per day; in fact, it makes but little growth under these conditions.

Another interesting fact brought out in these experiments is the fact that a so-called annual plant may be made into a "semiannual," while a perennial may be made to produce two crops of flowers in the same season. The soy bean, an annual, was brought into bloom in from twenty-one to twenty-six days. After the seeds had ripened the plants were exposed to normal light and under these conditions new branches developed and a second crop of blossoms and seed was produced early in September. Ragweed behaves in a similar way. The species of aster, ordinarily a flowering perennial, gives exactly the same results under this treatment. It produces an early crop of flowers and seeds under the conditions of short days and then later in the season produces a second crop.

Other interesting and important facts were demonstrated in these experiments, but I must defer them at present. They all show the important relation of light, especially of the length of the daily period of illumination, on flower inception and development. I have given the most important facts; I believe they will find their application in the growing of some of our greenhouse plants. At any rate, they help us to understand better some of our problems.

I shall close by quoting, in a somewhat modified form in order to simplify, a part of the conclusion of Garner and Allard, who carried out the experimental work: The action of the length of day may be tentatively formulated as follows: Flower production can be attained by the plant only when it is exposed to a specifically favorable length of day. The requirements in this particular vary widely with the species and variety. Exposure to a length of day unfavorable to flower production but favorable to growth tends to produce indefinite continuation of vegetative development, while exposure to a length of day favorable alike to sexual reproduction and to vegetative development extends the period of flower production and tends to induce the "ever-bearing" type of flowering plant.

FLOWERS A NECESSITY.

Henry A. Siebrecht, Jr., of Pasadena, Cal., has the right idea of the way to build up Mothers' day as the great special flower day of the year. His advertising this year features the sentence: "Our motto for Mothers' day: 'Flowers are a necessity, not a luxury, on this day.' Our prices shall be accordingly." Some florists believe in getting while the getting is good, but Mr. Siebrecht's idea is to keep prices so low that flowers will be within the reach of all.

DANGER IN COAL SLUMP

HAVE YOU BOUGHT YOUR COAL?

Danger in Postponement.

Though some growers have begun to buy their coal for next season, a great many are postponing their purchases, for the same reason that the general public is holding off; namely, hopes of lower freight rates at a later date and a consequent lower cost. But it is advisable for them to consider that, while the possibility of lower freight rates is remote, the prospect of high fuel prices is quite likely. The "buyers' strike" thus far this year has cut production to a figure never reached before at this season and never at any other time of year except once, at the time of the strike in November, 1919. The railroads, at a season when they can move coal easily, have none to move. The rush that will follow when cold weather commences in the autumn will, under present transportation handicaps, produce congestion, delay and high speculative prices similar to those of last season.

The lack of demand, despite retail coal dealers' advertising in the newspapers more than is their custom, has brought coal prices to a figure thought impossible six months or so ago. Indeed, it is asserted that bituminous coal is selling at below the cost of production in some instances. It is quite safe to figure that at no time during the remainder of the year will it be possible to buy coal at prices lower than those prevailing at present. Aside from that, there is positive danger that those who delay buying will have difficulty in obtaining coal at any price when the actual need for it comes.

The Present Situation.

The situation is simply one of supply and demand, with the complication of transportation difficulties thrown in. There has been extremely little demand for coal for a long period. Consequently the bituminous mines are not running to more than forty per cent of capacity. Soft coal cannot be stored in any quantity at the mines; it takes up more room than is available and the extra handling naturally adds to the cost. A coal mine is like any other industrial plant. When there is no demand for its product it curtails operation. To do otherwise would mean bankruptcy.

Anyway, reserve stocks at the mines would not be the answer to the problem. This country uses a great deal of coal, and when coal is moving actively into consumption the biggest reserve stock that could be piled up at the mines and in dealers' yards is merely a drop in the bucket. The country's largest coal storage plant is the consumers' bins. Another most important point is that of getting the coal from the mines to where it is needed. Every ton of coal that moves into consumption in this country has to be moved by the railroads and they are not equal to the task of transporting it all at once. That was demonstrated last season.

Just now the railroads are begging for business. There are hundreds of thousands of empty cars standing idle along sidings and freight crews have been reduced to a minimum. Coal could be moved easily and promptly and the consumer, taking advantage of the present low prices, would be assured of his winter's supply at reasonable cost. In a few weeks the idle freight cars are going to be put in service carrying materials for road building and industrial use; still later there will be the crop movement, which uses every available car and, even under the most favorable transportation conditions, which do not exist at present, causes bad congestion on the railroads. By the time that is finished the cold weather is usually with us and there are the problems of frozen coal, frozen switches and storm delays to be overcome.

No Lower Prices.

Florists have the experience of last season to warn them of the results of delayed buying. Nobody wants a repetition of such a market, least of all the coal men. But such a condition will undoubtedly result if the present stagnation continues much longer.

A coal man's words are: "Neither anthracite nor bituminous coal can be sold profitably below present prices. There are wage contracts, put into effect by government commissions and expected to remain in effect until 1922, which preclude any thought of lowering the cost of production. Both anthracite and bituminous are now selling as near the cost of production as they can be—too near, in many instances. A steady consuming demand from now on through the summer months would keep prices reasonably steady. An active demand, coming all at once and late in the year, when the mines, owing to a long period of inactivity, are unable to produce the coal fast enough to supply the country's needs and when the railroads will be unable to handle it, anyway, will force prices up out of sight, and even the high values will not insure a sufficient supply."

A Matter of Production.

To see the country safely through its soft coal supply, as well as to meet the export demand, it is calculated that approximately 550,000,000 tons must be mined each year. The output runs higher in some years and lower in others.

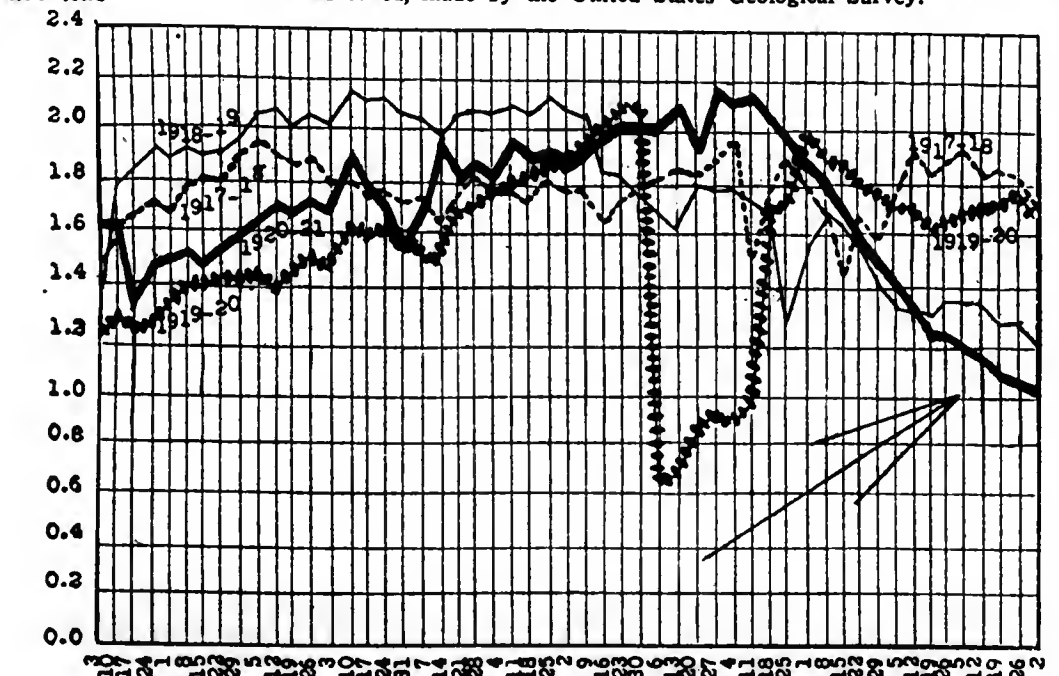

Experience has shown that what is called the "line of safety," which the public, as well as the producer, must keep in mind, so as to guard against any contingency of soft coal shortage, is an average production of approximately 10,500,000 to 10,750,000 tons a week. When it falls below those figures for any material period of time there invariably is the danger of a pinch later on.

During the recent congressional investigation into the industry it was brought out that the coal burned the country over during the seven fall and winter months each year is always greater than the amount of coal actually hauled by the railroads during that period. That means nothing else than that a quite considerable tonnage of coal must be mined and hauled and stored in the consumers' bins during the other five months of the year if the contingency of a jam in transportation is to be avoided.

Slump in Output.

When there is a condition of "no market"—that is, lack of orders from the consumer—inevitably there comes a partial shutdown of mines. With the normal output of coal at once interrupted, there looms ahead the threat of Million net tons Estimate of average total production per working day of bituminous coal including coal coked, made by the United States Geological Survey.

Heavy Black Line Shows Slump in Coal Production in Last Four Months.

transportation difficulty in the months to come.

Such a "no market" condition has already been in evidence during the early months of 1921. Government reports show that the weekly production of the bituminous mines up to April 1 had severely dropped below the line of safety.

While the weekly soft coal output averaged 12,213,000 tons in October, 1920, when production for the year had reached its peak, it began, with November, to drop. Since that month there has been a sharp decline, week by week.

In the week ending April 2 the output had slumped to 5,750,000 tons, or approximately 5,000,000 tons below the average regarded as ordinarily safe. Not since pre-war days had there been such a low average output.

The fall in output since November is shown in the following figures giving the average weekly output, month by month:

November	11,685,000
December	11,429,000
January	9,613,000
February	7,728,000
March	6,592,000

The marked drop in bituminous output since midwinter has not been due to any lack of available cars, for there were actually thousands of open-top cars lying idle in the railroad freight yards throughout the late winter and early spring months.

Nor was the low output due to any inability on the part of the mines to turn out the coal, for miners were at hand to work the mines. It was, in fact, due alone to the failure of consumers to order stocks ahead.

In other words, it was "no market" and nothing else. And as a result, most of the bituminous mines were running at only half capacity, while, in the month of March, according to officials of the United Mine Workers of America, 100,000 miners were idle.

Cars and Cost.

If, between now and autumn, there is not increased buying of coal, to enable the railroads to do more of the hauling before cold weather, a repetition of 1920 coal prices is not improbable. For a car shortage is certain. How transportation deficiency raises the cost of coal is graphically shown by charts embodying data assembled by the United States fuel administration. In figures the story is this:

When the car supply falls below normal by	The coal cost rises above normal by
20 per cent	12 per cent
30	19.5
40	29.0
50	40.5
60	54.5
70	74.0

Applying the data given in this table to any period of car shortage, the advance in production cost in dollars and cents, attributable to lack of cars, may readily be estimated.

A shortage of fifty per cent in car supply, such as obtained with most of the soft coal mines in the spring of 1920, would involve a rise of from 70 cents to $1 a ton, and more, on the production cost alone, varying with the different mining fields.

Present Market.

In its review of the coal market April 30 a leading coal trade weekly said:

"The retail attitude throughout the country is one of watchful waiting. The domestic consumer has not yet awakened to the situation and is refraining from putting in his requirements in spite of the inducements offered both by the low mine prices and reductions in margins by the retail merchants. All in all, it is a buyers' market with the attendant refusal to buy.

"The possibility of freight rate reductions on lake coal is having the effect of further curtailing buying in the northwest. On the ranges there is little demand for coal at this time, dock operators being able to move industrial coal into the interior only in small volume.

"The general slump in demand has remained so long with the trade throughout the country that producers and wholesalers alike have settled back in the hope that the industrial revival will not be much longer postponed. In the meantime they are out after business, but, generally speaking, refuse to pay too much for it in the way of price reductions. Prices are low, but have apparently reached the bottom, since the trade is convinced that further recessions will not stimulate buying.

"The spot market on smokeless mine run has stiffened slightly, so that tonnages are not moving at below $3.25 to $3.40. Most of the large smokeless producers are refusing to contract further business at the $3.50 figure announced last March, and are taking new all-year business only on a basis of price current at the time of shipment. Retailers are taking this coal in fairly good volume, so that, with the railroad situation in the east delaying shipments, some of the shippers are about a week behind on deliveries."

Quotations on southern Illinois coal, mine run, were from $3 to $3.50.

QUICK WORK

OHIO GROWERS IN FOLD.

Organization Growing Fast.

Ninety-eight members in thirty days is President Carl Hagenburger's record in organizing the Ohio district of the National Flower Growers' Association. These members are located in practically every large city in the state and represent about 2,000,000 square feet of glass. It hasn't taken much argument to convert the average grower to the purposes of the organization, for everyone realizes the need for constructive work there is in this industry. In each of cities visited by President Hagenburger and his fellow officers a strong local organization has been effected and a vice-president and secretary elected and left in charge to carry on the work. Branch organizations of the parent Ohio body have been created in Cleveland, Toledo, Cincinnati, Youngstown, Columbus, Akron, Canton and Dayton.

These branch bodies are holding monthly meetings and appointing committees to develop cost systems for greenhouse men, the standardization of the grading of plants and other questions that are pressing needs of the industry.

The present temporary officers are: President, Carl Hagenburger, West Mentor; first vice-president, F. C. W. Brown, Cleveland; second vice-president, H. P. Knoble, Cleveland; treasurer, George Bate, Cleveland; executive secretary, L. C. Vinson; directors, Wm. H. Temblett, Cleveland; Wm. J. Kramer, Rocky River; Lars Anderson, Rocky River; Louis Koehl, Cleveland; Albert Barnow, Macedonia.

A state meeting will be held the latter part of May or the first part of June, when permanent officers will be elected. Under the present plan, the vice-presidents that are now being elected in the various cities where community organizations are being effected will take the place of the present directors. By this plan every section of the state will have representation in the parent body and can secure action on any question that it may wish to bring to its attention. And in turn the directors can secure immediate action through these local bodies without the necessity of calling a state meeting.

S. A. F. NEWS

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

The Washington Convention.

It is only about two weeks since the copies of the floor plan of the hall in which the trade exhibition at the S. A. F. convention is to be staged were mailed, yet requests for space reservations are coming in steadily and the bookings so far are more than satisfactory. Without any doubt, every foot of available space will be closed out long before the opening day of the convention. Intending exhibitors should lose no time in getting their applications for space to the secretary's office, as choice of location necessarily will narrow down during the present month. Those who have engaged space since publication of the last list are:

Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y.
Joseph Heacock Co., Wyncote, Pa.
Orchard Paper Co., St. Louis, Mo.
B. Hammond Tracy, Wenham, Mass.
S. Handling Co., New York.
W. A. Manda, Inc., S. Orange, N. J.
F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.
Hammond's Paint & Slug Shot Works, Beacon, N. Y.
John Lewis Childs, Inc., Flowerfield, N. Y.
Zane Pottery Co., South Zanesville, O.
M. H. Levine Co., New York.
Seligman & Stein, New York.
George B. Hart, Rochester, N. Y.
Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J.
Ove Gnat Co., Laporte, Ind.

Reports received at the administration offices of the society indicate an unusually large attendance at this convention. The convention city itself is always an attraction, and previous conventions held there have evidenced the fact that visitors will be well cared for. The officials of the Ladies' S. A. F. are devoting much time to plans covering the part they will take in the entertainment proceedings, and especially as regards taking care of the visiting ladies while those of the sterner sex are in attendance at the different sessions. At an early date they will send out a little folder describing trips to some interesting places worth visiting while going or returning from Washington; this folder will also contain much other information of value.

Application has been made to the Trunk Line Association for a railroad rate of a fare and one-half for the round trip to Washington, on the certificate plan in force some years ago, and there is every probability that the request will be granted. As soon as assurance is received that this rate will be allowed, official notice will be given.

Cleveland Flower Show.

The secretary had expected last week to be in a position to send out copies of the floor plan covering the space available for trade exhibits at the Cleveland show in 1922, but at the last moment it was deemed advisable by the chairman of the national flower show committee to hold the issue back until it could be announced definitely just what accommodations would be included in the space rental charge of $1.75 per square foot. Some prospective exhibitors, however, have not waited for the plan, several having filed applications for space, and expressed a readiness to complete contracts as soon as they can denote a location on the plan.

Additional subscriptions to the guarantee fund have been received, as follows:

Randall's Flwr. Shp., Worcester, Mass.	$ 50.00
Strout's, Inc., Biddeford, Me.	200.00
Espelein Floral Co., Ft. Collins, Colo.	25.00
Robert Craig Co., Norwood, Pa.	250.00
Minge Floral Co., Mobile, Ala.	100.00
H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.	25.00

$650.00

Previously reported $19,062.00

Total $19,712.00

Further evidence of the wide interest taken in the class covering exhibits in competition for the grand capital prize of $5,000 came to hand last week, and the committee believes that the stagings in this class will result in the finest display ever seen under one roof at any their attention at the different sessions of the meeting.

National Publicity Campaign.

A most encouraging response has been forthcoming from the request for prompt payment of subscriptions to the campaign fund in accordance with the guarantees of the subscribers. The following subscriptions have been added to the list published in The Review last week:

Total.....$22,580.50

All who have received statements of subscriptions now due are urgently requested to make remittances covering them at once.

A first installment on account of the subscription to be forthcoming from the National Flower Growers' Association has been received, amounting to $163.08. The association is still in process of formation and extension, and after a while it is expected that its contribution of a percentage of its funds toward the fund of the national publicity campaign will assume large proportions.

Henry Penn, chairman of the publicity committee, is sending in another appeal for personal subscriptions to keep the campaign going, as it will be some time before the growers' and allied associations are in sufficiently good working order to make the collective plan now being worked out effective enough to support the publicity movement.

ABRAMS' ADVANCE.

F. B. Abrams, Blue Point, N. Y., one of the largest and most successful growers of carnations in the country, has just placed an order for a greenhouse 69½x400 feet. This house will make the second unit in a separate range which Mr. Abrams started a few years ago. The contract for the new house has been given to the Lord & Burnham Co., which has built all of Mr. Abrams' houses. It will be one of the company's full-span standard houses, steel frame, rafters twelve and one-half feet apart, sides of house seven feet high, ridge horticultural exposition in the world. Already positive assurance of three entries has been given, and the entries will be made official as soon as the committee can decide upon the dimensions of the spaces to be scheduled as available in the general layout of the exhibition. This class will be the feature class of the show, and exhibitors will require a considerable length of time to get their material together, so the committee is endeavoring to arrive at a decision at the earliest possible moment.

Chamber of Commerce Meeting.

President Roland appointed Wm. F. Gude, Washington, D. C.; S. S. Pennoek, Philadelphia; Charles H. Grakelow, Philadelphia, and F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y., the society's delegates to attend the annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce, held at Atlantic City last week. While the society has applied for membership in the Chamber, no word in regard to favorable action having been taken on the application has yet been received. Doubtless our delegates found plenty to occupy ridge twenty-four feet ten inches high, four lines of ventilation, operated by L. & B. counterweight apparatus. The house, like the one next to it of about the same size, will be heated by steam through twenty-eight lines of 1½-inch pipe, vacuum system and high pressure boiler being used. When the last house was built Mr. Abrams constructed a boiler house and workroom of good size, so that the boiler power and working space are all ready for the new house.

Mr. Abrams intends to construct solid beds and will grow his carnations in these.

Mr. Abrams started years ago with a little greenhouse constructed with sash. Then he added another, built on locust posts, with a sash roof. Next was erected one of a little better construction, wrought iron side posts, steel columns and purlins and better and more ventilation. Then came the steel-frame house. As Mr. Abrams prospered he increased his land acreage, until now he owns thirty acres and eight greenhouses, which will become nine with the new one. About a year ago he moved into a fine modern hollow tile and stucco house, which is a model of comfort and convenience. Back of the house is a new garage, housing a sedan and touring cars, as well as delivery trucks.

Mr. Abrams is one of the standby citizens of Blue Point and takes an active interest in the development of Blue Point and vicinity. He has a family of four, Mrs. Abrams, two daughters and a son. The son, Herbert, who is at Hanover, N. H., at college, has shown a decided liking for his father's profession and no doubt when his college days are over will take an active interest in the business. Mr. Abrams' father is alive and is at the greenhouse every day. He does not merely look on, but takes off his coat and does a day's work.

A grower with such industry in the family as Mr. Abrams' household shows, and one who has the confidence in expanding at this time that his new building contract indicates, is an increasingly powerful factor in the trade's advancement as well as his own.

CLEVELAND, O.

The Market.

The beginning of last week found the market flooded with roses and bulbous stock, carnations cleaning up daily. The change in weather, the latter part of the week, made a considerable change in the market, flowers becoming much more scarce, roses and carnations especially. Bulbous stock, such as Darwin tulips, which were supposed to come in for Mothers' day, are now flooding the market, owing to the decidedly hot weather we have been having. This means that much stock which was figured for Mothers' day will be too early and consequently the supply will be cut considerably. Lilac has already put in an appearance and is almost over with, although some years it has not been ready until Memorial day.

Business in general has been good, there being considerable wedding and funeral work among the trade.

Easter lilies are good just at present and will be plentiful for the end of the week. Mignonette is coming in strong, as are calendulas. Outdoor valley has made its appearance and as it is usually cheaper, will probably take the place of the indoor variety. There will, in all probability, be a few local peonies in for Mothers' day, but the greater number must be shipped stock. Valley is coming in regularly, but dragged considerably last week.

Various Notes.

J. R. Cowgill, of Canton, O., was a recent visitor.

William Behl, of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., has opened his stand for the season at Luna park.

Lem Metzger, formerly with Kitzrow's, has left their employ.

The Ohio branch of the National Flower Growers' Association held two important meetings this week, one at Canton and the other at Cleveland. The Ohio organization now has enrolled 100 members, representing 2,000,000 feet of glass in the state.

E. C. Galbraith, formerly with the J. M. Gasser Co., reports the arrival of a 6-pound baby boy. W. A. R.

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co. has decreased its capitalization from $250,000 to $25,000.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

The market was somewhat unsteady last week, possibly due to the several changes in weather. Light rains, with spells of warm sunshine, brought the trees out in foliage, and a considerable amount of outside planting was done. Cooler weather with strong winds came towards the last of the week and during these days business dropped off considerably. From the general outlook, the greenhouse men say that flowers will be fairly plentiful for Mothers' day provided that there is good warm weather from now on. Stock arrived in good quantities and the cooler weather stiffened it up. This kept up the quality in fine shape.

Business in general was running along its regular routine with nothing special doing. A few weddings of the minor order were cared for, but apart from funeral work, which has been particularly good lately, nothing in particular was noted.

Roses were abundant and comprised some good stock. The prices, however, were a little in advance of those of the previous week. Columbia, Ophelia, Hoosier Beauty, Premier and Martinet easily led in demand. A good supply of carnations arrived and most of them were of excellent quality. There were some particularly good Laddie. Sweet peas were fairly plentiful. Extra fine pink snapdragons with long stems reached here and were in big demand. The demand for orchids was good and some fine stock arrived. Good valley reached here and was plentiful. Myosotis and mignonette were plentiful, but moved slowly. Large cuttings of jonquils reached here, but the outside stock, in a way, kept down the sale of the inside grown stock. Tulips were not over plentiful, but good Darwins came on. Violets were not over good and the demand was poor. Easter lilies were not plentiful. Callas were in abundance. Calendulas slowed up considerably. Asparagus ferns were in good supply and so were fancy and dagger ferns.

Various Notes.

Max Paulizek has left the city for a two weeks' trip visiting relatives in Mexico, N. Y. From there he will go on a business trip to Philadelphia, Boston and New York. He has purchased a delivery car which will be ready for him on his return.

John Rask, formerly with Thomas Roland, is now in the employ of George B. Hart at his Fairport greenhouses. He will have entire charge of the rose houses there.

Felix Albert is still confined to his bed with lumbago, with which he has been suffering for the past three or four weeks. He does not seem to be making any particular progress toward recovery, but his physician holds hope that the malady will leave him just as quickly as it came.

The Rochester Garden Club met at the Memorial Art Gallery Thursday, April 28, and saw the natural color views of gardens in Florida, California and Rochester. They were shown by the expert in color photography, Charles C. Zoller, of Rochester. A large number of rural scenes in autumn and spring foliage were shown, and there were many scenes from the beautiful gardens of Rochester's society people.

C. E. Runyon, of Runyon & Runyon, of Shortsville, N. Y., and William G. Barr, of Syracuse, N. Y., were visitors to the trade this week.

E. W. Edwards & Sons, of Syracuse, N. Y., are shipping, some wonderfully good hydrangeas to the market. Now that the majority of potted stock is gone, these find ready sale.

George T. Boucher moved a large quantity of Boston ferns Saturday, April 29, at the special price of $1.50 each.

Thomas J. Sullivan, of Lyndonville, is shipping some excellent carnations which find a ready sale. He also is shipping some good potted vincas. H. J. H.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

The weather here was cool last week, but with the warmer weather and sunshine we are having, a record cut of flowers is expected for Mothers' day.

Florists here are steadily pulling away from the custom of wearing a carnation on Mothers' day and are influencing the public to buy various kinds of flowers as gifts to mother.

By the advertisements in the dailies, it looks as though all trades are trying to make Mothers' day a second Christmas. One jeweler is running advertisements suggesting a gift of jewelry and other business firms are doing likewise, but florists, having a good start, should make this the biggest day of the year.

Outside flowers have had a big setback on account of the cold weather, and lilies of the valley are about gone, as well as tulips and other outside stock.

Various Notes.

Suit against Emil C. Metzmaier was filed here last week by Braacke Bros., of Loochristy near Ghent, Belgium. Attaches of the municipal court say this is the first international lawsuit filed in the civil division of this court in its history. The Belgian concern, in its petition, declares Mr. Metzmaier ordered plants shipped to him on several occasions. These, the plaintiff says, were delivered, but not paid for. Mr. Metzmaier said that the plants reached him in bad condition, probably due to shipping troubles.

incident to the war. He indicated that he probably would not contest the suit.

Mae Murray is being starred in "The Gilded Lily" at the Majestic Theater here and through the coöperation of the florists and manager a new and unusual advertising stunt is being enacted. The manager of the theater visited the various leading florists and presented them with large cards bearing their names and compliments. These were placed on the many baskets furnished gratis by the florists and Saturday, April 23, the lobby of the theater was a mass of flowers, ranging from hampers of snapdragons, roses, etc., to large baskets of gilded calla lilies.

E. D. Ludwig, secretary of the Columbus Cut Flower Growers' and Dealers' Association, says it has raised $550 for advertising, besides the individual advertisements for Mothers' day. The organization has at present twenty-three members.

The wedding of Virginia Heiner at the Broad Street Presbyterian church was a gorgeous affair and was a credit to T. J. Ludwig's decorators. The bride carried a bouquet of orchids, valley and Sunburst roses, while the seven attendants wore corsages of different colors.

I. Bayersdorfer, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, opened up at the Chittenden with a fine display last week and booked a good many orders.

Julia's Flower Shoppe, although limited to space, reports a good business.

OMAHA, NEB.

The Market.

There was a great change in the market last week. Stock was scarce. Carnations were in strong demand, but they were none too plentiful. None of the larger growers are going to hit a crop for Mothers' day.

In roses, Premier and Columbia had the best call, but there was no surplus in any of the varieties. The demand was firm. The growers are doing their best to meet the trade demand for Mothers' day.

The late Easter lilies were about over, although a few formosums were still coming in. Callas arrived in quantity and were cleaned up daily. The retailers are falling back on callas to help out in the big spray work. Sweet peas fell off rapidly. One large grower claimed the supply has fallen off thirty per cent. Good peas found a ready sale.

Spanish iris from California moved nicely. Snapdragons of fine quality were to be had. Marguerites were plentiful. The supply of Dutch bulbous flowers was comparatively small, as indoor supplies were entirely exhausted and only a few growers have them outdoors. Darwins were on the market all week. Pride of Haarlem seemed to be leading the Darwins. Pansies seemed abundant.

Various Notes.

J. F. Wilcox & Sons are cutting some fine gladioli, especially Francis King and Pendleton. These find a ready sale.

C. G. Hargadine, of Florence, is growing some extra nice Darwins and deserves much credit for his Mrs. Moon and Farncombe Sander. He has no trouble in disposing of them at $8 and $10 per hundred.

Hess & Swoboda are cutting a good supply of lupines and hunemania. These are meeting with a popular demand and work up fine in dinner baskets.

The Christ Child Society had their flower tag day Saturday, April 30. It proved highly successful. The girls put out over 40,000 flowers before noon, and, although there are no reports on the net proceeds, it will be sure to turn out gratifying.

AMONG THE HEATHER.

Conspicuous among the florists who have followed Horace Greeley's advice and prospered thereby is Roy F. Wilcox, one time of Council Bluffs and now of Montebello, Cal. Mr. Wilcox is as industrious in behalf of his foster state, moreover, as though he were one of its native sons. Not long since he was elected president of the California Association of Nurserymen, which is one of the most active organizations of the trade. Now he is an important member of a committee promoting a wonderful exhibition at Los Angeles, to show to all visitors what the state of California can do horticulturally and floriculturally.

One of the things that the state proceeds the supply. The cut flower supply at present includes American Beauties, Columbia, Premier, White Killarney and Richmond roses; carnations; Easter and calla lilies; snapdragon; valley; sweet peas; jonquils; Spanish iris; tulips, and yellow daisies. Orchids were plentiful last week and sold at moderate prices. Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri moved out rapidly. The southern plumosus helped take care of the demand for these articles satisfactorily.

From the demand for cut flowers, it is quite certain that Mothers' day this year will at least be on a par with that of last year. Prices will be practically the same as those of last year.

Various Notes.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. has been offering for sale some wonderful gladioli and the demand for them at this season of the year has been exceptionally good.

incident to the war. He indicated that he probably would not contest the suit.

Mae Murray is being starred in "The Gilded Lily" at the Majestic Theater here and through the coöperation of the florists and manager a new and unusual advertising stunt is being enacted. The manager of the theater visited the various leading florists and presented them with large cards bearing their names and compliments. These were placed on the many baskets furnished gratis by the florists and Saturday, April 23, the lobby of the theater was a mass of flowers, ranging from hampers of snapdragons, roses, etc., to large baskets of gilded calla lilies.

E. D. Ludwig, secretary of the Columbus Cut Flower Growers' and Dealers' Association, says it has raised $550 for advertising, besides the individual advertisements for Mothers' day. The organization has at present twenty-three members.

The wedding of Virginia Heiner at the Broad Street Presbyterian church was a gorgeous affair and was a credit to T. J. Ludwig's decorators. The bride carried a bouquet of orchids, valley and Sunburst roses, while the seven attendants wore corsages of different colors.

I. Bayersdorfer, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, opened up at the Chittenden with a fine display last week and booked a good many orders.

Julia's Flower Shoppe, although limited to space, reports a good business.

The McKellar Co. has been busy with funeral work as well as with the decoration at the new factory of the Felber Biscuit Co.

The regular meeting of the Retail Florists' Association is to be held at the Seventh Avenue hotel, Thursday evening, May 5, at 6:30 p. m. The subject to be discussed is "Coöperation." It is the hope of the officers of this association that every member will take an active part and derive the benefits now being reaped by all the members of the present organization.

H. A. Frishkorn, representative of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., has just returned from his southwest trip through Ohio and Indiana. He reports business as picking up in this vicinity.

W. T. Usinger, formerly with the McClement Co., of Pittsburgh, has severed his relations with this concern and is now located with the McCallum Co. He expects to cover local territory for this firm.

William R. Wampler, formerly representative of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. in eastern Pennsylvania and central Ohio, has accepted the position as manager of the cut flower department of this company. Mr. Wampler has been in the employ of the company for the past six years and is well known to all of the florists in Pennsylvania and Ohio. TORONTO, ONT.

The Market.

Business in decorations for weddings, receptions and teas has been good recently and there has been a good demand for design work. The cut flower trade has been slow, except orders for delivery by telegraph, both incoming and outgoing. In this connection, it is of interest to know that the Canadian National Telegraph is coöperating in the development of the telegraph business by circulating thousands of folders with telegrams.

The outlook for stock for Mothers' day is not so bright as desirable, but the quality is good. There is every evidence of a big business. Orders are being received daily by florists for delivery at the end of the week.

Various Notes.

H. G. Dillemoth delivered addresses on flowers before the Rotary Club and the Electric Club at their luncheons recently. He pointed out the importance of the business, its extent and the organization which permits delivery by telegraph anywhere.

Some of the florists are contemplating the installation of mechanical refrigerators. Tidy & Son have already installed one and Dunlop's is having plans made for an installation at that store.

W. G. Peacock, of the Dale Estate, and Mrs. Peacock have left for a six weeks' stay in the old country. Mr. Peacock will visit France on a business trip.

A bill is proposed to license nurserymen and have them put up a bond of $1,000 for seven years. The smaller florists will be affected. There is strong opposition to the measure and it is expected that all the floral and horticultural organizations will pass resolutions opposing it.

Both Toronto and Hamilton florists are doing considerable coöperative newspaper publicity for Mothers' day.

C. J. Tidy has returned from Bermuda, where he spent the winter.

PROVIDENCE, B. I.

The Market.

Last week was one of the busiest in a long time. Several large funerals, a number of weddings and antenuptial functions caused a brisk demand that kept the good supply well cleaned up. Prices as a whole were a few cents above those of the previous few weeks, but well scattered orders gave everybody a chance at the business.

Two rainy Saturdays in succession have played havoc with the receipts of the dealers in seeds and garden supplies, although the trade during the week has been exceptionally good. The fact that a large number of men are working short time has occasioned an unusual demand for seed for home gardens and small farms.

Various Notes.

Alexander H. Johnson was elected to membership in the First Light Infantry Veteran Association Tuesday evening, April 26.

Johnston Bros. furnished a large casket cover of orchids and lily of the valley for the funeral of Michael J. Slattery last week.

A casket cover of roses and maidenhair was furnished by William A. Bowlers for the funeral of Jeremiah Higgins.

A. B. Ferreira, 19 Bridge street, South Warren, is booking considerable gardening and landscape work for this season.

John Macrae, of Smith street, has several houses of geraniums and other bedding stock, all of which is looking fine.

Lawrence Hay, of East Providence, made a business trip through Connecticut last week, looking for new stock.

Gene McCarron has been busy the last few weeks on both funeral and wedding work. He contemplates considerable renovation at his range on Hope street this summer.

The Colonial Flower Shoppe had the decorations for the Aldrich-White wedding Saturday, April 30. Gardenias, apple blossoms, Spanish iris and Adiantum Farleyense were used in the house decorations.

Gordon Macrae is preparing to take an extended trip for his health, his itinerary including Connecticut, New York and parts of Canada.

Joseph Koppelman was in New York and Philadelphia on business last week.

Smith, the Florist, had a special sale of Boston ferns at 69 cents Saturday, April 30. They found ready sale.

T. J. Johnston & Co., of which Ed Brooke is the manager, has taken a store farther up Washington street. The company will move there after Memorial day.

Kinder Bros., of Bristol, had the wedding decorations for the Gifford-McGovern wedding in that town last week.

Archie C. Akin and Page F. Potter, of the Colonial Flower Shoppe, have purchased a 15-acre farm, with modern house, barn, coldframes and poultry outfit. They intend to develop the farm into nurseries and to erect greenhouses, from which they expect to secure a part of the supplies for their store.

Jeremiah J. Triggs has been appointed by the Board of Park Commissioners to succeed the late Frederick C. Green as superintendent of parks and playgrounds maintenance. W. H. M.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The Market.

Business has been dull. The early part of last week was decidedly so, but the latter part was a little more brisk.

Snapdragons were numerous and the majority were of good quality. Considering the general lethargy, these were in as good demand as anything. Sweet peas were numerous, but continued to sell at a good price.

Carnations were plentiful last week, but the supply is decreasing every day. Roses were none too plentiful. Lilies were in fair supply.

Prospects for Mothers' day are poor. Stock will be scarce. While it seemed that everything was in abundance last week, it was due largely to the poor demand. Then, too, in numerous cases, flowers which were going off crop were still available last week. Snapdragons will be, perhaps, the most plentiful flower. Carnations and roses will be scarce. Sweet peas will be in fair supply, but it is doubtful if there will be a supply that is even close to enough. Outdoor lilies of the valley are coming in and will help out in corsage work. A few calendulas are to be obtained, but they are not in large supply. Gladioli are greatly welcomed, but as yet they are high and scarce.

Various Notes.

The trade extends sympathy to the bereaved relatives of Mrs. Jacob Forest, who passed away last week at her home in Greenfield.

The Florists' Supply House is moving from its old address on East Ohio to 229 West Delaware. As this is a fine, large room, it will be possible to carry a much larger stock with which to accommodate their customers. This firm is now operating a basket factory of about fifty workers and expects to increase it to about three or four times that number in the near future. The new room will be ready about May 15.

Glen Moore, of Rushville; Edwin Mourner, of Shelbyville; Henry Berning, of St. Louis, and Nic Zweifel, of Milwaukee, were visitors last week.

E. E. Temperley went to Lafayette, May 2, with the Shriners. They presented their extravaganza, "Bagdad."

Smith & Young Co. is cutting from a large crop of orchids.

Morris Marer has purchased another stand in the city market.

Baur & Steinkamp will have a fine lot of gladioli for Mothers' day. Their present large crop of carnations will also hold over for the occasion. E. E. T.

Fulton, Ill.—Since the death of John Aggen, his son, Render Aggen, has continued to operate the business.

Taunton, Mass.—Victor B. Olson, who succeeded E. F. Rose as proprietor of the Bay Street Greenhouses, has opened an up-to-date retail store in the Strand Theater building, calling it Olson's Home of Flowers.

OBITUARY

Frank J. Brosch.

Frank J. Brosch, the son of Anton Brosch, Lynchburg, Va., died at his home Thursday morning, April 21, from erysipelas, which resulted from an infected tooth. Mr. Brosch was born at Lynchburg, July 5, 1891. He was prominent in Virginia military circles and there were notes of sympathy received by the family from Governor Davis and Adjutant General Jo Lane Stern, of Virginia. Mr. Brosch was in service during the time of the trouble on the Mexican border and was a member of the Lynchburg Shawnees, which was sent to France as a part of the Rainbow Division. He was later added to the field headquarters of General Pershing. He was noted as a marksman and was several times the representative of his troop in marksmanship contests. He was a lieutenant during his service in the army. His experience in the florists' business was gathered with F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; the Montrose Greenhouses, Montrose, Mass.; H. R. Comley, Boston, Mass., and his father. He was a member of the Grace Memorial Episcopal church, the Masons, the Woodmen and the American Legion. He was born in southern France and came to America about thirty-eight years ago, obtaining employment with the old firm of Dailledouze, Zeller & Gard. Three years later he started in business for himself on the present property, gradually building up a good business. He was a member of the New York Florists' Club, the S. A. F. and the American Carnation Society. He leaves a widow, a son and a daughter. The funeral was arranged for Wednesday, May 4, with a church service.

He also is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Cecilia Etter and Virginia Erdman. There are eleven grandchildren. The funeral was held May 2 at the Druid Ridge cemetery.

Mrs. Jacob J. Fuchs.

Mrs. J. J. Fuchs, the wife of Jacob J. Fuchs, who has operated a store on Carson street, Pittsburgh, Pa., for a number of years, died Thursday evening, April 28, after an illness of six months. She had been in ill health for some time.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Business last week was exceptionally good. The large number of social events, the convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution and a great deal of funeral work has kept everyone on the job.

The demand for good roses has been especially good, many being sold up to $30 per hundred. Cheaper grades were sold as low as $8 per hundred.

Easter Lilies have been in great demand, the small supply making it hard to fill the few orders. Calla lilies have sold well also, the best bringing $2 per dozen.

Carnations brought a better price last week, some bringing as high as $8 per hundred.

Good sweet peas have been scarce. Only a few of the growers have sown the later varieties, and the old crops are fast showing the advancing season's effects.

Valley has also been scarce, good stock bringing $8 per hundred.

Delphinium has been received in good shape, the price ranging from $2 to $4 per dozen.

Peonies from local growers made their appearance last week. It looks as though there will be but few left for Memorial day.

Various Notes.

George Cooke had one of the largest wedding decorations of the season Saturday, April 30, when this firm elaborately decorated the three large ball-rooms at Rauscher's with Lady Gay ramblers.

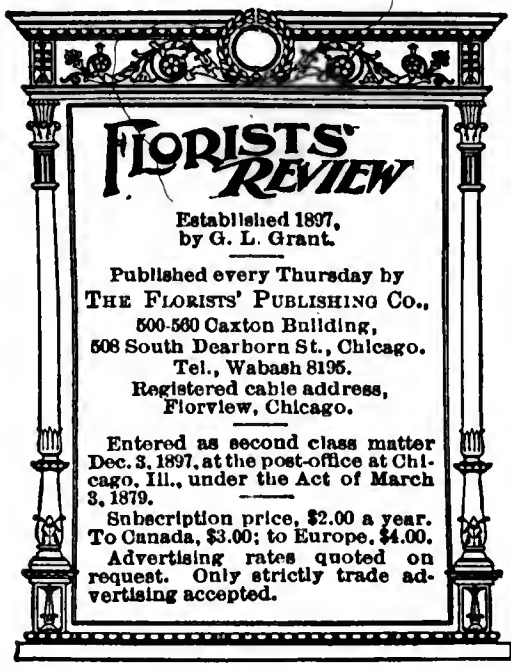

Mr. Daly, of Gude Bros. Co., was confined to his home last week due to illness.

William F. Gude's nomination for rent commissioner has been approved by Congress. He fills the vacancy on the board brought about by the resignation of Captain James F. Oyster, who has been made a member of the board of commissioners of the District of Columbia.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Gude have gone to Wernersville, Pa. We are glad to hear that Mr. Gude is taking a good rest and that he shows a marked improvement already. Edgar and Edwin, the twins, are taking good care of the large place during his absence.

Otto Bauer, manager of the local store of the S. S. Pennock Co., has purchased a home by the seaside, where he expects to spend many pleasant weekends this summer.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

A FLORIST who gives unlimited credit is not likely long to have it himself.

Now comes a big bedding season. Nothing but bad weather will keep this from being a good year for those who sell bedding stock.

IN many a provincial city the use of flowers still is principally for funerals, but it would be a sorry prospect if there were no room for growth.

BUSINESS with our trade never was better, compared to what it is in other lines. The appreciation and use of flowers is more general than ever before.

THERE seems no possibility that collections will be better in the summer than they are now. Better keep after your slow accounts through May and June.

THE thirteenth annual exhibition and meeting of the American Sweet Pea Society will be held at the Museum of Natural History, New York, June 25 and 26.

THE jewelers and confectioners are going after Mothers' day business strenuously this year. With equal effort florists should be able to hold the day as their own.

THIS week, J. F. Ammann, secretary of the National Flower Growers' Association, leaves on a "swing around the circle" westward, to assist in launching local organizations in the principal cities where florists are not now banded together.

"We like the way," writes one of the trade's best houses, "The Review keeps advising its readers to keep their bills paid up and to use business stationery." Many of the concerns best worth dealing with charge retail prices to all who do not use printed letterheads showing trade connections.

A CUSTOMER recently asked a florist for the plant known at the customer's former home as a brick-a-day. Questioning and recourse to the pictures in some trade catalogues identified the quest as for Ampelopsis Veitchii. But they must have good growing conditions where the Boston ivy climbs a brick a day!

THE damage by the recent freeze to the flowering shrubs has increased the demand on the florists for pot plants in the sections affected.

THE maintenance of good business in flowers when other lines were dull augurs the possibility of a short supply when general conditions are more propitious.

WASTE has caused the failure of many a small florist. Be sure you are not paying for a lot of string, paper, pins, greens and other supplies for which you get nothing from your customers.

THE American Sweet Pea bulletin for 1921 carries short articles of much interest by George W. Kerr, Charles Elliott and William Gray, as well as the schedule and rules for its exhibition in June.

THE difference between the florist who has built up a big business and the one who has only a small one to show for years of work is sometimes in their opportunities, but usually in the amount of effort they have put in.

"It certainly is remarkable the way growers are taking hold of the new association," comments the secretary of the Ohio branch, L. C. Vinson. Never has an organization in the trade sprung into real activity so quickly.

THERE are some good openings for florists to act as correspondents for The Review in those cities not now represented in the news columns. If you are in such a city and you get around among the trade each week, write the Editor about it.

IMPROVE EXPRESS SERVICE.

A campaign has been started by the American Railway Express Co. to keep down the number of shipments which find their way to "on hand" departments, because the addresses are inaccurate or incomplete, or because of cancellation of orders or some other disagreement between shipper and consignee. An energetic effort is being made to clear up the undeliverable matter found in the "on hand" rooms of the express company and at the "right way" meetings of the express employees, throughout the country, the subject is receiving special attention.

It is the opinion of operating heads in the express business that the growth in number of "on hand" shipments is a handicap to improvement in the express service. Practically every industry is interested in prompt delivery of goods and the carrier is seeking the cooperation of the shipping public to remove the heavy burden which the storing and care of "on hand" shipments involve. It is found that a large number of claims and annoying controversies are directly chargeable to the abuse of the "on hand" privilege.

While it is a decided advantage to the transient shipper to have the express carrier hold his goods for him until he arrives and to do this without added expense, it was not intended that regular express patrons would ask or expect the carrier to store their goods while some argument between shipper and consignee was being settled. The express company does not generally charge for storing shipments, but some such step may be taken unless the situation improves.

In seeking the cooperation of the shippers, the transportation company lays emphasis upon the importance of every shipper having the consignee's full name and address, street and number, plainly stenciled or otherwise marked, on each piece he sends by express. It is equally important, the carrier points out, that each shipper show his name and address clearly on each piece of a shipment.

That consignees should accept delivery of shipments tendered and not leave them on the carrier's hands is the contention of the express company in this campaign. This should be done even if shipments are offered in bad order, for then the consignee can dispose of them to the best advantage and thereby reduce the loss to the lowest possible figure. Shippers and consignees are urged to give special attention to postal notices sent out by the carriers to both of them, when a shipment cannot be delivered by an express driver, for any reason.

When a shipper is informed by the express company, through the usual postal notices, that the consignee to whom he sent his goods has refused to accept them, it will facilitate matters if he will give prompt and definite instructions for the disposal of the shipment in question.

BUSINESS IS GOOD.

Any florist who finds local demand below his needs will be able to dispose of surplus stock if he lets the trade know what he has to offer. Like this:

I am sold out of pansy plants; the little ad in The Review surely has brought me a lot of business.—Henry Swaby, St. Charles, Ill., April 25, 1921.

Returns from my ads in The Review have been excellent, though business is nothing like last year.—C. E. Majors, Denison, Tex., April 25, 1921.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The week ending April 30 was nothing to boast of as a business week in the cut flower market. Arrivals of stock were not particularly heavy, but clearances on some days were hard to effect and price concessions in several lines were the rule rather than the exception. It used to be that a dull market during the lilac season was attributed to the lilac, but that season was well on and lilac arrivals were so small that they affected nothing at all. Even the local lilac crop was damaged by the late severe frosts, so this commodity is not at all in the way this season. Rather, the trouble was with the general demand. On some days it was good, on others so light as to occasion concern. The steady buyers seemed to be the Greek florists, who, judging from their ample purchases, do a day to day business which is satisfactory to them. The conservative buying of the more prominent stores has been particularly noticeable of late, and is the cause of much comment.

The arrivals of peonies are increasing in number of shipments, but there are not anything like so many as there usually are at the opening of the peony season. Paenonia festiva maxima is in and brings as much as $2 per dozen for the limited supply.

Roses are plentiful and move slowly, although the quality is excellent for this time of year. American Beauty is in crop again, and, with an increased supply, the price range has dropped. The supply of hybrid teas continues to be heavy and the long stemmed grades suffer somewhat through the abundance of flowers in medium and short grades.

The supply of orchids has shortened considerably and prices have advanced somewhat on the lower grades. Spray orchids are rather scarce, but there is little demand for them.

Carnations are in fair supply, although for a day or two arrivals have been lighter than for some time previous. It is thought that some growers are holding their cut back for Mothers' day business.

White lilies continue abundant, with a demand that is not at all active. Lily of the valley is plentiful, a great deal of frame-grown stock arriving, which reduces the prices obtainable for indoor-grown stock. Gardenias have shortened up somewhat, but the quality of arrivals is poor and the demand small.

Sweet peas are plentiful, but the quality is poor, many growers being near the end of their cut.

The supply of bulbous flowers is declining. A few Victoria and Emperor narcissi are still coming and of good quality. Tulips, excepting outdoor or frame-grown Darwins, are about done and the Darwins in many cases are badly spotted.

Herbaceous flowers are in heavy supply and meet with a moderate demand. The choice is large, the list including iris, lilac, gladiolus, calendula, delphinium, pansy, mignonette, ageratum, alyssum, cornflower, centaurea imperialis, didis, pyrethrum, stocks, snapdragon, callas and daisies both in white and yellow.

Various Notes.

Dr. N. L. Britton, director-in-chief of the New York Botanical Garden, Bronx park, has returned from Trinidad, B. W. I., after a trip of two months, during which he, with Mrs. Britton, who accompanied him, collected botanical specimens embracing more than 1,500 varieties, among them some of great rarity. One is Hyptis melanosticta, a rare plant said not to have been seen by botanists since 1860. A plant supposedly entirely new to science was discovered. It is a woody climber of the blueberry family. Its branches are covered with tubular scarlet flowers about an inch long. A new species of cactus was also discovered. The collected specimens are to be taken into the permanent collection at the garden and will shortly be on view to the public. Professor L. H. Bailey, formerly of Cornell University, returning from a botanical research trip to Venezuela and accompanied by his daughter, met Dr. and Mrs. Britton in Trinidad and joined in some of the excursions.

Charles Thorley was a member of a dinner committee which arranged a dinner at the Hotel Commodore on April 25. The dinner was in honor of Americans who are opposed to government by blue laws. About 600 persons were present and a permanent organization was formed, to be known as "The American People's League."

Mayor O'Keefe, of Boston, was a visitor in town on May 2.

Lewis & Valentine, of Roslyn, L. I., have been awarded the contract to lay out and plant the new town hall park at Hempstead, L. I., at a figure something over $11,000.

John Miesem, the lily grower of Elmhurst, L. I., is around again after being bedridden for two weeks with aural abscesses and threatened pneumonia. He says this was his initial bed-sickness, and it was quite enough.

An association of women has been formed, whose object is the restoration of Central park to its aspect of thirty years ago, and it has the support of Park Commissioner Francis D. Gallatin. As a starter, it is proposed to set out a double row of elms along each side of the Mall, at a cost, including planting, of $300 each. New soil is to be brought in from nearby districts to replace the old soil along the Mall for a space, approximately, of fifty feet around each elm, which will be fifty feet to sixty feet in height. This will be a tree-moving proposition perhaps never before attempted, and progress will be watched.

The two displays of tulips at the New York Botanical Garden at Bronx park are attracting thousands of visitors. One planting is located on the beds adjoining conservatory range No. 1; the other is in the garden plantings almost opposite Fordham hospital, on Southern boulevard.

The various seed houses in the downtown district are enjoying a lively business due to the early season. Practically all of them are handling quantities of transplanting stock, and judging by some of the prices obtained, 40 cents per dozen for lettuce and tomato plants, this business should prove quite profitable.

Alfred Demeusy, the Flatbush carnation grower, died suddenly Sunday night, May 1, of heart failure. Obituary notice appears elsewhere in this issue.

The long-talked-of commercial aeroplane service between New York and Chicago opened Wednesday, May 4, the first plane leaving Hazelhurst field, Mineola, at 9:30 a. m. on that day, with Aviator Diggins as pilot. Charles Schenck, of Traendly & Schenck, was a caller on Mayor Hylan May 2, and it was understood that the mayor would "Say It with Flowers" to Mayor Thompson in celebration of the occasion of the first flight.

A meeting of the executive board of the Allied Florists' Trade Association of New York was held at the office of the New York Florists' Club, at the Eighteenth street flower market, April 25. After considerable discussion, it was decided to pay over twenty-five per cent of all funds collected to the national publicity campaign of the S. A. F. Details of plans for advertising Mothers' day and Memorial day were discussed, and contracts with the newspapers were authorized, covering space prior to these days. Ways and means to increase growers' interest in the objects of the association were considered. Through the commission houses letters had been sent to all growers shipping to the New York market, so that they were in possession of full information as to the movement. F. R. Pierson volunteered to assist his district leaders in personal efforts to bring growers in their territory into line. It was agreed that there was a lack of interest shown by many, but it was believed that personal contact with them would change conditions. It was reported that many retailers had expressed a willingness to cooperate by submitting to the proposed assessment of one-half per cent upon all purchases, commencing May 1. Others seemed to be waiting to see how the plan was likely to work before agreeing to it. The prospects for success seemed to the board to be rosy, and, with the full cooperation of the retailers, they could be materialized. J. H. P.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Business began to hum April 29 and has gathered volume with each passing day. It is unusual for Saturday to be a heavy shipping day, but April 30 nearly all the large shippers had a run of orders almost like a Monday or a Friday and the market had an air of activity until the closing hour. Indeed, the orders were so numerous and so large it was impossible to fill them all. There were enough long roses, but shorts were cleaned up and carnations were not to be had in quantity.

The present week has started well, with every indication of a strong finish. The supply of flowers, while considerable, is not so large as in the corresponding week of some other years, while the demand appears to be much the strongest ever known for Mothers' day.

The rose is the principal reliance. The supply is only moderately large and as early as May 2 some of the shippers were declining further orders for shorts. So large a proportion of the orders run on the grades at from 10 cents to 20 cents, calling for large quantities, that many houses have consistently declined to furnish shorts unless a fair proportion of long stems also were ordered. It looks as though late buyers will have to pay 20 cents to 35 cents for their roses simply because there will be none of the lower-priced

Carnations are not plentiful and will be scarce. There seems no limit to the quantity which could be sold, or to the price some buyers would pay. The demand for carnations does not come from the high-grade retail stores, but from a class of stores and stands which ordinarily handle only medium-priced stock. One wonders how they do it when it is reported their only question is how many they can depend on getting, at the market price, which is expected to be 15 cents. When carnations must be retailed at not less than 25 cents a flower, what does a man who

Peonies will cut more figure this

Mothers' day than heretofore. In the old days there was no special use for peonies before Memorial day, but with the growth of Mothers' day a new demand was created, which the growers are just beginning to meet. A number of those who have fields in southern Illinois and Indiana went farther south and planted acres in Tennessee, in a latitude to insure April blooming in an ordinary season. This year they are marketing their first important cut. The Goulds, at Halls, Tenn., have the largest crop, about 25,000 dozens, but many others are shipping small lots. The peonies will help the market greatly, making it possible for many a mother to have flowers who otherwise would go without.

There is a large supply of sweet peas and a fine lot of Darwin tulips, but otherwise the supply of stock is not heavy. Snapdragons are more abundant than heretofore this season and are fine, especially the pinks.

Various Notes.

The committee in charge of this trade's participation in the mayor's pageant of progress on the municipal pier has had a real job on its hands since the meeting April 30, at which it developed that the committee is expected to raise $21,000 to be paid for space in the show, on the promise of $5,000 prize money for award to exhibitors.

In spite of the fact that the near approach of Mothers' day is expected to keep away many who otherwise would attend, Chairman Pollworth and Secretary Lautenschlager have sold out the available seating capacity for the Florists' Club's show May 5.

The E. C. Amling Co. reports that Dr. Knapp's Tennessee peony crop has turned out better than was expected, considerable quantities of such varieties as Festiva Maxima having been received in time for Mothers' day.

Paul R. Klingsporn spent a day at Cleveland and another at Detroit last week. He brings back the opinion being circulated by most of the trade's travelers, that the Jones-Russell Co., Cleveland, has fitted up the most novel, rich and artistic flower store in America.

Miss Gould has been on the market for several days, as observer for the Gould Nursery Co. That company's Halls, Tenn., crop is practically all in. A portion of the arrivals were used, by the A. L. Randall Co., for immediate needs, but by April 30 as many as 10,000 dozens had been accumulated at the cold storage warehouse, as a reserve for Mothers' day. Miss Gould is of the opinion that her brothers have developed the handling of peonies to the point that the weather and the market

Numerous lines of business in Chicago ceased operations April 30, pending wage adjustments. Among the factories which closed were those in the association of store fixture manufacturers. Only a few florists' jobs are tied up, most of this work being far enough along for shipment before May 1. Work may be resumed any day, or not for weeks.

Wellworth Farm, at Downers Grove, has added to its reputation this season

Henry Wittbold & Son are rushing the work on their new store at 75 East Adams and expect to open it May 7. H. Kusik, of Kansas City, has been here this week in quest of stock for Mothers' day. He says business is not brisk, but that stock is so scarce in the Kansas City district that it gives the market an artificial air of activity and strength.

at this season. However, trade has not been at all bad and April 30 there was little surplus to be carried over. There may have been Aprils when larger volumes of business were done, particularly when Easter came in that month, but no one can find any fault with either the turnover or prices received when depression in so many other lines is considered. It is pleasing to note a decided improvement in New England's great staple industries, including those connected with boots, shoes, woollens, cotton, etc., and this will soon be reflected in flower circles.

There has been a rather soft market for roses. Most of the short-stemmed stock has made $4 to $5, but the demand for whites and for the better grades of colored varieties has not been at all bust. May 2 saw an improved market on these, owing to cold weather and reduced cuts, and the higher prices that carnations are bringing will help to brace up roses. Carnations, with the near approach of Mothers' day, are selling at higher prices, opening May 2 at $6 to $10. Even higher values are probable before the end of the week, as,

with a continuation of the present cold weather, the available supply will be much reduced. Even with a warm spell to hurry flowers along, reports from some of the large growers are that Matchless, the great Mothers' day standby, is not in heavy crop, the warm March having advanced the flowers too rapidly.

Daffodils have disappeared from the market and few tulips are seen. Lilies are scarce and are selling better. A few fine candidums are seen at retail stores. Callas move somewhat better. Marguerites are plentiful. The whites do not sell as well as the yellows and flowers of either color must be good to bring over $2. Sweet peas have been unfavorably affected by the weather and lack substance. The best realize $1.50 to $2 per hundred.

Snapdragons have sold somewhat better, some fancy flowers bringing $2 per dozen. Gypsophila elegans is fairly plentiful and sells at 50 cents per bunch. A few irises are seen and gladioli are looked for in a few days. Cut lilac is not yet available here, but a few days will see an abundance of this and other open-air material on hand. Gardenias are gradually petering out and the stems are shorter. Valley moves moderately, but will sell better shortly with many weddings coming along. Cattleyas are getting rather scarce.

Club Meeting.

There was an attendance of over 100 members at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club April 26. Six new members were elected, including Miss M. R. Case, of Weston, an influential and popular exhibitor and strong financial supporter of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. Miss Case asked the club to support the Boston shows heavily this year and the members present voted enthusiastically to do so. After a short address by Albert R. Jenks, extension agent, a number of club members were enrolled as members of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

Some of the more striking sorts were Van Waveren's Giant, Will Scarlet, Cassandra, Albatross and Weardale Perfection. Canna Fiery Cross and Chrysanthemum Morning Star were each awarded a vote of thanks.

Mr. Reoch, the grower of the wonderful specimen calceolarias, said he sowed his seed in May and gave a winter temperature of 48 to 50 degrees. His plants, four feet across, were grand examples of cultural skill. The enterprise and public spirit of Albert C. Burrage, in furnishing the great exhibition of New England orchids, were commented upon, and the club showed its appreciation by giving Mr. Burrage a rising vote of thanks.

The lecturer of the evening was B. F. Letson, manager of Carbone's flower store. His subject was "Flower Arrangement," and it was pleasing to note that some other retailers were present to hear him. The speaker in the first place dwelt at length on how flowers should be cut to make them last the longest. Long, slanting cuts, splitting the stems and taking off portions of bark on certain kinds in order to give greater opportunities for the drawing up of water, were commented upon. Woody shrubs should have the bark rolled up about two inches above the cut; then the stems should be split and stood in extremely hot water for ten minutes and afterward should be placed in cold water; as a result the flowers would stiffen up and keep well.

Boxes of flowers received in severe weather, said the speaker, should be left unopened for two or three hours, so that any frost could thaw out before the flowers were exposed. Such flowers as acacia, wallflower and heliotrope needed plunging in hot water as soon as cut, to make them last, and poinsettias and euphorbias must be burned at the base to prevent bleeding and to send the sap up to feed the flowers.

The speaker continued by saying that wilted violets could be revived if held upside down under the faucet and the water run over them, then rolled up in wax paper and the stems plunged in cold water. The trumpet-shaped, cornu-copla-like vases often used were roundly condemned as worthless to keep flowers in. Where people insisted upon using them, it was best to let the flowers lay in a bath tub or similar large receptacle in order to suck up as much water as possible before they were arranged for special occasions. Boxwood has been found extremely useful to stand in vases as it was easy to spread out the flowers and show their individuality. He said that there was a growing practice among critical buyers to purchase odd numbers of flowers, seven, nine or eleven roses, in lieu of the customary dozen. He had received a telephone message from a recipient of one of these odd numbers. She complained that she had received only eleven roses. She was advised that this number had been ordered by the donor. This ordering of odd numbers showed the buyer's individuality.

Mr. Letson also said that nearly everyone crowded flowers too much when arranging them. He failed to see beauty in arrangements where each flower could not show its individuality. Some retailers wanted to sell a likely purchaser as many flowers as possible at one time. These customers came back but seldom, whereas those who had been sold smaller orders could be depended upon to come back frequently. He said it is not good policy, no matter what some might say, to sell more flowers than were needed just for the mere sake of making a big sale. It did not pay in the end.

The use of ribbons on plants and baskets was condemned by the speaker in no uncertain terms. He referred to recent visits to numerous stores in New York and other places where he had seen the much beribboned hydrangeas and other plants. There might be uses for ribbon, but it was not on a well grown and flowered plant. When he did use ribbon, it was of the more showy type and not crepe or silk. The way wretchedly grown plants were dolled up with ribbons was ridiculous and sometimes almost pitiful. Color arrangements were referred to and lavender and orange, such as lavender sweet peas and orange calendulas, were suggested as one of the most pleasing. The scattering of greenery on tables after flowers had been arranged was roundly condemned as utterly uncalled-for and out of place, which, however, many had come to accept as a necessity. The speaker showed how to arrange narcissi and other flowers on the exhibits table and gave many more hints which were both valuable and practical. After a few minutes spent in discussing some of the points he had made, he was accorded an enthusiastic vote of thanks. Refreshments were served and the meeting adjourned at 10:45 p. m.

THE JOHN HENRY COMPANY
LANSING, MICHIGAN

& Co., was one of the representatives of the firm at the funeral.

Archie Murray sailed April 28 for a visit to Scotland. Mr. Murray was with the Waban Rose Conservatories for twenty-seven years and is now with Peirce Bros., rose specialists, Waltham. He has a brother and sister in Scotland, whom he has not seen for many years. His brother has a large nursery and specializes in fruit and rose stocks. He expects to be away for two or three months.

April proved to be a cool month. It held pretty true to its reputation for showers, coming in weeping and going out in a driving northeast rain storm. The precipitation of the past few days has helped to square off some of the accumulated deficiency for the year and, on the other hand, the cold weather has reduced some of the excess of temperature for the year.

Edward Welch, son of Patrick Welch and for the last four years with the firm in the wholesale cut flower business, thinks he sees more money in the automobile business and has therefore entered it.

Business with Thomas F. Calvin, Inc., has picked up surprisingly since T. F. Galvin, Sr., joined hands with his son April 1. The firm has a large, well equipped store near the wholesale markets, where rentals are much lower than on the leading business streets.

The next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will be held at Horticultural hall May 17.

The unusually cold and wet weather, which had its climax May 1 with a temperature below 40 degrees, has been unfavorable for the setting of fruit blossoms. Here apples, pears, peaches, plums and cherries are all in bloom and, until May 2, there had been almost constant fog and rain for ten days. Lawns and shrubberies never had a more luxuriant appearance than at present.

W. N. C.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The last week of April was poor. Cold, wet weather cast a gloom over the trading. Good roses and poor sweet peas abounded. The absence of lilac has been forgotten in the early arrival of south n peonies. Cornflowers, lupines and larkspur have been added to the list.

The indications point to a heavy demand for Mothers' day. The leading wholesale houses are advertising what they have to offer for Mothers' day for the first time in the history of the market. There will be a good supply, provided the demand is well distributed over the list of varieties.

The rather light supply of carnations now gives little encouragement that they will be able to meet any extra calls.

The Drift of the Times.

Following closely on the heels of the movement from carnations and sweet peas to roses in Lancaster and Chester counties comes rumor of return to carnations in nearby counties of Delaware and Bucks. Should this prove true, it will be an advantage to the market, for, while it is important that each grower grow whatever does best with him, it is also important that the market be well supplied with a good assortment of stock. With this in mind, the wholesalers encourage the grower who produces a desirable specialty, something choice, something novel. Variety is the spice of the market.

Roses.

Clarence U. Liggit says that there is more than the usual amount of replanting going on in the rose houses this season. Undoubtedly Mr. Liggit knows. In spite of all this replanting, the cut flower market is better supplied with

The Best in Cut Flowers

We aim to have our growers produce the Best to be had in the cut flower line, regardless of the time of the season. There is an ample supply of good flowers, and we especially recommend to you during May:

Beauties of a quality as good as they can be grown so late in the season.

Russell Roses in any quantity. We will be very strong on Good Russell during the summer months. It is the Best variety of all the Pink Roses known.

Columbia, Hadley, Ophelia, Sunburst and Aaron Ward are varieties that show very good quality.

In Carnations, we continue to have a large supply of C. W. Ward, the Best Rose-pink Variety for size and keeping quality.

The Peonies that we have had so far were very good, and we will continue to have them in quantity until the end of the season. White, several shades of Pink and some Red.

Delphinium Belladonna, Valley, Orchids, good yellow Daisies are other good cut flower items.

We devote our entire efforts to the selling of cut flowers. That is a fact that you should take into consideration when buying your cut flowers.

good roses than usual in early May. This seems to show the wisdom of early planting. When there are lots of flowers why not withdraw some in order to get an early start for winter? There is another reason for this early planting. The absence of imported rose plants has created a demand for the plants that are taken out of the greenhouses, provided they are offered early in spring. Most

A Frolic.

The Elks held a three days' "frolic" in the Metropolitan opera house on the evenings of April 28, 29 and 30. The entertainment was furnished entirely by Elks. Some were professionals, some were semi-professionals, some were Simon-pure amateurs. The entertainment lasted for nearly four hours each evening and was considered by those who know to be superior to many good shows. On the afternoon of Saturday, April 30, a special matinee was given. The crippled children in the various homes in and about Philadelphia were invited to this matinee. The Elks brought them to the opera house in their motors and took them home again afterwards. There were, perhaps, 500 children—it may be more—who had a lovely afternoon. This really fine bit of human kindness was planned by the exalted grand ruler of the order, Charles H. Grakelow.

Concerning Catalogue.

An inquiry has come to H. Bayersdorfer & Co. regarding the printing in a supply catalogue of the price at which the florists should sell. That is, that the catalogue should contain the retail as well as the wholesale price. To this letter H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have re-

Club Meeting.

The May meeting of the Florists' Club was held in the City Club, on South Broad street, Tuesday evening, May 3. J. Otto Thilow, secretary of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., delivered an especially prepared illustrated lecture on "Porto Rico," which gave much pleasure.

Robert Craig followed with an interesting account of his work in Porto Rico.

It was ladies' night. There were refreshments and a good crowd.

Various Notes.

Robert Craig has returned from Porto Rico.

rented the greenhouses of Oscar Young, at McKinley, Pa. They will take possession July 1. The place will be used to supply stock for their Overbrook business. One of the brothers, Walter von den Hengel, was formerly with J. J. Habermehl's Sons.

John Berger says that the past season has been satisfactory for bulbous flowers excepting daffodils.

George D. Clark, of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., injects a vein of humor into a business letter when he says that a package contains "10,000 seeds by actual count."

It seems reasonably certain that most of the peonies will be on time for Memorial day, which will be vastly better than having a big crop late.

Thomas Potts, of the Floracraft Gardens, says that the frosts of March 29 and 30 have reduced the peony crop to about one-third. Phil.

The Market.

From the growers' standpoint too much stock with unsatisfactory prices was the state in which the market was found last week, but the retailers were well satisfied with the conditions. As the writer studied the situation he could not help feeling that this state of affairs is not to the best interest of the trade in general. "One man's loss is another's gain" may be a true saying, but in an industry such as the florists' it would seem that if the supply and demand were more evenly balanced it would be to the advantage of all concerned. It is true that the cost of production is not so great at this season, but we must remember that only one item of this cost has been eliminated. That is coal and much of that has been used in bringing plants to their present perfection, so that this item is not entirely eliminated. There was a great deal of stock sold last week for less than it cost to produce it. Then, on the other hand, it is not good business from the retailers' standpoint to have stock cheapened. The time is bound to come when conditions will be back to normal and then it will be hard to re-establish prices.

Sweet peas could not be moved at any price; the quality, in most cases, was showing the effects of the advanced season. Carnations were holding up well, but were in larger supply than the demand could take care of. Roses, too, continued fine in quality, but these, like everything else, had to be kept moving at prices that brought little comfort to Orchids, which had been in good supply all winter, were short. There was a time when this would not have been noticed, but of late they have become popular and the demand has steadily increased.

Bedding Plants.

But, while the cut flower market was all shot to pieces, the man who had good bedding plants was having his inning. The season at this writing is just opening and, judging from the stock available and the prices at which bedding plants are being sold, the season is going to be a short one. It seems that most of those who, at one time, devoted their entire attention to bedding plants have been attracted by the high prices of cut flowers and have turned at least part of their glass into the production of cut flowers. This makes bedding stock scarce and the demand is increasing each year. Bedding plants will certainly have to have more attention, for, at the prices now obtainable, they are certainly a paying proposition. For instance, the writer saw geraniums, good stock to be sure, in 4-inch pots, for which 40 cents was paid. When we think of the thousands that have been sold at $1 per dozen, even with the advanced cost of production, there should be a splendid margin of profit in these.

member of the club are untiring in their efforts to lend every aid they can to these ladies in order to make this annual flower sale one that will be remembered. The ladies of the Women's Civic League are among the most active of Baltimore's society; it's up to the florists to help them in this spring enterprise. They say that they will be ready to return the compliment this fall, when the flower show in connection with "Say It with Flowers" week is held. These ladies are still talking of E. Gurney Hill's lecture held at the Southern hotel a short time ago. The writer heard one make the remark in connection with this, "When the florists do a thing, they certainly do it right." There is going to be quite a bit of rivalry between the florists themselves at this mart. Each plant will have its separate committee. For instance, there will be a rose committee, a geranium committee, etc. It will be the duty of each committee to see that the plant they represent is pushed.

Robert L. Graham, Jr., William F. Ekas and Joseph Merritt have been appointed a special committee to cooperate with J. Fred. Ammann in the drive to get new members for the S. A. F. The convention will be held at our doors this summer. Everyone connected with the business in Maryland will go over to Washington for this convention. There is no good reason why Maryland should

The Market.

The local wholesale market came back last week with plenty of stock of everything in season. The demand was excellent all week, though hardly enough, however, to consume the supply that came in daily to the various markets in the wholesale district.

Prices held up well all week and quotations did not suffer any, unless it was on sweet peas, which were in abundance all week. An exceptionally large crop is expected to be on sale for Mothers' day business. Roses sold well and prices kept up pretty well on the best quality, although poorer grades suffered in price somewhat. Carnations are a little off crop at present, and a scarcity is in sight for Mothers' day.

Judging from reports, there will be a large supply of peonies of excellent quality, which will bring $15 per hundred. Many advance orders are being booked for them for Mothers' day.

There was a large supply of excellent snapdragon all week, but the demand was not large enough to clean them up every day and only the choice varieties held up to any value.

The large supply of outdoor valley hurt the sale of indoor stock. Both kinds are plentiful at present.

Easter lilies and callas are more than the demand calls for. Among the other stock, calendulas, daisies, iris, pansies, tulips and delphiniums have their daily calls, but the demand does not clean them up. Asparagus, smilax and adiantum clear almost daily. There is an excellent demand for all other greens.

Bowling Meet.

The big night of the "Say It with Flowers" bowling league took place Saturday night, April 30, at the Western Rowing Club. It was a big night for all in the trade who attended. All were invited and nearly 200 took the opportunity to spend a few hours with a lot of good fellows who cheered their favorites to victory.

The bowling started at 8:30 p. m.

and twenty-four members of the league took the runs. There were six alleys, four men on each alley, in this contest. Each bowler was for himself and excitement ran high during the entire contest. After three games had been rolled, the scores showed that John McAnna, with a handicap of sixty-three pins, took first prize with a total of 543. A. Y. Ellison stood second, with 523, including a handicap of eighteen pins.

After the bowling, all the members and their guests were invited to a splendid midnight lunch. After cigars, President Frank A. Windler, with a few well chosen remarks, introduced Andrew Meyer, Jr., as the toastmaster of the evening. He called the prize-winners in turn to the head table to receive their prizes and Mr. Meyer, with his usual kindly wittiness, distributed the prizes. The winners and their scores were:

Then came the entertainment features, which consisted of five boxing contests of three rounds each, which greatly pleased the crowd. One bout in which Joe Frank and Charlie Wors took part was particularly entertaining. This contest ended in a draw. The entertainment ended in a battle royal in which all boxers took part. Excitement ran high in these contests and everyone present voted the evening one of the most enjoyable he ever spent.

Various Notes.

The trustees promise some interesting procedure for the May 12 meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club. The officers will meet at the home of President Rowe, in Kirkwood, to select a meeting place and to arrange the program that the trustees have planned for this big afternoon meeting. The secretary will send out special notices to all members, and a large attendance is expected.

Grimm & Gorly furnished one of the largest weddings of the season, April 27. The big job ran close to the $1,000 mark. Henry Duernberg says the company has several big ones booked for next month.

H. G. Berning reports that he will have 50,000 peonies for Mothers' day and just as many for Memorial day. Many orders have already been booked ahead.

"Say It with Flowers" week at the new Missouri theater last week was a big success. The large lobby was beautifully decorated with plants and cut flowers. The theater was filled to capacity every afternoon and evening and the trade greatly benefited through the publicity it received daily from the press. A floral shop was staged at each performance. Young ladies representing various flowers in dress took part.

J. F. Ammann will leave the first part of May for a trip west to the coast on business pertaining to the S. A. F. and the National Flower Growers' Association. The trip will take up a good part of the month.

Lebanon, Tenn.—J. C. Anderson states that the Anderson Floral Co. has no intention of selling its business and has not sold out, though a report to that effect was the result of the company's bookkeeper's poorly worded message to The Review.

TOLEDO, O.

The Market.

Last week showed business in fairly good shape, with stock of all kinds moving. Special sales added an opportunity to move stock that might otherwise have proved a loss.

The Mothers' day outlook is promising, and bids fair to be up to last year's standard.

Various Notes.

The new interurban station will soon be ready. A local florist has contracted for quarters in it.

The Navarre Flower Shop had a novel window, Japanese parasols playing a part in the decorations.

Metz & Bateman report a big increase in telegraph orders last month.

FRAT-M'S

Frat-M's are a great help to florists who make funeral work. They are exact reproductions of the official emblems embossed in gold and the different colors as required by each Fraternal and Labor organization.

The florist is saved time and worry in the nuisance of lettering, as well as the keeping of such a stock of wire frames, and different colored flowers. Just use such flowers as you have and then attach a FRAT-M with paste to the chiffon, or by the hanger that comes for each, as a card, and that is all there is to it, excepting the comment and commendatory talk for the florist.

Just pick out a dozen of the most used from the list following, enclosing $2.00 per dozen, and if they don't make you ten times their cost, return those unused and get your money.

Square and Compass, Chapter, Commandery, 82nd Degree, Shrine, Eastern Star, Royal Neighbors, M. W. A., Maccabees, Odd Fellows, Red Men, Knights of Columbus, K. of P., Moose, Jr. O. U. A. M., B. of R. T., B. of R. Clerks, B. of L. E., Br. of Blacksmiths and Helpers, Eagles.

Just give Frat-M's a trial; you don't have to keep them. We are willing to send them to you and return the money if they don't pay you ten times their cost. Address

You need Bailey's Books

Get the knowledge you need, hints and practical suggestions that will help in your work, by buying Bailey's new "Standard Cyclopedia of Horticulture"—the florists' 6-volume library. 4,000 engravings, 96 full-page cuts, fine color work.

Take advantage of the present easy payment plan of $3.00 per month, or send $48.00 for the complete set of six volumes. This is the best book buy any florist could make—an investment that will pay a life-time of dividends.

TATE'S TIPS

FLORISTS NEED ADJUSTMENT.

Fact; Not Theory.

Throughout the entire business world today, it matters not what the particular line may be, we hear of but one condition and that is one of adjustment. We often speak of adjustment, especially in business, as a mere matter of speech. I mean by this, we do not go into the word deep enough to realize just what it means in our individual business. Now, let us go back to first principles for a few moments and take a simple example, one that everyone who reads this has at some time experienced. Take your watch, that faithful servant that has served you so well for years. You start out some fine morning, depending upon it to catch a train. You arrive at the station to find that your train has been gone fifteen minutes before your arrival; the first thing you do is to compare your watch with the railroad time, and you find it fifteen minutes slow. You will be quick to say that it is the first time your watch has ever deceived you. To all

A Memorial Day Thought

It is a sacred duty to honor the memory of the dear ones gone before, upon the only day in the year that is dedicated to them, and to honor the Soldiers and Sailors who gave their lives for us.
Beautiful flowers for Memorial Day. Orders by wire promptly and attractively carried out.

appearances it is running just the same as it ever did. Had it stopped you would have understood, but it is running all right, though the service it renders is misleading. You take it to your watchmaker and explain the situation. He looks it over and tells you that all it needs is adjusting. He makes the

The Full Tale Of The Three Merry Tales

If there ever was a good scout, C. B. Falls is that man.

T'other day, he came into our shop and said "Hush, Stumpp, Hush."

"Hush what, and why?" says I. "Hush those so-called merry tales of the 5 dollar box, fern and basket.

"If you don't hush them, they'll hush you."

"How so?" says I.

"Why, Stumpp, old man, your shop is one of New York's swell places. Top notch in every way. Your separate sales must average 'way over $10 each; and then you start lowering them by putting $5 notions in folks' heads. It's all wrong."

"Not I," says I. "It's not my notion. It's the public's. Some—a whole big lot of some, will spend $5 when they won't spend a cent more. Two fives make one ten.

"Does it lower Tiffany's class, because they sell $5 scarf pins, as well as $50,000 diamond necklaces?

"Why, man dear, that $5 box, fern and basket, are Stumpp class, because they are done the Stumpp way.

"It isn't what it costs, it's how it's done, that counts. We send two choice roses every day; to three different persons. Tell me—do those roses cheapen our reputation?

"Done a cheap way, they would. "But done the Stumpp way, they don't."

So when you have a $5 F. T. D. customer, remember our $5 Basket, Box and Fern.

adjustment and you have as good a watch as ever. But you want to know what it was that caused your timepiece to run wild, and don't lose sight of the fact that there was a cause. It may have been an accumulation of dust, a sudden jar or close proximity to some high voltage of electricity. There are any number of reasons that might cause this condition.

Bringing Home the Lesson.

Just as surely as that watch had to be adjusted, so does the florists' business. The word adjustment, in the

To most of us, when we consider the prices that we are now getting for stock, this would seem ridiculous and I am ready to admit that the florists' business has suffered less in this process of readjustment than the majority of industries. There is a cause for this; namely, underproduction.

would have been a different tale to tell.
There is no doubt that the present fluctuation in prices is driving some buyers away, but, with a limited sup-

That there has been a material increase publicity. But let anything like normal production prevail and we soon note a congestion. The writer has seen it

Henry Wittbold, the first of that family name to conduct a Retail Flower Store in Chicago, for many years was the city's largest floral decorator, devoting most of his attention to that department of the business. In response to the request of many customers, his son, George Wittbold, having become associated with him, he opened a down-town retail flower store at 30 E. Randolph Street. This proved so immediately successful that removal to larger quarters was necessary. Facilities have been provided for doing a high-class business of large proportions.

stock was plentiful, the same volume of business seemed to be transacted, but stock was getting near the glut stage. This seems to me to be an unhealthy condition. The sooner the business gets down to a scale of prices that will not drive away trade, the better it will be for the industry as a whole.

Enter the Business Man.

I know now of an instance where a corporation has been formed of business men to take over a large range. It is composed of lawyers, bankers, and one public accountant; there is not a florist in the company. These men were attracted by the high prices and by what seemed to them the enormous demand for flowers. In a recent conversation with an officer of this corporation he told me that it was the intention of his company to apply the most efficient business methods; to secure the best grower obtainable, and to give the is accustomed to engineering such feats, and hear him speak of a central purchasing department, of controlling supply and of reducing the cost of production to a minimum, it does not sound so visionary after all. It was during the war that I spoke of the danger of outside capital being attracted. This is the first instance I have heard of its really being done.

Lethargy Dangerous.

The florists have one of the best industries in this country, but sometimes I wonder if they are not following the line of least resistance; that is, if they are not willing to let well enough alone. This is dangerous. We cannot stand still; we must either go ahead or go backwards. Flowers have now reached a place where they are a necessity in the lives of the American public

An interesting event will occur in the household of Samuel Hanson, North Troy, N. Y., when the only child, Marion, becomes a June bride. The lucky prospective groom, Oliver D'Auray, also becomes a partner in a lucrative business built up by the Hanson folks. Some surprises will be sprung by the members of the Albany Florists' Club, of which Mr. Hanson is the worthy president.

W. W. Hannell & Son, Watervliet, N. Y., are preparing for Christmas with a fine stock of cyclamens and heather. Carnations are equally promising, while geraniums for Mothers' day and Memorial day are being rapidly cleaned out, owing to the excellent quality. Apropos of this, the remark was elicited that it is difficult to fix a standard price, owing to so much variation in quality.

"Doubtless, considerable interest is already being taken in the forthcoming flower show at Cleveland," observed Conrad C. Gindra, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., "and many growers are planning to make exhibits. Our intention to make a display at the flower show in New York city was confined to some specimen cyclamens, but an offer of $10 apiece was irresistible and unless the spirit of loyalty can be aroused, is there not danger of others falling by the way?" Oil as a fuel is a big success here and Mr. Gindra opines that the matter of heating will be one of the most highly interesting subjects at the convention of the S. A. F. at Washington.

"Funeral work has been our main support of late," observed William C. Gloeckner, Albany, N. Y., "and has called for some original designs. This reminds me of a gem that has been moss-covered for many years and hidden in a country burying ground, not far off:

Under the daisies,
Under the leaves.
Here lies the body
Of Solomon Pease.
Pease is not here, only the pod:
Solomon's shuffled home to his God.

George Philip, traveling for F. W. Eberle, Albany, N. Y., is in Florida and reports good business, the shippers accepting the moderate declines in values with good grace and placing orders for future seed supplies about as usual.

The Arcade Florists, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., have a complete seed outfit, which is prominent at this time. Excellent business is reported.

John Sambrook, of Sambrook Bros., Troy, N. Y., remarked that telegraph orders serve as a business barometer and, since he had not received the usual number of orders by wire, he gathered that conditions were similar elsewhere—rather slow.

W. G. Saltford, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., was found among his pet orchids, now more precious, owing to the embargo. A batch of about 300 was grown from twelve original plants of Calanthe

Veitchii, without spot. Cattleya gigas, Gaskelliana and Bowringiana were making growth and flower spikes at once, while Cattleya Trianae is the slowest of the species. All are in perfect health.
The idea is to confine the plants with roots inside 7-inch or 8-inch pans. This throws strength into the flower sheath.
The calanthes are first grown in 3-inch pots, in a mixture of moss and soil, then transferred into 5-inch pots, after taking off part of the bottom of the ball. In July or August, a dressing or watering of cow manure is given. The increasing sale and slow propagation warrant every attention, is the opinion of this veteran orchidist.

Albert Stroh, of L. C. Stroh & Sons, Batavia, N. Y., returned from the rose show at Boston in time to help out in a rush on funeral work. Walter Stroh reports progress on the new soil mixer, which is expected to be put on the market, and a working model will probably be on exhibition at Anacostia during the convention of the S. A. F.

While on the subject of roses, Colin Ogston, superintendent of the Mrs. W. S. Kimball conservatories, Rochester, N. Y., mentioned that at the June rose show there will be the finest collection ever seen and there will be many surprises, he says.

Mrs. Hilton, who takes an active interest in this flourishing concern, has been seriously ill, but hopes soon to be at her former post.

When E. J. Byam, of Rome, N. Y., realized his inability to give the Romans conscientious service, he looked around for a purchaser who could. His wisdom in selection has been proved by the fact that his successor, Ivar Ringdahl, has more than doubled the Attention was called to a trio of specimen acacias planted in the showhouse, a present from a former employer, Thomas Roland, Nahant. They are highly valued as mascots and are something never before seen here. Mrs. Ringdahl acts as bookkeeper and is credited with a large share of the success attained.

"Do you recall that practical essay by George J. Ball on sweet peas?" inquired W. A. Rowlands, Utica, N. Y. "To my mind it was the best of its kind that ever appeared in The Review, from which, doubtless, many growers gained much information of value. By following the suggestions, we never had a finer crop, picking in one week as many as 40,000 blooms of first quality." Commenting on the carnation Laddie, which has set a new mark for prices in the Mohawk valley, Dr. Rowlands finds the cuttings root best during December, the tip of each being split when placed in the sand.

W. D. Snell, Herkimer, N. Y., recently acquired the range of J. O. Graham, Little Falls, N. Y. This makes a total of four, with one each at Iliou and Mohawk. The home place is in charge of the junior Snell and bids fair to expand beyond its present capacity.

Joseph Traudt, Canajoharie, N. Y., has taken time by the forelock, so to speak, in anticipating the call for shrubbery by securing additional land around the home range and carrying a popular line of hardy stock. "In the rural towns the demand is increasing right along and nowhere more so than in our Empire state," he observed.

"How long will they last?" is a question often asked," observed J. W.

This branch of the trade is an important one and Mr. Grupe will appreciate any information from anyone who is similarly situated. He admits that this season he has made "real money," as he expresses it; still, he is desirous of giving his patrons greater satisfaction. Doubtless, some readers of The Review will help him out.

BEAUMONT, TEX.

The prospects for a busy Mothers' day are good and the only difficulty will be the inability to obtain sufficient stock, as there is a small amount grown in the locality of Beaumont. Funeral work has been good, as several prominent citizens have died recently. Bedding stock has been below normal, on account of the cooler weather following a hot March.

The outdoor Easter lily crop is at its apex and is of excellent quality. Shasta daisies are coming in and the cape jasmines will be ready to cut soon after May 10. Gladioli are well into blooming and are a staple product with the Beaumont trade. Beaumont and its vicinity have been fortunate in escaping the severe storms which have done so much damage elsewhere.

varieties were cut and brought a fair price. They met a ready market. Owing to the blizzard April 15, the outdoor stock has been held back and some has been killed. There are few plants of any kind.

Various Notes.

The Boldt-Lundy House of Flowers has an attractive window for Mothers' day. It represents an old mother, dressed in a house dress and slippers, sitting in a rocking chair in an old-fashioned garden and crocheting. At her side is a table with a large vase of flowers on it, bearing a card which reads, "From son and daughter."

The Alpha Floral Co. has an attractive window display for telegraph delivery. Among the flowers there are telegraph instruments and tags from some of the leading florists from New York to San Francisco. Charles Edgar, formerly with the McCallum Co., of Pittsburgh, is now with the Alpha Floral Co.

ADVANCING AMARYLLIS.

The amaryllis is something of an aristocrat among flowers and is not well known by the country at large, but in six days, recently, 82,499 persons visited a special exhibition at Washington in the greenhouses of the Department of Agriculture. While at the present time the amaryllis is not extensively handled in this country, either by florists or as a house plant, it lends itself readily to such use. It is not difficult to hybridize, and, while it requires eighteen months for the seedlings to come into bloom, the recent display in the department greenhouses amply proves the possibilities both as regards numbers and variety.

In England this plant has for years been much more popular than here and the breeders and fanciers often secure prices which seem exorbitant, yet good varieties can be had around $2 per plant in the English trade. They may be handled the same as dahlia bulbs, being planted out in May and lifted in late September, and will give a rich reward for the trouble. Plants handled in pots plunged in a border during the early summer, dried off in the autumn, and stored in a frost-free cellar during early winter may be brought out and flowered in April.

Besides the methods mentioned, which apply particularly to the northern states, the amaryllis may be grown the year around as an outdoor plant in Florida, southern Texas and southern California. The least satisfactory method is that of handling it in borders, but as a pot plant plunged in sand or cinders during the summer and dried off in the autumn it gives great satisfaction when brought into flower in April or early May.

One of the features to strive for in the production of hybrids is to secure plants with large flowers of uniform color throughout. As a rule the colors of the amaryllis which are most frequently met with are shades of red. Departures from these colors, some of which are not attractive, are desirable, and satisfactory shades of pink and of white are possible, as work in England and in the United States has shown. Pure white flowers are rare, but have been produced. Good pinks are almost equally rare, but the work of the specialists of the Department of Agriculture clearly shows that flowers with such colors are within the range of the horticulturist.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

CALIFORNIA'S SHOW.

Work on the plans of the coming large exhibition is going on at present. It is to be held at Exposition park, Los Angeles, October 20 to 23, by the California Association of Nurserymen. The Los Angeles city council, at a meeting April 26, authorized the park department to prepare the sunken gardens in the park for this purpose. It is understood that the great collection of dahlias and other plants which will be shown on the seven-acre garden will be turned over to the park for a permanent exhibit at the close of the show.

The exhibition is to be held in connection with the eleventh annual convention of the association and will be state-wide in scope. The convention was first planned for Pasadena, but was transferred to Los Angeles in order to secure adequate facilities for such a large show. The famous annual exhibition of the Pasadena Horticultural Society will be held at Los Angeles in connection with the show.

The executive committee of the state association in charge of the show is composed of the following members: Fred H. Howard, Los Angeles, chairman; Roy F. Wilcox, Montebello; Max Crow, Gilroy; J. E. Bergtholdt, Newcastle, and J. W. Barnicatt, Newcastle. Other committees are in charge of the following: Fred H. Howard, finance; Charles F. Gutting, dahlias; Albert Goldenson, florists' displays; W. H. Rapp, exhibits; William Hertlich, plants; O. Howard, outdoor exhibits; J. H. Armstrong, seeds and appliances; T. H. Wright, premiums; Paul J. Howard, entertainment; John C. Bodger, concessions, and John J. Reeves, housing and decoration.

It is the plan to make this show the most elaborate ever held in America, if that is possible; if not, to come as close to it as possible. Nurserymen and growers all over California will send flowers and plants. The state has been canvassed with the result that more and larger exhibits have been arranged for than were ever before gathered together in California. Mr. Howard and the secretary of the association recently returned from the north, where many growers agreed to exhibit on a large scale. The show will be held along educational and practical lines. There will be beautiful outdoor as well as indoor exhibits. The show as planned will not only be a flower show de luxe, but it will also be a demonstration of the horticultural possibilities of California.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

A decidedly better tone to retail business and some improvement in the shipping end about sizes up the market situation for last week. Gladioli were plentiful and of greater variety than is usual so early in the season. Roses were plentiful and of good quality. Cecile Brunner was overplentiful and there will be a fine supply for Mothers' day. The last few days have been warm and it is hoped that the high winds are over for the season. This will lead to an abundance of outdoor stock. As usual during this season, statice and strawflowers were much in evidence, but the large strawflowers were not so plentiful as in some years and a scarcity will probably develop by Memorial day. Greens and small flowers were plentiful.

Various Notes.

Joseph Maguth has purchased greenhouses at Ocean Park Heights and intends to go into rose growing. Mr. Maguth, it will be recalled, was rose grower for a number of years for Walter Armacost & Co. and since leaving that firm has been connected with the Amling interests and with E. H. Volkman. He will still be connected with Mr. Volkman at the range where planting is now going on vigorously. Another new house is about ready.

J. Dieterich returned last week from San Francisco where he had been to consult a specialist. He is still far from well, but is improving.

Cocos plumosa must be an immensely popular palm judging from the large number being sent out daily from the nursery of Roy F. Wilcox & Co., of Montebello. This firm has an immense stock of the palm in sizes that make an immediate show.

Max Tiflofsky is now in the growing business at Inglewood. He has several greenhouses. He is also raising a new statice which is proving popular.

Fine Spanish iris in all popular colors is being sent to the American Florists' Exchange by Frank Warner.

Sidney Wiffin, late of Desplaines, Ill., is now with F. R. Hills. He is acting as a salesman at the market and is filling in at the nursery and is quite successful in both capacities. His brother, Arthur, is with Walter Armacost & Co. at the Sawtelle range.

Paul Miller, of the California Floral Co., says that there was a decided change for the better in business last week. This was especially true in the shipping end.

George Hall says that the orders already received for statice are greater than his whole volume of business last season.

F. R. Hills, of Hills' Nursery, leaves for Chicago this week. His business is to finally dispose of his Maywood greenhouses for which he has had several offers.

H. N. Gage says that the nursery and growing grounds at Downey are producing fine results. The natural silt soil on the place is excellent for bulbous stock.

Walter Garbitt expresses himself as well satisfied with the start he has made in business for himself.

The high wind blew down a smokestack at the range of Walter Armacost & Co., but, fortunately, no great damage was done, as it was one that served an extra boiler, which is not now in use. At the store, Mr. Williamson says that orders and inquiries for Mothers' day began to come in much earlier this year than usual. This is a good sign. He also said that most of the customers were using the long-distance phone to get first-hand information as to how the supply of stock will be. Mr. Royston is taking a trip to Portland, Ore., and other western points.

Two truck loads of funeral work to Whittier, a large pall for another funeral and the setting up of a floral booth at the local business show for a nearby bank, gave Albert Goldenson a more or less busy day one day last week when all this business was sandwiched in with the regular store business.

N. A. Benson, of the Denver Wholesale Florists' Co., paid a paying visit here last week. Mrs. Benson has been here for some time and will probably stay longer as her health is better here than in Denver.

The E. C. Amling Co. reports big orders for Mothers' day, especially from points in southern Texas. Large quantities of statice are now being handled here and the special offers in baskets are going strong.

Roy F. Wilcox says that the preparations for the big fall show are going forward and everything points to this show being the biggest thing in horticulture ever attempted in the west. Premium lists and other information will be published soon.

Polder Bros. are in the market with some fine Delphinium Belladonna.

Darling's Shop is extraordinarily attractive now as fine stock in all lines are being shown. H. R. R.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

Roses are still plentiful. Violets are completely over for the spring season. Tulips and marigolds are almost over, but carnations are plentiful and iris of various kinds is helping to fill the breach. Gladioli are still scarce, but good crops are coming on. There are some Easter lilies and plenty of sweet peas. Many wild flowers are being brought into the market, such as lupines and California poppies. Hawthorn, both red and white, is plentiful and there is some lilac left. The various kinds of strawflowers are now coming in "green," and there is a brisk demand for them. Business is good, and the market is cleaned early; especially is all the fine stuff competed for.

Various Notes.

Angelo Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., has just returned from visiting Sacra-

The crop of PURITY will only run about 45% of normal. Fortunately here at LOS ROBLES, we have been "expecting" a wet winter for three years, so we were well prepared for it. All of our Purity stock was on new ground, and we will have some fine stock to fill our orders. There is a better outlook for 1922 crop at lower prices, as we find that fertilizer, pipe and labor are beginning to drop a little. It takes almost six months for any change in eastern conditions to reach the coast, and we have been operating the past year under very high costs, particularly in labor and fertilizer. Prices are based upon supply and demand, and with the light crop, a grower must get high prices to meet cost of growing.

mento, Stockton and other valley cities. He called on the trade and states that he found all the florists doing good business and handling stock similar to that in the San Francisco market. He visited some of the gold mines in Calaveras and Amado counties, and found them all working. This will add to the prosperity of the state, for many of the mines have been closed. At one quartz mine, Mr. Rossi went 4,000 feet below the surface of the earth. "And the best of all," he stated, "is that, on returning home, I find business has been excellent."

H. A. Avansino, manager of the E. W. McLellan Co., says roses are the big crop from the firm's nurseries.

Domoto Bros. have about 100 bunches a day of Russell, Ophelia, Mme. Butterfly and Dunlop roses coming from their nurseries, as well as a plentiful supply of Easter lilies, sufficient to supply Mothers' day and Memorial day orders.

Enomoto & Co. are selling locally, as well as shipping, a great many green strawflowers, especially pink statice and helichrysum in various colors, all of which are coming in abundantly from the nurseries.

The Growers' Cut Flower Co. has plenty of Hinoki plant tubs, received recently from Japan.

A large warehouse basement between Sutter and Bush streets has been taken over by the United Flower & Supply Co. I. Inque of this firm states that the company intends to go extensively into the business of handling florists' supplies, in addition to the business in potted and cut flowers. A sample case of colored mats has just been received from Japan, and by October the company expects to have 50,000 mats in stock.

Luther Burbank and many other distinguished Californians were on hand at the opening of the wild floral show April 28, at the St. Francis hotel. Julius Eppstein, the St. Francis hotel florist, speaking of the 3-day exhibit, said: "Florists, as a class, are not taking any especial part in this display of wild flowers, but it really is, indirectly, an excellent thing for our business because it helps to arouse interest in flowers and their cultivation. Most people know and care nothing about California's wonderful wild flowers except the yellow California poppy. This exhibit ought to help open their eyes and arouse their interest in the wealth of native flowers that every county in this state possesses." Mr. Eppstein did a large orchid business during the run of the Chicago Grand Opera Co.

Automobile dealers and branches of factories are giving a great outdoor exhibition at their various headquarters and F. C. Jaeger & Son have arranged the floral features of many of the displays.

Mrs. Darbee is planning to visit Washington in August to attend the convention of the Society of American Florists. She is a staunch advocate of increased acreage for flowers, and she believes that Joseph's made special bouquets of pink and lavender strawflowers for Mothers' day. These bouquets were of the old-fashioned, formal design, surrounded by lace paper, and their quaintness appealed to the Mothers' day buyers.

Avansino Bros. & Co. designed a striking pall for the funeral of the late Dr. Lewis. It was of iris, roses and orchids, giving an effect of lavender shading to pink.

The C. C. Navlet Co. is finding that the depression, spoken of in other lines of industry, is not affecting its business at all. In addition to cut and potted flowers, there is a heavy demand at the store for bedding plants and dahlias.

The glut of stock is over for a few weeks. Mothers' day will take care of all the stock it is possible to get. The last two weeks the weather has been somewhat dull, which has held back the outside stock; consequently, the demand for carnations has been heavy. Roses are being received in perfect condition and somewhat faster than the demand. Snapdragons and sweet peas are good and are finding a ready sale.

Potted plants are scarce, but a good showing in spring stock is to be found in most of the greenhouses. Bedding plants are starting to move and good stock is being offered.

Various Notes.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held Tuesday, May 3, in the Y. M. C. A. building. One of the chief topics will be, "Should the price of flowers be raised for Mothers' day?"

E. Hedger, of the Davenport Flower Shop, has been on the sick list, but he is now able to be at the store again.

The city-beautiful committee is boosting hard for the florist this year. Prizes are offered for the best window boxes and best gardens. Some live members are on the committee, including the park superintendent, and the growers are ready with the goods.

while the latter half saw heavy funeral work and disappointing transient demand. Weather conditions were less favorable, with the result that deliveries fell off and it was easier to steady the market. The tulip cut was at its height. Tulips this year have been of better quality and larger variety than in previous years and as a result the buying public has taken advantage of this condition to buy more freely than has been the case in previous seasons.

Mothers' day may be said to be the chief topic of interest, and from every indication this is going to be a successful event this year. Some attractive advertising is being done by the retail florists in reminding the public of the occasion, and local retailers expect to break all previous records in the matter of telegraph deliveries. "We need to watch our Mothers' day advertising more closely than ever now that it is such a really national day," says the manager of one of the larger retail shops here. "It is admitted by all who are informed that, barring the original idea of Mothers' day, all credit for its development must go to the florists of the country. Today we find the post card publishers, the book publishers, the stocking manufacturers and every other sort of business attempting to come in and share 'our day' with us. They will do this unless we keep hammering home to the public through good and forceful advertising that Mothers' day is an occasion which requires flowers, and flowers alone." Still another of the retailers is issuing in booklet form one of the most beautiful

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, H. G. Hastings, Atlanta, Ga.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

A. SETTERBERG has resumed his position with the Everett R. Peacock Co., Chicago.

SCHEDULES of liabilities and assets of H. W. Doughten, Inc., New York, appear under the head, "Business Embarrassments," in this issue.

Two of the traveling representatives of the General Bulb Co., C. Westerbeek and Mr. Schmal, sailed for Holland on the steamer Nieuw Amsterdam April 30.

THE death of David Ives Bushnell, the senior partner of D. I. Bushnell & Co., St. Louis, Mo., which occurred April 30, is reported in the obituary column this week.

FREESIA bulbs planted on high and well drained ground furnished an excellent crop of good bulbs, states the Los Robles Co., Santa Cruz, Cal., in explanation of its own successful plantings.

THE United Bulb Growers, Inc., of Sassenheim, Holland, has removed its New York office from 640 Broadway to 15 Williams street. K. Klyn, sales manager for the company, who has been here since December, sails for Holland early this month.

A NEW seed store is that of the Bryson-Holcombe Seed Co., Greenville, S. C. It was recently chartered with a capital stock of $15,000. The officers are: President, A. E. Holcombe; vice-president, J. E. Bryson, and secretary and treasurer, H. H. Holcombe.

REPORTS from California are to the effect that the crop of Freesia Purity this season will only run about 45 per cent of normal. Prices will be high. Orders to date are double those received at the same date last season, indicating an early placing of the crop.

THE regular annual meeting of the Iowa Seed Dealers' Association will be held Wednesday, June 1, at the Chamber of Commerce rooms, Des Moines, Ia. Matters of real importance to the seed dealers of Iowa will be taken up at this meeting, says Secretary A. M. Eldridge, assistant manager of the Henry Field Seed Co., Shenandoah, Ia., and a full attendance is desired. Visiting seedsmen are invited.

THE General Bulb Co., of Vogelenzang, Holland, has moved its New York office from 110 Water street to new and larger quarters at 25 Beaver street. A. M. Grootendorst will be in charge of the New York office. He has been connected with the bulb trade for many years past, lately as manager of the Sluis Seed Store, Chicago, and previously with F. J. Grootendorst & Sons, of Boskoop, Holland.

THE trial fields of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, are in full bloom in the tulip section. There are about 150 varieties blooming at present and they make a beautiful sight. The downtown store has been decorated all week with vases of the various blooms. Among these is a beautiful, lightly tinted yellow that Ralph B. Howe, now president of the company, thinks is a new variety. Speaking of the business, Mr. Howe said that the company's March business was away ahead of that of last year, while April's business, in spite of the bad weather, was every bit as good as that a year ago.

ONE may obtain a good idea of the trade's progress in Australia and New Zealand from the first annual review of the Australasian Seed and Nursery Trade, published March, 1921, which contains reports of important annual conventions.

AIDING the seedsmen's publicity campaign, though quite independently, the United States Department of Agriculture is disseminating, by its weekly news letter and mimeographed press dispatches, much gardening information for amateurs.

"BUSINESS going along in great shape, with not a complaint to make," was the comment of John C. Leonard, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago. He stated that there was all the business the company could use for this year and that there is a good start for next year.

"A MOST terrific business" was the way that the younger member of the firm of Peter Hollenbach, Chicago, characterized the grass seed business for this season. He also stated that the onion sets had been completely sold out, so that it was even necessary to buy sets in the open market.

WARRANTY OF GERMINATION.

Questions concerning the rights of the parties to a contract for a sale of seed showing "a germinating vitality of eighty-five per cent" were presented to the Nebraska Supreme court in the recent case of Corry vs. Waldron Seed Co., 181 Northwestern Reporter, 540.

Plaintiff sued to recover the agreed price of 1,098 pounds of muskmelon seed grown by him for defendant and delivered to the latter. The contract required a germinating vitality of eighty-five per cent, but provided no circumstances under which test should be made.

Defendant's attorney insisted that, before plaintiff could recover, it must be shown that the seed measured up to the required standard of vitality. The court, however, held that this was not necessary under the circumstances of the case. Affirming judgment in plaintiff's favor, the Supreme court handed down an opinion of which the following is a summary:

When a contract to grow and deliver seed provides that it shall have a certain percentage of germinating vitality, the buyer has the right to test the seed within a reasonable time after delivery as a condition to acceptance and acceptance will not be presumed from the mere fact that seed was delivered to and received into the possession of the buyer, if such test be practicable, customary or contemplated by the parties. If the contract is silent as to whether a test to determine its vitality is practicable, customary or contemplated, those facts become the subject of pleading and proof, and the court will not assume them or take judicial notice thereof.

Under such circumstances it is sufficient for the seller, who has delivered seed thereunder to the buyer, in his petition in an action for the price, to set forth the contract and allege delivery pursuant thereto. If such test was practicable, customary or contemplated, and the buyer desires to avail himself thereof, it is, in such case, matter of affirmative defense. An answer which consists only of an admission of the receipt of the seed and an allegation that it was inferior in germinating vitality to the contract requirement, but fails to plead affirmatively that such test was practicable, customary or contemplated, does not state a defense.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

AUCTION sales of nursery stock by the MacNiff Horticultural Co., New York, are active.

WILLIAM A. PETERSON, proprietor of Peterson Nursery, Chicago, celebrated his fifty-fourth birthday anniversary April 29. He was born in the house in which he still lives.

THE SAN JOSE SCALE.

The San Jose scale has become so widespread in Missouri that it has been necessary to take strong measures to control it in every possible way. In order that this may be done, the College of Agriculture of the University of Missouri has been carrying on experiments to determine the best methods for controlling it. The results of these experiments have shown the following facts:

The experiments with hydrocyanic acid gas did not completely control the scale in every case. The gas used was varied in strength. It was found that the strength known as 1-1-3 gave better results than the weaker strength of $\frac{1}{2}$ - $\frac{1}{2}$ - $\frac{1}{2}$. The 1-1-3 strength gave as good results as the stronger 2-2-6 strength. Sodium cyanide used at the 1- $\frac{1}{2}$ -3 strength killed 100 per cent of the scale. Hydrocyanic acid gas was more effective when used on dry plants than when used on wet plants. A greater percentage of the scale was killed. All of the strengths of the gas caused injury to the plants. The stronger the gas, the more injury it caused. The lesson that the university experimental station derived from these observations were that the 1-1-3 formula should always be used in fumigating nursery stock and that the stock should be dry when fumigated, for, while there may be greater danger to the plants, the scale is better controlled, which is the most important factor.

In the experiments with carbon bisulphide, the following observations were made: It did not control the scale, but it did do a high percentage of injury to the plants. The use of this on plants for the control of San Jose scale should be discouraged.

The experiments with several other treatments showed the following results:

Lime-sulphur applied at 1-7 and 1-9 strengths controlled the scale fairly well. The sulphur dips injured the plants to some extent. The plants which were dipped at both tops and roots were injured more than those which were dipped at the top only.

The best results were with miscible oil. One hundred per cent of the scale was controlled in every case but one, and in that case ninety-nine per cent was controlled. The oil injured the plants somewhat, especially those which were dipped at both tops and roots. When nursery stock is treated with this oil, the roots should not be dipped.

Nicotine sulphate should not be used as dips for controlling San Jose scale on nursery stock.

None of the materials completely controlled the scale. All stock infested with the scale should be burned or destroyed in some way. That stock which is not infested, but which has been in contact with infested plants, should be treated before it is distributed. The best all-around results were obtained with hydrocyanic acid gas at 1-1-3 strength and with miscible oil at the strength of 1-12 or 1-15, with tops only dipped.

progress and success of any firm or organization handling products necessary for food or the construction of industries. Men go into business for the primary purpose of making money. They either manufacture their line or they buy it and in turn undertake to sell it to the public at a margin of profit sufficiently large not only to pay their overhead and initial expense, but also to secure a margin of profit for reserve. The supply in ordinary times is always ample, but the demand is materially influenced by substantial and efficient methods of selling.

The nursery business is no exception in the requirement of salesmanship; in fact, the nurserymen are wholly dependent upon the success of well organized selling campaigns for the mar-

"Pembroke," Bryn Mawr, Pa.

Gentlemen: Having had your Tree Experts working on this Estate on three different occasions, we have been thoroughly satisfied with their work at all times and it is very interesting to note the general improvement on the trees from year to year. In addition to doing first class work your experts proved themselves very steady, courteous and obliging in every way.

Respectfully,

Wm. Fowler, Supt., Mrs. S. F. Wheeler Estate.

Every gardener and estate superintendent has a most important work in the saving of the trees under his care.

Davey Tree Surgery brings to his aid the highest development of science plus a generation of experience. A careful examination of your trees will be made by appointment.

keting of their product. I feel sure that the matter of production is not the problem confronting the nursery business today. Production can be effected only by the energies expended in the marketing of our product. Nurserymen have been concerned in market development for some time past and we have every reason to expect that, through the combined efforts of growers and dealers, nursery sales will be materially enlarged.

Most Effective Selling Methods.

Many retail nurserymen depend entirely upon publicity and a catalogue to sell their product, while others use traveling salesmen with liberal or limited publicity, as the case may be. Both methods employ salesmanship and we have examples of success and failure in each, but my observation leads me to believe that a personal interview with a prospective buyer is unquestionably the most effective method of getting business. The salesman on the ground has all the advantage in putting over a sale. He is there to answer all questions and comply with all requirements; not only that, but his personal influence, if he has proper salesmanship qualifications, usually results in a larger order than the purchaser originally intended to buy.

The traveling salesman brings the nurseryman and the buyer in closer contact and, if he is the right kind, he establishes a friendly relation that creates more and increased business year after year. The traveling salesman makes a thorough, house-to-house canvass in the territory he is assigned and, by intelligent arguments used in his canvass, creates a more lasting impression in favor of fruit growing and ornamental planting than could possibly be done in any other manner.

I do not mean to imply that the personal interview would not be augmented by newspaper or other publicity, but there are thousands of orchards, groves and landscape plantings flourishing in all sections of the country that would never have been planted were it not for the traveling salesman. The salesman is really the main avenue of output for nursery products. Sometimes he fails to make a sale, but often, where he fails to secure an order, he creates a demand for fruit trees or ornamental stock that results in an order being sent by mail to a catalogue or mail-order house.

The Much-Abused Agent.

The traveling salesman has come in for a great deal of abuse and ridicule from many sources, but if you study the cause you will discover that the fellow with the hammer usually has advertising space to sell or conducts a mail-order house with no agent.

It is irritating to note the attitude displayed by many of our high-class farm papers toward the "nursery agent," as he is called. They never say anything good about him and hold out no encouragement to any bright young man who contemplates taking up the selling of nursery stock as an occupation. The nursery agent, in their opinion, is a blackleg and the business is not elevating. He is pictured as a liar, a confidence man, a hold-up artist; in fact, anything but a gentleman. Why is this? Is there any reason for it? Perhaps in olden days the character of the average nursery salesman

Grandest
in existence

Height, 4 feet. In color, a rich, glowing scarlet, and the immense, firm, rounded flowers, 7 inches across when open, are produced on strong, erect stalks well above the large, rich green foliage. "The President" is superior to any other red variety in the quantity and also quality of bloom, and the firm flowers resist drought and heat to a remarkable degree. A large bed of this variety was planted on the grounds of the Washington Monument, Washington, D. C. Another "President" Canna bed was on the Garden Pier at Atlantic City, while several more were to be seen in the largest public parks in this country, where these beautiful flowers received the unqualified admiration of every Canna lover. Naturally, a tremendous demand has been created. Strong roots ready now. Plants from 3-inch pots, $2.00 per 10; $15.00 per 100; $125.00 per 1000.

Extract from Florists' Review, September 28, 1919:

"I have been much impressed with some of the new Cannas that I have tried this summer, and cannot refrain from mentioning two. These are The President and Snow Queen. President is by all odds the best red Canna today, larger and better than Firebird and a free bloomer; the foliage is strong and does not burn, as does that of Firebird. Those who have tried Firebird and lamented that it would not do on account of diseased foliage will rejoice to know that at last we have a Canna that is 'right.'— might have been questioned. I have heard many derogatory stories about the pioneer nursery agents, but those fellows are not with us now. Nurserymen are just as anxious to employ energetic and competent salesmen who will build up business among their customers as they are to employ competent men in the office or in the growing department. Honesty and efficiency are the cornerstones for any successful business and nurserymen realize that these virtues are just as essential in the sales department as they are in any other.

I have had considerable experience with nursery salesmen and I have found that the man who produces the greatest volume of business is the salesman who takes pride in serving his customers honestly. Why should not the nursery business be as attractive to a young man looking for a position as salesman as any other line? I believe it should be, and more so, for the nursery salesman is the means of causing more fruit to be produced and more beauty to be added to the home through the planting of trees and shrubs, all of which makes a community a better place in which to live. If the nursery business is to expand, the traveling salesman must come in for more encouragement and more protection.

The last two years have brought about a higher degree of standardization in prices and values, which, of course, is encouraging from a retailer's standpoint, and if standards are maintained with honest values, as they are in most other lines of trade, it will result in attracting more high-class salesmen, which means more planting by the public.

The future success of our business depends entirely upon making the nursery agent's job an attractive and honorable profession. We must protect him by standardizing our prices, by improving our methods and by eliminating every questionable practice that can possibly exist in the nursery business. We need the nursery salesman; he is our one and only hope. Build your business around him and it will be a success.

"It is a foregone conclusion that there will not be enough carnations to go around, and it would help the salesman if he could switch when they fail to have more reasonably priced potted offering. AGERATUM, Fraserii

We feel confident in offering Ageratum "Fraserii" to our customers that we are offering what will be one of the most valuable acquisitions to the bedding plant line in recent years, that is a blue, a decided blue, that would be continually in bloom. In our trial grounds last summer "Fraserii" attracted more attention than any other bedding plant. It only grew about eight to ten inches high and was covered the entire season with what can easily be classed as immense trusses of flowers, as many of them were over 2½ inches across, while the individual flower would be ¾ of an inch in diameter. The plant spread about 12 to 15 inches across. It can easily be used with Alternantheras as a border plant.

Being an early bloomer and dwarf, compact grower, it makes an excellent pot plant. 2-inch, $1.00 per doz.; $6.00 per 100. 3-inch, $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

that the man who produces the greatest volume of business is the salesman who takes pride in serving his customers honestly. Why should not the nursery business be as attractive to a young man looking for a position as salesman as any other line? I believe it should be, and more so, for the nursery salesman is the means of causing more fruit to be produced and more beauty to be added to the home through the planting of trees and shrubs, all of which makes a community a better place in which to live. If the nursery business is to expand, the traveling salesman must come in for more encouragement and more protection.

The last two years have brought about a higher degree of standardization in prices and values, which, of course, is encouraging from a retailer's standpoint, and if standards are maintained with honest values, as they are in most other lines of trade, it will result in attracting more high-class salesmen, which means more planting by the public.

The future success of our business depends entirely upon making the nursery agent's job an attractive and honorable profession. We must protect him by standardizing our prices, by improving our methods and by eliminating every questionable practice that can possibly exist in the nursery business. We need the nursery salesman; he is our one and only hope. Build your business around him and it will be a success.

tributes to motherhood ever penned and is seeing that this goes out with the Mothers' day packages.

This holiday has provoked more trade comment than even Christmas. The manager of still another retail establishment makes the suggestion that the growers are overlooking an opportunity to extend their business and profits when they fail to have more reasonably priced potted plants ready for sale on Mothers' day. "It is a foregone conclusion that there will not be enough carnations to go around, and it would help the salesman if he could switch when they fail to have more reasonably priced potted offering. There will be more than enough expensive potted this spring put this situation to good use by setting his daffodil bulbs out in pots. Now he can offer pots containing five or six bright plants and this novelty has been popular with the buyers. Ferns are not selling freely and the cold weather has effectively held back the promised demand for bedding stock.

There is still plenty of valley on hand. There are enough orchids, while some growers reported a drop in the cut of local roses. Rose Premier was the one exception to the general rule, there being a traceable increase in the cut of this variety. The growers state that they expect a heavy cut of Columbia within two weeks. Local violas are again plentiful, and are of much better color than was previously the case. For store decorations, dogwood blossoms are the newest item.

Various Notes.

The Bon Marche, one of the larger local department stores, has installed a cut flower and seed department on its main floor, and Irving Harris, who until recently was connected with Rosaia Bros. and previously with the Woodlawn Flower Shop, is operating this new department.

The Woodlawn Flower Shop last week featured the first of the local growers' outdoor-grown lilies of the valley, and found this novelty took well with the buyers. A number of decorations were handled, keeping this part of the force extremely busy, since the Italian garden set had to be set up three times in succession. Some nice Spanish iris is being shown, and as this becomes more plentiful there seems to be more interest aroused among the buyers.

The visit of George Beban, the Italian character actor, in his photoplay has been made the feature of special activities by Seattle florists. The stores arranged that each day some floral piece should be delivered at the theater, the shops contributing being Kenney's Home of Flowers, Hollywood Gardens, Pinehurst Floral Shop, Rosaia Bros., Felix Rosaia and the Woodlawn Flower Shop. In addition, he was the guest of the florists at lunch one day at the Seattle Yacht Club. The publicity greet Mr. Beban and present him with a floral key to the city.

Aurelio Toppono, who has been with Rosaia Bros., is now attached to the staff of the City Flower Shop. Decorations and bouquets for a double wedding proved a feature of last week's business, Ophelia and Butterfly roses, valley and greens forming the motif throughout.

William Goldsbary, of Kenney's Home of Flowers, has returned from a short business trip to Vancouver.

The Hollywood Gardens are looking forward to a good cut of all items for Mothers' day and have been doing the most extensive advertising for this event. A heavy week on funeral work is reported and, in one instance, a feature was the large number of expensive baskets sent as floral tributes, instead of sprays or designs.

The Pinchurst Floral Shop has secured fine results from featuring the new Dream tulip, a Darwin, in its windows. This is a mauve-shaded bloom and is of such a color as to blend well with almost any decoration. The heaviest week on funeral business since the opening of this shop is reported.

Better results on potted rose bushes and the best deliveries of red and pink Darwins for the season were features of the week at McCoy's. The small sizes of rose bushes were especially easy to sell. Funeral work for the week was heavy.

The Orpheum Floral Co. reports a good general business, with window displays of the smaller sizes of potted hydrangeas leading to a good business on this item.

C. Peterson is offering a novelty in the form of the purple grandiflorum rhododendron. This is a delicate purple in color and by its variance from the usual pink General Grant has been the subject of comment wherever shown.

Melby's Flower Shop reports an entirely satisfactory showing in business, with funeral work an outstanding feature. The late incoming of Easter lilies for some of the growers has proved a real boon to the retailers this year, serving to offset the falling off in the carnation cut last week, as the result of weather conditions.

Rosaia Bros. handled a number of decorations, including the roof garden, tea rooms and offices of one of the local daily newspapers which has moved into new quarters. Apple and Japanese cherry blossoms have been used freely of late in store and social decorations. George Rosaia is still at the greenhouses, where he is supervising needed spring changes. H. M.

CHARLESTON, W. VA.

The stores here are all busy with the usual early spring vegetable plant business, as well as the early bedding plant rush.

The Strand theater opened recently; decorations were by the Charleston Cut Flower & Plant Co. The work so pleased the management that they mentioned each night from the stage and made special mention in the papers as to who the decorators were. To show their appreciation further they show this firm's advertising slides without charge.

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

SERVICE FROM A STREAM.

As I am located near a large stream from which I can get a 24-inch flow of water through a terra cotta pipe, I should like to know what horsepower of dynamo that size of stream can operate at ten, fifteen, twenty and twenty-five feet of fall, respectively. What is the best kind of water wheel for this purpose, and how many feet of glass could be heated from a dynamo at the different falls mentioned? What would be the cost of water wheel, dynamo, and wiring and installing electric radiation? B. J. P.—Pa.

While a large amount of electricity could be generated by water through a 24-inch pipe, even under a head of ten feet, the cost of installing the water wheel, dynamo, heating elements, etc., would be so great as to make it prohibitive. Certainly it would not be advisable to use 24-inch terra cotta pipe, even for a head of ten feet. In order to obtain an estimate that will be in any way reliable, it would be advisable, if definite data are desired, to ask some local electrical engineer to submit estimates for the various items.

TO PIPE UNDER BENCHES

I intend to build a greenhouse, 18x20 feet. It will run east and west, and will have glass on the south side and in both ends. As I want to put in hot water heat, I should like to know how many sections of boiler would be necessary to heat the above-mentioned house.

I shall have a 3-foot bench on each side and a 7-foot bench in the middle, which will run halfway through the building. How many 1½-inch pipes will be required under the benches, or can I use 1-inch pipes? I wish to heat the house to about 60 degrees when the outside temperature is 15 degrees below zero. M. G.—Kan.

While it might vary slightly with the style of the boiler, it is generally advisable to select a boiler with five sections, having a grate about twenty-one inches in diameter.

It would be best not to use pipe smaller than 2-inch for the flows and 1½-inch for the returns, but 1¼-inch pipe will give fairly good results in the return coils. Three 2-inch flow pipes, located on the side wall plates and three feet below the ridge, will be needed. If 1½-inch pipe is used for the returns, twelve pipes in three coils of four pipes each, placing one under each of the benches, can be used. If the south side of the house is much exposed, an additional return under the south bench or on the south wall may be needed. With 1¼-inch returns fifteen pipes will be required. Aside from what is used

Expressions From Men Who Know Boilers

Get the Kroeschell First

Several years ago Mr. ——— corresponded with us in regard to the Kroeschell Hot Water Boiler, but was persuaded to install two sectional cast iron boilers which were claimed to be superior to the Kroeschell.

In the meantime we placed a number of Kroeschell Boilers in the immediate vicinity of Mr. ———, and he could not help but notice their great efficiency, and last year, while at the convention, he placed his order for his first Kroeschell. The following letter speaks for itself:

"We like the Kroeschell Boiler very much. It gives entire satisfaction, and it is so easy to fire. I will trade you the two cast iron sectional boilers for another like the Kroeschell I have." [Signed] Mr. ———, Ohio.

No More Cast Iron Boilers

I have used several different makes of boilers but none I like as well as yours.

The Kroeschell is easier to fire, takes less coal and water circulates quicker than any other boiler.

I have used two different makes of sectional boilers—no more cast iron boilers for us.

Kroeschell Replaces Cast Iron

The Kroeschell has replaced three cast iron sectional boilers, and it certainly has given entire satisfaction.

It only takes a few words to express the good quality of your boilers and they are as follows: "Of all firms handling boilers and advertising them truthfully, the party buying a boiler would have to get the Kroeschell, as you are certainly advertising nothing but facts." [Signed] Mr. ———, N. Y.

Don't Let Air Leaks Suck Your Coal Pile Up the Chimney

Wherever brick is laid there are bound to be air leaks. Give your boiler settings an overcoat of

SEALRITE

Then you will get the full benefit of the coal consumed. No air can make its way through a covering of SEALRITE to hinder combustion, no heat can escape.

SEALRITE enters the pores in the brick and the cracks in the mortar, forming a covering that remains plastic and yielding within, while hardening on the outside. It does not crack or peel.

SEALRITE is excellent also used instead of putty around window glass; as a damp-proofing material on retaining walls and cisterns it is unexcelled.

SEALRITE is guaranteed to give satisfaction wherever freedom from leakage of air, gas, heat, or water is desired.

for connecting with the boiler, about 150 feet of 2-inch, and 600 to 650 feet of 1½-inch, or 750 to 800 feet of 1¼-inch pipe, will be required.

In case a single main flow pipe connects the radiation with the boiler, it should be 3-inch, and the main return pipe should be of the same size, unless a 2-inch return is used to connect each of the coils with the boiler.

GETTING REQUIRED CAPACITY.

I wish to build a brick stack for a Metropolitan water heater, number 524. The heater has a 24½x27½-inch fire pot, and a 10-inch smoke pipe, rated at 1,600 square feet. What should be the diameter and height of such a chimney? Will this size of boiler heat two greenhouses to 50 degrees in zero weather? The houses are 20x75 feet each, one on each side of the boiler shed. My plan is to run a 3-inch pipe through the shed for the flow and return to each greenhouse and to take off 2-inch pipes to carry through the greenhouses. The return 3-inch main will be about six inches above the top of the boiler.

R. I.—Pa.

Unless the fire surface is more than usually efficient, a heater with a 10-inch smoke pipe and a grate 24½x27½ inches would not rate so high as 1,600 square feet. In fact, it would not be much above 1,200 square feet and, if soft coal is used, the actual amount of radiating surface would be limited to about 950 square feet.

The size and height of the smoke-stack will depend, to a considerable extent, upon the arrangement of the fire tubes, but considering the size of the smoke pipe and the area of the grate, a chimney twelve inches square inside and with a height of twenty-five or thirty feet above the point where the smoke pipe enters, would suffice for 950 square feet of radiation, unless there are taller buildings in the vicinity. If much more than 950 square feet of radiation is to be supplied, the diameter or height of the chimney should be increased accordingly.

If there is no glass in the sides of the greenhouses, a heater of the size mentioned would heat two, 20x75 feet, to 50 degrees in zero weather, and, of

FURNACE LINING

"Remember how we used to shut down boilers here for relining? No more now, though," said the chief to a brother engineer, "not since we discovered what PLIBRICO would do for our furnaces."

"We lined one and tried it out. Not a crack in it anywhere. Carried a whale of an overload, too."

"Now, after that first boiler has been in continuous operation for eight months—most of the time night and day—believe me, we will have nothing but PLIBRICO linings in our furnaces any more.

"Every boiler on the line is getting its PLIBRICO lining in turn. We're putting in PLIBRICO baffles, combustion arches, bridge walls and boiler door arches, too."

"Why, the fuel we save alone has pretty nearly paid for the PLIBRICO as we went along."

"You've no idea how a really tight setting saves fuel. And you don't know what a tight setting is until you have a PLIBRICO setting."

Plibrico is a plastic, easily applied monolithic furnace lining that may be used to patch up old boiler settings or to put in new settings that last three times as long as ordinary fire brick. Plibrico delivered only in steel packages of distinctive appearance as shown below. Immediate deliveries from warehouse stocks in principal cities. course, if the rating of 1,600 square feet is reliable, it would also take care of four feet of glass in each wall.

If not too long, a 3-inch main will answer for each of the houses. Either 2½ or 2-inch flow pipes may be used in the houses. The former are more desirable. It would be advisable to put in two 2½-inch or three 2-inch flows, placing one upon each side wall plate, and if a third flow is used, it should be three feet below the ridge. For the returns, use six 2-inch pipes, placing three on each wall, unless three flows are used or bottom heat is desired for the middle bench, in which case there should be two pipes in each of the three coils.

In case there is glass in the side walls, use an additional return for each thirty inches of glass on each side of the house.

BUFFALO BANQUET.

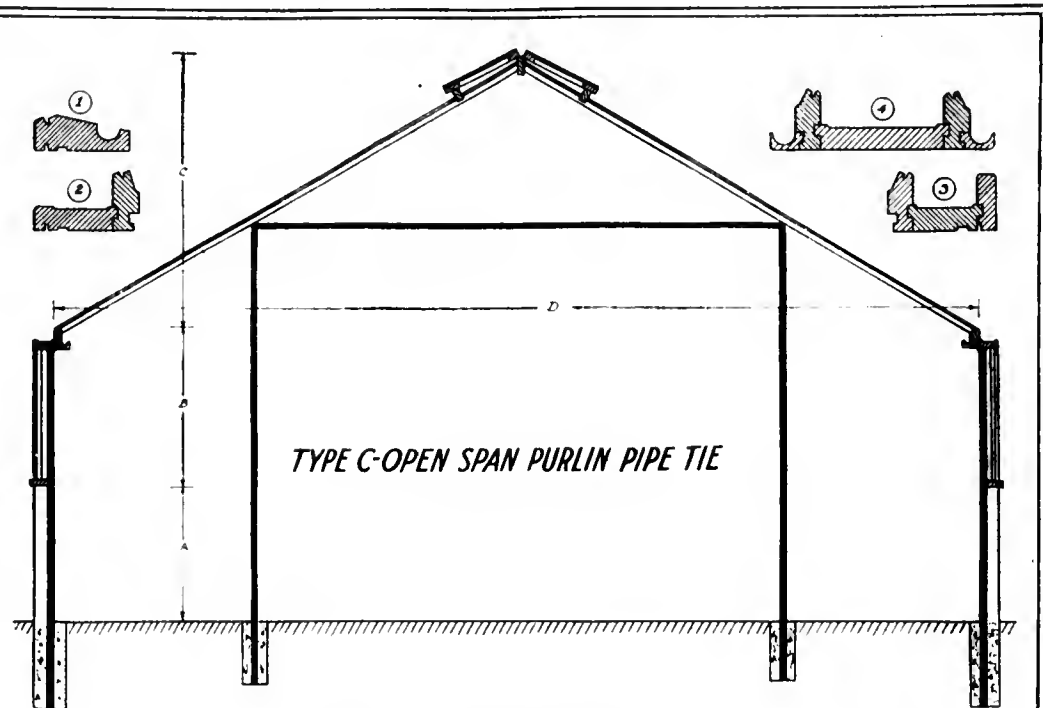

A meeting of the retailers and growers of western New York was held April 22, at the Hotel Iroquois, Buffalo. There were 206 present at the dinner. The floral decorations were supplied by the local florists and were sold at auction the next day at a tea in the hotel and the proceeds went to the American Legion.

The main speaker of the evening was J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., the secretary of the National Flower Growers' Association. He pointed out how advertising is the life of the trade and warned against cutting down on the advertising because business was good. He said that it was necessary to keep "Say It with Flowers" in the public eye in order to keep business good.

Herman Knoble, of Cleveland, urged continued advertising, pointed out the necessity of close relationship between retailers and growers and gave many practical hints for the retailers to use as means of increasing their business.

Other speakers were John H. Dunlop and George M. Geraghty, of Toronto, Ont., and J. L. Higgins, of Troy, N. Y. They told of the conditions in their respective localities. The Toronto men brought with them two new varieties of pink roses. One of them was unnamed and the other one was Frank W. Dunlop.

Attleboro, Mass.—Early in the morning of April 16, the local fire department was called to the greenhouses of William McIntyre, but the fire was nearly out before the apparatus arrived. The blaze was caused by the heating equipment and Mr. McIntyre estimates the loss at about $200.

A Popular Callahan Design

Here is a Callahan Cut-to-Fit Greenhouse that is popular with both florists and market gardeners. It is a very economical house to erect and is staunch, sturdy and good looking.

It is built in three widths which lend themselves well to convenient benching arrangement. The widths (D) are 20 ft. 6 ins., 24 ft., and 27 ft. 6 ins.

The sidewalls (A) may be of concrete or lumber of any height desired. Dimensions A and B are variable at the discretion of the buyer. Dimension C is governed by the width of the house, the pitch being 7 to 12. The detail sections shown are: (1) Single-Member Plate. (2) Two-Member Plate. (3) Side Gutter. (4) Center Gutter.

The Market.

With the weather conditions excellent, the market last week was considerably better than the week preceding. Carnations came in better, but none brought more than a fair price. The outlook for carnations for Mothers' day is only fair, but there are some who have hopes of a large supply. Sweet peas continued to arrive in great quantity, but they were still of the second grade. Easter lilies were plentiful; in fact, too much so, and it was hard to clean out stock. Callas fell off a little. Roses were fine, and still held a good price. Snapdragons arrived in great quantities, but there was no decline in the price. Gladiolus made its appearance last week and was exceptional in quality and brought a good price. Candytuft also was seen for the first time and was good. Other flowers came in generous supply. With funeral work plentiful and flowers used to a great extent, the week can be called good.

Various Notes.

With a dancing class exhibition almost every afternoon and night last week, the florists have reported that the sale of baskets was enormous. Baskets ranging from $4 to $15 were sold in numbers all during the week, as well as a good many hand bouquets of roses and other flowers.

With the return of the warmer days, thoughts have been turned to bedding plants and the demand has increased steadily during the last week. Poreh boxes, hanging baskets, large ferns and a general line of bedding plants were selling well and within the next week the height of this season will be reached. Prices are the same as last year on this stock.

With the weather conditions remaining the same, E. G. Reimers & Son Co. will, by the end of this week, be cutting some delphiniums outdoors.

The William Walker Co. has put in a house of smilax and anticipates a good supply in the future. They also have a couple of benches in clarkias, which, they say, have been put to good use in box work.

The Market.

Stock was extremely short all last week. Anticipating a big demand for Mothers' day, the growers have tried to hold back everything they could. As an example, one grower, who has been cutting 4,000 carnations a day, brought 1,700 to market Friday, April 29, and none Saturday. The market was about depleted Saturday morning, April 30. A retailer who wanted fifty roses was unable to get them. It was not alone the holding back of stock, but a heavy run of orders every day that caused the clean-up. Carnations went up in price and all prices for Mothers' day will be still higher.

Various Notes.

Miss Mayme Klein, who has been bookkeeper and saleswoman for Arthur Newell for the last eight years, was married to Dr. Roy Sansom the evening of April 30, in Central Christian church. The bride carried a shower bouquet of roses, orchids and valley. The four bridesmaids carried baskets of Butterfly roses with ribbons to match. Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the bride's home. Dr. and Mrs. Sansom will make their home at Norcatur, Kansas, where the groom has built up a practice.

The Alpha Floral Co. has five acres of peonies on its farm south of the city. Between sixty and seventy per cent of the buds were killed by the freeze two weeks ago. About the same percentage of the Darwin tulips were killed. There were about 75,000 of these plants.

A. F. Barbe has struck gas on his property near Sixteenth street and Lawn avenue, at a depth of 365 feet. The pressure is 120 pounds. The gas is being piped to the boiler room. Although the flow has not yet been determined it is believed to be sufficient for heating the plant. This is the second well found in this vicinity.

Economizing has become so tiresome that some of those who have money to spend are letting it go more freely. This sentiment has been expressed several times lately by customers of E. A. Humfeld when orders for social affairs have been given. The last two weeks have been as busy in this store as any two ever known. Entertainments have been a big feature of the business.

Last week the merchants of Kansas City, Kan., had a "dollar day." Reductions were made on various lines of merchandise for the purpose of stimulating business. Mrs. T. A. Moseley sold regular $2 boxes of cut flowers for $1 and a great many plants at the same rate. About twenty-five per cent more business than usual was done. As the sale was on Monday, April 25, results were not as good as they might have been for the florists. The next sale will be held later in the week.

August Luther is well prepared for the planting season. He anticipates heavy work in this line. Many orders are in.

Richard Jarrett has been quite ill for the last week with an affection of the ear.

J. G. Eggleston is cutting a fine crop of snapdragon. He is planting a great many asters, most of them American Beauty.

W. J. Barnes has the best variety of plants he has ever had for Mother's day. He expects to do a record business.

C. T. Rinehardt has been cutting choice snapdragon for a week. His sweet peas are nearly gone. Calls for perennials have been numerous of late.

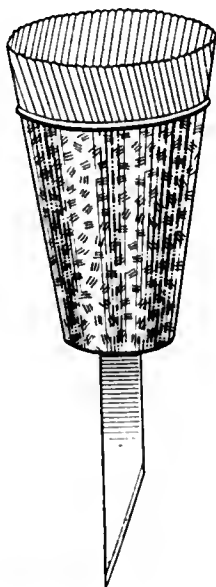

The William L. Roek Flower Co. has taken out about 2,000 Shawyer roses and will replace them with Ophelia. The Shawyer bushes were all sold at the retail store Friday, April 29, sold 40 cents apiece or three for $1.

Hydrangeas will be the main plants offered by the Pinehurst Floral Co. this week. Everything else in season has been cleaned up. There will be a good cut of roses and carnations.

A meeting of the publicity committee of the Florists' Club was held Thursday afternoon, April 28, in L. R. Bohannon's office to decide on advertising for Mother's day. A large display advertisement was run in the newspapers Sunday, May 1. Several 3-column, 4-inch ads were run in the papers, April 27 to 30. The committee has bought one of the large "Say It with Flowers" signs and will place it on the property of A. A. Ackerson, Van Horn road and North boulevard. Mr. Ackerson's greenhouse is on the main road between Kansas City and Independence, a prominent place for the sign.

Samuel Murray is making a specialty of gloxinias for Mothers' day. The plants came in several weeks ahead and have been selling well. Six were sold at the noon hour Friday, April 29. One customer has had a plant two weeks and no blooms have fallen off. Another bought a plant a month ago and it is still blooming.

GREENHOUSES

KING semi-iron houses are tied together from eave to eave.

“The More Expensive It Gets To Build A Greenhouse The Cheaper It Is To Build A Good One”

As a parting shot to one of Fritz Bahr's recent bits of philosophy in The Florists' Exchange, were the words of this advertisement's title.

Haven't the pleasure of knowing Fritz, but he sure has the corn-fed brand of common sense.

When materials were low it didn't amount to so much when a cheap house went to pieces and had to be replaced.

But with today's cost, it would mean a lot.

But that isn't all—the present price of cypress is such, that an all-cypress house actually costs close to what one of our Half Iron Framers does.

Because of exactly the same reason, The Half Iron Frame costs but little less than The Full Iron Frame.

So the man who puts his money into a poor construction, pays a high price for the privilege of buying something of short life, when a little more added to the expenditure would give him a permanent house and a lasting investment.

The more expensive it gets to build a greenhouse, the cheaper it is to build a good one. You know we go anywhere for business, or to talk business.
